During the past six weeks there has been a rush of funeral work. It has been a problem with many of the local trade to secure enough flowers to make the numerous floral designs which have been ordered. Now that the demand for funeral work is much less than it has been most of the florists report an abundant supply of Carnations and 'Mums, where at the beginning of the rush Dahlias were about the only flowers obtainable.

Everyone is making large preparations for the Thanksgiving Day Trade as they feel that the coming of peace and the return of the boys will give people more cause for rejoicing than they have ever had in former years. Nothing brightens a home more than flowers, and no doubt few will be able to resist procuring some of the blooms which are displayed attractively in all of the florists' windows.

Notes

Park Garden and Flower Shop is cutting many splendid 'Mums; Chadwick are especially fine this year. The houses are devoted entirely to Carnations.

Julius Reck has so much funeral work that he has trouble to get flowers enough to meet the demand. George Reck of this firm is at present stationed at Fort Monroe, Va., while his brother, John R., is first class Sergeant in France, in Motor Car Co. 312.

Robert Hawkins says that funeral trade still keeps all hands rushing. He is looking forward to the Thanksgiving Day trade with a great deal of interest as he feels that it will be bigger than ever before.

James Horan & Son have moved from their temporary quarters on Broad to the new building which has been erected on the old site on Main st. They have been paid for all the trouble of moving, for the new store is very attractive. The light gray color scheme makes a fitting background for the bright flowers with which the store is filled. The cases and fixtures are also new.

James E. Beach has a heavy crop of Carnations of which he is disposing fast as they come out. His 'Mums are also in their glory and there is quite a demand for them. Several service flags and an immense police commissioner emblem, in flowers, were made here recently.

George Pflomm reports that due to the coal shortage he has closed his house for the Winter, with the exception of the conservatory, which is located about the store. However, he is abundantly supplied with flowers, as he receives a large shipment every day. Business is very good at this store.

John Reck & Son recently designed a casket cover of pink Roses. They made several other large pieces for the same funeral.

Herthal informs us that all hands are busy preparing for the Thanksgiving Day trade.

The New York Florist receives its immense shipments daily from New York and Green's Farms, which are disposed of in the busy Main st. store. F. E. B.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—John Ernst, local landscape gardener, is planning to establish a nursery on the Janesville rd. near Root Creek, for which purpose he has purchased 12½ acres of land on the Janesville rd. He paid $5500 for the land.

Business Difficulty

Henry W. Kummer, as president of the Kummer Floral Co., 1261 Hopkins st., Milwaukee, Wis., has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the U. S. Court, listing liabilities at $12,426 and assets $11,13 exemptions on $660.

Cold weather will soon be here and the shipping of plants will be difficult. If you order at once they will go through without danger of freezing. We have a splendid lot of KENTIAS to offer, in both single and combination, of a quality and finish that cannot be excelled.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

The only son of Rudolph Virus, florist of Chicago, Ill., is with the Colors in France.

George Reck, of Julius Reck, Bridgeport, Conn., is at present stationed at Fort Monroe, Va., while his brother, John R., is a first class sergeant in France, in Motor Car Co. 312.

Sergt. John W. Smalley, Fort Wayne, Ind., brother of Allen County Agricultural Agent H. R. Smalley, who is with Co. M, 353d Infantry, has been awarded the distinguished service cross for heroism in action on the French Front, near Vilcey, on Sept. 12, 1918.

I. F. Matson, formerly with Gibson Bros., Newport, R. I., and just before his enlistment in the service employed by Chas. Uttley of Harrisburg, Pa., has been promoted to sergeant in the Oriental detail of the 21st Field Artillery, now in France. Further details will be found in the Newport newsletter.

Three sons of M. J. Van Leeuwen, manager of the Continental Nurseries, at Franklin, Mass., have been with the United States Navy since the beginning of the war; Gerard W., as first boatswain's mate on the U. S. S. Starling; Matthew J., at the Newport Training Station, and Harold A., as first class baker on the U. S. S. Bentenzord. At the time of their enlistment each was under the draft age, so volunteered for the service.

Out of a total greenhouse force of 14 we have six left but are making out finely. The other boys are all "over there." If there is any florist who has turned out more men for the U. S. we have yet to hear from him, but we surely will be glad to get them home again. George Legg, son of R. H. Legg, of this firm, has the honor of being the youngest sergeant in the U. S. Army. He enlisted about 16 months ago, a 16 year old boy, in the 111th Machine Gun Company, and has seen most of the severe fighting in the last few months. Though we have not heard from him in two months we are hoping he is still safe. We hear from all the boys occasionally and will surely smile when we get them back again. H. G. Treer, florist of Manasquan, has two sons in France; one was severely wounded a few weeks ago, but is doing well and is moving about again.

T. NEWMAN.

Captain George Stanley Butcher, killed in action Oct. 27. See text.

"A glorious death is his
Who for his country falls."

We regret to learn that Wm. Grantham, formerly with Weeber & Don, New York City, was killed in action in France on Oct. 17. Further details will be found in the New York Seed Trade Notes.

Corporal Howard R. Votaw, of Chicago, was killed in action in October, we are sorry to hear. Further details will be found in the Chicago Newsletter.

We are sorry to learn that Lieut. Gordon Boyd, stepson of Chas. Dickinson, of the well known Chicago seed firm of Arthur Dickinson Co., was killed in action in France on Oct. 5.

Captain George Stanley Butcher

The members of the trade in New York City and vicinity will regret to learn of the death of Captain George Stanley Butcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Butcher of Bellevue ave., Montclair, N. J., who was killed in action, in France, on Oct. 27.

Captain Butcher was only 23 years of age at the time of his death. As a member of the 111th Machine Gun Battalion

Sergeant William Sibel

See obituary notes, issue Nov. 23, p. 825

he rose in rank from a private and was granted his commission only 18 days before he was killed. His last promotion was granted for gallantry in action and he was mentioned by his chief officer, Major M. E. Tyding, for his work in driving into the enemy's lines and holding on for several hours until other American and French units were able to force the Germans to surrender. On the day of his death, Captain Butcher was notified that a neighboring company was in a difficult situation and needed assistance. He took it upon himself to advance alone to survey the situation, and during a conference with the officers of the other company he and several other officers of the party were killed by a shell. He has been recommended for a Distinguished Service Cross.

Captain Butcher was born at Chatham, N. J., and came to Montclair with his parents in 1907. He attended the public schools there and graduated from the high school in 1914. Later he was connected with the retail florist business the Magasin de Fleurs, at 201 Bellevue ave., established by his father. He also saw service on the Mexican border.

(The following letter was received by Chas. C. Littlefield, head of the flower seed dept. of Peter Henderson & Co., New York City. Mr. Feeney, before joining the Colors, was Mr. Littlefield's assistant.)

Only a short note to tell you that, alas, the Huns got me. They let me get away with it in four pushes and in the fifth they caught me good and proper with some of their iron (high explossives). Was just about to follow on at a recent push when the shell landed quite near to me. I remember that my leg gave from under me, and my mouth felt queer. I laid right down but retained consciousness all the while. I had been hit twice in the right leg and once in the right jaw. I was relayed to the relief station, bandaged and kept on going till I was operated on somewhere in France. The pieces of iron were removed, and here I am happily in "Blighty."

I am in a real U. S. Hospital in Dartford, England. The people are all very good and we are far away from any of the shells. I am getting along very well; my jaw is opened up but is coming along very well. My leg is healing wonderfully and when I get out of bed I will know better how easy it will be to walk. The knee is not fractured so I think I will eventually be able to manipulate the leg.

The present events pertaining to the war are very encouraging. I hope for better news yet. I am tired out very easily so will call this finish. I send my best regards to all at the store and will be glad to hear from anyone.

With best good wishes, etc.,

WALTER J. FEENEY.

Base 37, England, Nov. 1.

The extract which follows from a letter written by a Canadian soldier who has been on the front for nearly four years, expresses fairly well the feelings of our men also "over there," who have seen active service. Bear in mind this letter was written Nov. 1, at which time there was no thought existing in any one's mind that within ten days an armistice would be signed. He writes: "The good news that has been flowing in the last week helps to chase the gloomy feeling away and makes a fellow feel it won't be long now—but, say, haven't the Allies been pasting it to the Boches recently? Today we hear that Turkey has turned up her toes and Austria is following suit quickly—it is only a matter of time now and the 'Brute' of them all will have to cash in his chips. Oh, say! Things are coming along nicely now. I feel so jubilent that I fancy I can already hear the tugs pulling the great liner away from her berth and bearing this little child back home again."

Iron Rations

The story of the lost battalion—of how they resisted the Hun for five days under the most severe circumstances and how during this trying time they lived upon their iron rations—has brought many inquiries as to what iron rations are.

The ration is a mixture of Wheat and meat dried and ground to a powder, and cakes of chocolate, put up in a small tin to fit the soldier's pocket and yet supply him with three meals. Each ration weighs only twelve ounces and is put up so as to be proof against poison gas, water, etc. The soldier's are not permitted to open the emergency ration except on order from an officer or in dire extremity. These rations are meant to sustain life when a man is caught, as was Major Whittlesey's Battalion, or otherwise cut off from their food supply. The meat and Wheat powder in the tin can be eaten dry if no water is available or with water makes a palatable gruel or soup. When allowed to thicken it can be fried, supplying a warm, nourishing meal. The chocolate can either be made into a drink or eaten in a cake.

To collect the machinery necessary to put up the rations would, in ordinary times, have taken months. However, on the spur of serving the army, the special machinery was collected by Armour & Co., and in a little over a month they were producing the rations at the rate of 12,000 a day. During the last few months they have been supplying them at the rate of 60,000 tins a day. This concern has just completed its first order for 1,000,000 tins, and is now working on the second million. The Government has just recently made a request for bids for three millions additional rations.

Life Incomplete Without It

Paul K. Murphy, formerly manager of B. F. Barr & Co., Lancaster, Pa., writes from abroad under date of Oct. 22, where he is stationed with Ambulance Co. 111, 103d Sanitary Train, A. E. F.: "I cannot express how much I enjoy my EXCHANGE, and to me my life would not be complete without it over here. It has been coming along O. K., having followed me faithfully on different sectors for the past six months."

Register Your Liberty Bonds

The U. S. Treasury Department is urging holders of Liberty Loan bonds to have them registered, thus protecting the owners from loss, as well as the trouble of clipping coupons and having them redeemed. Interest on registered bonds is paid by check, mailed by the Treasury Department to the owner twice yearly. Full information as to registration may be obtained by the bond holder from the bank with which he does business.

The American Rose Society

Department of Rose Registration

The following varieties have been presented for registration and unless objections are filed with the secretary within three weeks of this publication, the registration will become permanent:

By M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass.:

Nokomis.—Class: Wichuraiana; Parentage, Wichuraiana x Comte de Raimbaud. Decription: Climber, with light glossy green foliage; hardy and free of growth. Flower larger than Lady Gay or Dorothy Perkins, of dark rose pink color, in clusters of 25 or 35 blooms, double and slightly fragrant. Superior for its hardiness, vigor, foliage and size of bloom.

By The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.:

Victor.—Class: hybrid tea; Parentage, Ophelia, x Killarney Brilliant. Description: Upright, strong, free growth, with large, deep green foliage. Flower large, deep rose or often red in color, semi-double. The bud is extremely long and the flower has a strong fragrance; full petalage and a good keeper. The variety is similar to Killarney Brilliant, but shows an improvement in size.

Golden Rule.—Class: hybrid tea; Parentage, Ophelia x Sunburst. Description: This variety is similar to Ophelia in all characteristics except that it is a clear yellow in color. It is a stronger grower than Sunburst.

Mme. Butterfly.—Class: hybrid tea; Parentage, Ophelia Sport. Description: This variety is similar to Ophelia in all characteristics except that its color is greatly intensified.

Foreign Trade Opportunities

The Dept. of Commerce, Washington, D. C., Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reports as follows:

27690.—An agency, on a commission basis, is desired by a man in France for the sale of agricultural machinery. Correspondence should be in French or Italian. Reference.

27634.*—A Belgian firm in India wishes to secure an agency for the sale of engines, pumps, motor cars cycles and accessories, tractors, and agricultural implements. Payment will be made through local bank. References.

MACON, GA.—Final returns for the Fourth Liberty Loan show that the industrial division, of which Dan C. Horgan, proprietor of the Idle Hour Nurseries, was chairman, saw 5000 persons and raised $18,750. There were 25 teams in all, and Mr. Horgan's team obtained more than one-fifth of the total subscriptions. He was ably assisted in the work by M. A. Michael.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

These Are Different Days

A new note in all advertising to meet the changes which the past four years have brought about. The appeal to be along the lines of the new order of things which, undoubtedly, is going to have a lasting effect in many directions.

Profitable advertising is that which is as up-to-date in its endeavor as the news which runs alongside it in the next column.

Individuality is needed, for the importance of making one's appeal for business in a particular manner, so as to arrest attention, cannot be over-estimated.

We confess to a liking for peppermints and, because we believe that all advertising men should make their purchases on every possible occasion from those who advertise, we ask for "Life Savers" every time.

One day, however, the storekeeper had run out of them, but had another brand not quite so freely advertised. We took this different kind, just for once, we promised ourselves, and found that both brands were just peppermints—one equally as good as the other.

You must admit that it is a particularly desirable state of affairs when you can get folks to buy your goods when others of a similar nature and equal quality are on the market, just because you have educated them to come to you rather than go to the other fellow.

That is one of advertising's missions.

This same thought also applies to your trade advertising, which should be set to work in a similar manner if a lasting effect is to be accomplished; for, after all, whether Jim Jones orders his seeds, bulbs, plants, or what not, from you or someone else is to be largely determined on whether your name confronts him mentally when he is ready to order, through having become familiar with it because of its regular appearance on the advertising pages of his favorite trade paper.

You can educate Jim Jones to buy from you in just the same way as the constant users of "Life Savers" have been educated to ask for that favorite peppermint.

"Kindly discontinue our Geranium ad. Booked to capacity for months to come. Results very gratifying. Cotter-Granger Co., Jamestown, N. Y."

"I feel like a man marooned on a desert island without my copy of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE. — F. W. Fletcher, Rosalind Gardens, Orlando, Fla."

YOURS FOR A BRIGHT CHRISTMAS

Plants for the Holidays

Prepare now for Christmas. There is going to be a big demand for plants this year. The war is over and there is joy in every home; your customers will want fine plants to decorate their festive boards and to make presents. There has been a scarcity of help the past year and many growers had to close some of their houses; a great many places closed up for good which, no doubt, will make good stock scarce. We have a very fine stock of plants and will give you good value for your money. We recommend the placing and shipping of orders early, as there is no telling what the weather or railroad conditions will be later on.

CYCLAMEN. We have a very fine lot of this choice Christmas plant in 5½-in. pots, in bud and bloom, $9.00, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

POINSETTIAS. 4-in. pots, $3.60 per doz.; 5½-in. pots, tall, 2 flowers to a plant, $6.00 and $9.00 per doz.

SOLANUM. Jerusalem Cherries. Bushy plants, full of berries, 6-in. pots, $7.20 and $9.00 per doz. 7-in. pots, very heavy, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

PRIMULA Obconica. 5-in. pots, $4.00 per doz.

BEGONIA Luminosa. 5-in. pots, $4.00 per doz.

FERNS. Our ferns are very fine this year, and we will give you good stock.

Wall Gardens

This phase of gardening has much to commend itself, insofar as it invariably presents a pronounced utilitarian, as well as an esthetic feature. Despite this fact, wall gardens are so rarely seen that when we do encounter one, made on right lines and of utility and beauty, we are led to wonder why more of this kind of work is not done. It cannot be said that the cost of making such a garden is prohibitive, for soil and stones are rarely common elements in the land. The market value, also, of the plants needed for the wall is so slight as not to be considered, while the usefulness of such a wall, rightly placed, more than offsets the cost of construction. There is one reason perhaps which, more than any other, answers our question; namely, the lack of foresight and a preconceived plan of operation in the laying out of grounds, large and small.

How often it happens that the grading of a new property is placed with an incompetent person who views the work from the crudest standpoint (that of getting it done as quickly as possible) and hence misses the subtle features which if seen and brought out, would add so much more to the interest and beauty of the surroundings. Sometimes a rather sharp grade is encountered either near the environs of the house or at some other point where, instead of the usual severe (hard to maintain) grass slope, a dry retaining wall so built as to accommodate flowering plants would serve a double purpose and with less expense to the owner in the upkeep. Terrace walls, especially those of low height, could more often be constructed on the dry wall plan (rather than with mortar and cement) which would enable the plantsman to arrange a bright floral effect where least expected and where by reason of the conspicuous position would be best seen and appreciated. Not quickly would we forget the sight of such a charming assembly of wall plants, as is shown in our illustration, when in turning a curve of the path we come suddenly upon the scene. The splendid health of the plants growing in the wall tells us at a glance that its construction was somewhat near right, that the builder had in mind what is often forgotten, the principle that the wall must be made for the plant and not the plant for the wall.

As is seen in the picture, the wall has a decided tilt backwards, which not only makes it safe and strong, but also affords a better opportunity for the moisture from rain or irrigation to reach the roots of each plant. This is a very important point to be considered if we would have a successful wall garden, for, while generally speaking wall plants can stand considerable drought when forced they are put to it, moisture, nevertheless, in the growing season insures us a higher percentage of flowers from them.

The chief season of bloom in a wall garden is the spring, but where the wall is of considerable length and proportions, a good effect can be maintained throughout the season.

For the months of April to July we have in quick succession the following plants:

Alonis vernalis	*Arabis alpina
Anemone (Hepatica)	Aster alpina
Pulsatilla	Helianthemum vulgare
Draba pumila and tectorum	Pulmonaria angustifolia
Saxifraga cordifolia	Tiarella cordifolia
Phlox sublata	*Aubretia (in variety)
" amoena	*Veronica montana
" divaricata	V. rupestris
Iberis sempervirens	*Dianthus plumarius
Saponaria oxymoides	Ajuga reptans
Alyssum saxatile	*Cerastium argenteum

We might, in some open seasons and where very protected, include the Wallflower (Cheiranthus), but unfortunately it is an uncertain item in this country, and at the best is only biennial.

For the period covered by July, August and September, we shall have to content ourselves with a lesser number, those available being:

Campanula carpatica	Lathyrus latifolius
" C. carpatica alba	Veronica Hendersonii
Gaillardia grandiflora	*Plumbago larpentæ
*Helianthemum perfoliatum roseum	*Sedum spectabile
	S. kamtschaticum
Glaucium Fischeri	Callirhoe involucrata
*Geum atrosanguineum	Stokesia cyanea
*Heuchera brizoides	*Statice latifolia and some few others
*Santolina incana

It might here be said that although the list of plants may seem small compared to what is available for a perennial garden, yet, unless the wall space is extensive enough to use a large assortment, it will be far better to confine ourselves to the few best kinds (those marked with an asterisk (*) are the best) using a number of plants of the one kind in irregular masses to gain a satisfying effect rather than a medley of plants scattered over the same space.

Attractive wall garden

Such bulbs as the following are always welcome additions to the planting, and materially lengthen the season of bloom:

Snowdrops	Narcissus triandrus
Crocus	N. Bulbocodium
Chionodoxa	Fritillaria
Jonquils

These, of course, are not to be considered in a competitive light, but rather as supplementary to the main planting.

In the more shaded and moist sections of the wall, a few of the hardy ferns might well have a place. Such kinds as will be best suited; for their foliage alone they are most desirable.

Polypodium vulgare	Aspidium acrostichoides
Adiantum pedatum	A. spinulosum

Fruit Trees for Devastated France

Novel Christmas cards are being sold for 75c. each by the Bird and Tree Club of New York, which turns the money over to the American Committee for Devastated France to be spent for young fruit trees to replace the orlhards destroyed by the Germans. These cards, which are painted by Rachel Robinson Elmer, tell the recipient that a tree has been planted for him or her in memory of the men who fell in battle. On them is printed the poem, "Trees," by Joyce Kilmer, the young American poet, who was killed on the battlefield. They are for sale by Mrs. Goodrich Smith, treasurer of the club, at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, and Miss Henrietta O. Jones, executive secretary, at 230 W. 105th st.

Memorial Trees for Soldiers

The American Forestry Ass'n has issued a statement which says that thousands of memorial trees will be planted next Spring to commemorate our soldiers who died in the war. Already the Governors of several states and the mayors of many cities have approved the plans and expressed their desire to carry them out. In some places steps have already been taken to plant "Victory Boulevards" with such trees, which it is suggested shall bear small indestructible tablets giving the names of soldiers. An "Avenue of the Allies" is being considered for the District of Columbia and a Pershing Boulevard for Chicago. If longlived trees such as Oaks, Elms and Sycamores be chosen for planting the plan should make a wide popular appeal, because of its ready adaptability, its novelty and its lower cost than that of commemorative statues of bronze and marble.

This idea appears to be a development of the one presented at the Chicago convention last June of the American Association of Nurserymen by J. Edward Moon of the Wm. H. Moon Co. of Morrisville, Pa. As originally outlined it included all men in the service; as now crystallized and applied to only those men who died for world liberty it should make an even stronger appeal. For if, as Mr. Moon said, Morrisville with all its wealth of trees can provide space to plant a tree for each man who joined the colors, villages, towns and cities less liberally planted, should certainly find room for a tree to commemorate each of its dead heroes.

Autumn's Chemistry

[This may seem an unusual article for the nursery page, but since it presents the subject of Autumn colors in a novel way we reprint it as a stimulus to thought.—ED.]

Autumn, with its brightly colored foliage, its brilliant leaves being fast whipped into the air by every gust of wind that blows, appeals no more strongly to the lover of the artistic than to the scientist. The mechanism of tthe tree is one of the wonders of all nature. The leaf is one of the most marvelous food factories of which we know.

Ever since the close of Summer the process of preparation for Winter has been going on. All through the growing season the leaves have been busy making food necessary for growth. This has been done by combining carbon with hydrogen and oxygen supplied by the water and the air, and with various minerals absorbed by the roots. As Winter approaches and the work of the leaves nears its end, the food which they have accumulated is sent back to the body of the tree. The remaining substances in the cells of the leaf contain the yellow bodies which give them the prevailing Autumn color.

Such trees as our Oregon Dogwood, however, store sugar prodigally and in greater quantities than is needed for food. It is this substance in combination with other superfluous chemicals which produces the brilliant reds which make the Dogwood glorious and add brilliancy to the Maple and the Oak. The Woodbine typifies another phase of highly complicated and intensely interesting process.

To the artist the falling leaf of the deciduous tree is a thing of beauty: to the small boy whose chore it is to rake the garden it is only a nuisance; to the

THE FLORISTS EXCHANGE

A Weekly Medium of Interchange for Florists, Nurserymen, Seedsmen and the Trade in General

Exclusively a Trade Paper

Published every Saturday by the A. T. De La Mare Company, Inc., Printers and Publishers, 438 to 448 West 37th St., New York. A. T. De La Mare, president and managing editor; A. L. L. Dorey, secretary; David Touzeau, treasurer. The address of the officers is the address of this paper. Short Address—P. O. Box 100 Times Square Station, New York. Telephone, Greeley 80, 81, 82.

Registered Cable Address: Florex Newyork

CHICAGO: Our office here is in the charge of James Morton. Letters should be addressed: The Florists' Exchange, 66 East Randolph St. (Second Floor). Telephone, Randolph 35.

This current issue, it is intended, will go into the mails Friday night, Thursday being a holiday. In connection with this matter of delivery to subscribers it is confidently hoped, now we are returning to normal, that their weekly copy will soon be reaching them as regularly as in the days before April, 1917.

Those who aspire should devote thirty minutes of each day, in quiet, to consideration of the Ways and Means of improving their business and taking themselves out of the Rut.

The National War Garden Commission of Washington, D. C., says that there will be more "victory gardens" (until now called "war gardens") next year than ever. See Gardeners' Conference report in the wide measure columns, this issue.

We are informed that commercial advice and relief will freely be extended by The National Association of Credit Men to the business of any soldier or sailor which may require it during the owner's absence with the colors. See "Soldiers and Sailors' Credit Relief."

No British Tax on Flowers

The idea of placing a Luxury Tax, which, among other articles mentioned, would affect flowers, we understand from our British correspondent has been abandoned in that Kingdom for the present. Our correspondent adds: "Of course the Whiskey tax is still continued, so you had better give us a wide berth, as the stock is limited and the strength considerably reduced."

Bituminous Storage Limit Off

All storage restrictions on bituminous coal have been removed by the United States Fuel Administration in conformity to the action of the War Industries Board in cancelling its preferential industries list. Anthracite coal is not affected, however, by the ruling of the Fuel Administration. Every industry in the country now may store as much bituminous coal as desired or obtainable, as the action of the War Industries Board removes the necessity for the Fuel Administration to distinguish longer among different classes of industrial plants.

"Our recommendation is that we put the best face possible on what is but a temporary situation one that will pass with the swiftness of a Midsummer's mist as soon as victory has crowned our arms. It is so much relief not having to regard present conditions as a fixture to be indefinitely endured that really our present trials should seem of the lightest in comparison to what they might have been."—Extract from an editorial, issue of Sept. 14.

When this paragraph was written it was with the strong conviction, obtained through careful and continuous study of the progress of the war that the enemy countries would shortly be brought to their knees.

Scarcely eight weeks elapsed between the writing of that paragraph and the signing of the armistice.

And the bars to "Full Steam Ahead" are already being let down in every direction. This issue gives a number.

United War Veterans Association

On Nov. 29, at the Hotel Astor, New York, it is intended to establish a permanent organization to comprise the veterans of all the wars in which the United States has participated. As indicated, the name of the new association is likely to be that of the "United War Veterans Association." A soldier's association was sometime ago established in Canada and Great Britain. As the membership includes only those engaged in the European War, the title adopted is that of the "Great War Veterans Association" and an official floral emblem has already been adopted.

A floral emblem for this American association, which may include two, three or four millions of members, is in order.

Who will be the successful designer?

Costs Will Not Down

In but few if any of the items with which the florist, nurserymen or seedsmen have to do, need there be any definite cost reductions looked for. Labor especially, one of our greatest factors, will undoubtedly continue high in price with the demand greater than the supply. The price of coal, too, will remain high. For these reasons we urge upon our readers to scrutinize their incomings and outgoings most carefully, and to see to it that they obtain a substantial increase for whatever they sell, commensurate with the times through which we are passing.

People have been educated to pay more money—expect to pay more—and we might as well secure the benefits to be derived from those higher prices, which are really necessary to our continuance in business. Roughly speaking, the advances in nearly every direction since 1914 are ranging today from 60 to over 100 per cent. and we in common with all other lines must pay these advances. It is quite right, therefore, that our lines should demand and obtain compensatory figures for all that which they handle. Unless we do so we will find ourselves working for nothing or for mere sustenance, this latter inexcusable in this day and at this time.

There is more money in circulation than ever before in our history brought about through the almost prodigal distribution of money.

With the signing of the armistice and the unconfined joy demonstrated at the cessation of hostilities through the stoppage put to the loss of thousands upon thousands of valuable lives, came to many as further comfort, the belief that a decrease in cost of material in every direction would immediatley make itself manifest.

To those who indulged in this thought that almost immediately they were going to be called upon to pay less for everything needed in their daily life, as well as for labor, coal, and other material required in their commercial walks, it will come as a disappointment that increases practically all along the line are still continuing. The War Labor Board, into whose hands has been placed adjudication of wage demands from scores of different sources, still continues to make substantial increases to the wage earners who have put their case into its hands; perhaps one is sometimes impelled to think not so much on the merit of the case as to degree of skill required, etc., as on the principle that every working man must have a certain wage in order to be able to live.

After the cessation of the Civil War and for some years following prices continued to mount; perhaps the cost of labor and material was at its greatest height three years after that war closed; thence prices began to decline, this drop being accentuated by the great panic of 1873. But ours was then a small population and immigration was bringing us hundreds of thousands of cheap workers every year. Now there is slight likelihood of financial panic ensuing at any time to cause a decline in prices; capital is under better control and erratic speculation will also be under supervision. All countries call for reconstruction, need their men, therefore immigration will be light.

In the process of reconstruction now going on thousands will be dropped from war industries and re-absorbed into civil industries, working for less money, too. But the wages of the Union employee, the men who control manufacturing labor will not suffer.

The war has brought the workman into his own and he is likely to remain better paid. He will be a greater factor than ever; his patronage will be sought after as never before; he is a good spender and provider; those of us who appreciate his buying capacity will make no mistake in showing him how to increase his pleasures in the home through the free use of flowers.

On Nov. 18, Secretary of Agriculture D. F. Houston signed the provisions of the Revised Plant Quarantine, as issued Aug. 29, 1918, by C. L. Marlatt, Chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., but a copy of which only came into the hands of The Florists' Exchange in time for publication in the issue of Sept. 28, 1918, and to that issue we would refer readers who desire to refresh their memory, publishing here simply a list of the plants, seeds and other stock which remain unaffected by this decree.

Regulation 2 provides for the unrestricted entry of two groups of plants, namely (1) fruits, vegetables, cereals, and other plant products imported for food purposes; and (2) field, vegetable and flower seeds.

Regulation 3 provides, under compliance with the conditions of the subsequent regulations, for the importation of five groups of plants as follows:

(1) Lily bulbs, Lily of the Valley, Narcissus, Hyacinths, Tulips, and Crocus, free from balls of soil or earth.
(2) Fruit stocks, seedlings, cuttings, scions, and buds of fruits for reproduction purposes.
(3) Rose stocks for reproduction purposes, including Manetti, Multiflora, Briar Rose, and Rosa Rugosa.
(4) Nuts, including palm seeds, for oil or reproduction purposes.
5) Seeds of fruit, forest, ornamental, and shade trees, seeds of deciduous and evergreen ornamental shrubs, and seeds of hardy perennial plants.

These groups of plants and seeds under regulations 2 and 3 include the plants and seeds which were represented as essential to the floriculture and horticulture of this country, namely, the field, vegetable, and flower seeds, and fruit stocks, cuttings, scions, etc., and Rose stocks for reproduction purposes.

The commercial importation of all other stocks is absolutely prohibited.

We have previously made all the comments we care to make on this special legislation. That it may ultimately prove to the benefit of American nurserymen must be our hope.

Express Rates Raised

The general increase in the express rates recently announced by the Director General of Railroads will amount to 16c. or 17c. per 100 lbs. to points east of the Mississippi River and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers. To all other points of the country the merchandise rate will be increased some 10c. to 15c. per 100 lbs. The reason for these increases are given as being necessary to meet the recent raises in wages to employees.

Ban on Holiday Buying Lifted

The Counsel of National Defense has lifted its ban in connection with the holiday buying, in the desire to give a national impetus to the business of those formerly engaged in the production of holiday material and holiday trade. This decision will provide work for many of the people who until recently were engaged in the manufacture of munitions. It should also give a wonderful impetus to the flower industry, as there can be now no reproach thrown at people who prefer to spend money in their purchase.

All Building Bars Down

On Nov. 13 an order was issued by the War Industries Board at Washington removing sundry restrictions on building, but since then and within the past few days all restrictions upon non-war construction have been removed. This means that so far as all the building enterprises of the various industries we represent are concerned, they can now be proceeded with without restriction. Additionally the War Industries Board is seeking to assist contractors and others in the development of building operations of every section and everywhere throughout the country. It is evident that we are on the edge of a great building boom, operations in this line having been held back since 1915-16, primarily and to begin with on account of the scarcity of labor and the high price of material and latterly, through the unavoidable Government restrictions necessary for conservation of supplies for war work. For further particulars see "All Building Bars Down," another column.

Plan Now for Xmas Sales

Increased sales of flowers at Christmas are expected to result from the announcement just made by the Council of National Defense at Washington, D. C., that its ban upon Christmas business is to be withdrawn immediately. At the same time it is understood that there will be no further agitation for confining Christmas gifts to essential articles.

William F. Gude, national representative of the S. A. F. and O. H., has been keeping an eye on the activities of the Council of National Defense in this respect for some time. Mr. Gude has been working hard to secure the lifting of bans of all kinds, and his latest action by a Government board means that it will be possible for florists to do business under better conditions—many people will buy flowers at Christmas who otherwise would have felt it unpatriotic to buy that which was not absolutely essential, while others will buy with better grace, relieved that this action has been taken, and with purchases likely to be much larger than they otherwise would have been.

The restrictions withdrawn by the Council include those upon the employment of additional sales or other help during the holiday season, the closing of stores at usual hours, restrictions on deliveries, etc. E. A. D.

Manufacturing Restrictions Modified

Among the commodities announced by Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board Nov. 13, the manufacturing restrictions on which have been ameliorated are the following:

Agricultural implements and farm operating equipment, including tractors
Boilers and radiators
Lawn mowers
Pottery

The modification is 50 per cent. of the previous restriction; that is, if an industry had been restricted 50 per cent. under the above modifications, the restriction will now be 25 per cent.

All Building Bars Down

All restrictions upon non-war construction have been removed by the War Industies Board, and it will now be possible for florists and growers to erect greenhouses and other buildings for their business. No licenses are longer necessary for this construction.

The removal of restrictions on building is one of the steps already taken to return the business of the country to a normal condition. It is anticipated that the order will at once result in a building boom throughout the country, with a resultant impetus to other peacetime industries.

The action taken by the War Industries Board permits all building operations of whatever character, held up in the interest of the war program, to proceed. No further permits will be required from the board or the state councils, through whom control over the situation in each state was maintained.

Immediately following the signing of the armistice on Nov. 11, the non-war construction section of the board took steps to loosen the restraints on the industry, and in a formal order issued that day removed a great many of the barriers. Since then, and with a view to assisting industry back to a complete peace basis as quickly as possible, a careful canvass has been made to determine whether the condition obtaining in each state with respect to building materials, transportation, and the supply of fuel and labor would warrant a removal of the remaining restrictions. The replies received, coming from practically all the States, showed a unanimous opinion in favor of permitting unlimited construction. E. A. D.

What is a Seedling Dahlia?

The bulletin for November of the American Dahlia Society has just been received. It contains an account of the fourth annual exhibition held in September and a report of the annual meeting; also President Vincent's appeal, and other matters of interest. Especially pertinent is the definition of a seedling Dahlia, adopted by the executive committee at its last meeting, held Nov. 7, at New York City, and which we reprint herewith:

The subject of "What is a Seedling Dahlia?" having been raised by a member, it was resolved that the society adopt the following definition: Hereafter the term "seedling" as understood by the society shall be applied only to plants from seed the first year, and other seedlings shall be designated as seedlings of a certain year.

The Ant and Aphis Problem

Referring to the letter on page 825, issue of Nov. 23, on "The Ant and Aphis Problem," Dr. W. E. Britton, State Entomologist, New Haven, Conn., writes as follows:

Mr. McDonough is right in regard to certain species of aphids, but they are not all dependent upon ants for their colonization. Ants are usually attracted by the honey dew which the aphids give off and will be found crawling about on the infested trees and plants. Mr. McDonough might try the poisoned bait recommended for the destruction of house ants by the Bureau of Entomology, Washington, D. C. This bait is prepared as follows:

Sugar	1 pound
Arsenate of Soda	125 grains
Water	1 quart
Honey	1 tablespoonful

Dissolve the sugar in the water and add the arsenate of soda. Boil until sugar and poison are all dissolved. Then add the honey, which is said to make the bait more attractive to the ants. Cool this mixture and then it may be placed in shallow dishes or on sponges scattered about where the ants are abundant. In the garden it may be advisable to keep the poison covered so that larger animals may not find it. In dwelling houses the ants will collect and carry this syrup back to their nests so that the young brood and the queens will feed upon it and be destroyed. I am not certain whether it will prove a success in the open but I believe it to be worth trying.

Another Aspect of the Problem

[The following interesting notes are from Prof. W. M. Wheeler of the Bussey Institution for Research in Applied Biology of Harvard University, Boston. Prof. Wheeler is an authority on the subject.—Ed.]

There is no doubt that many ants, owing to their habit of attending and protecting plant lice, are the indirect means of injuring vegetation of various kinds. There is, however, another aspect to the matter which somewhat diminishes their injury. Of course, they attend the aphids in order to get the honey dew, that is, the sugary excrement of the insects, and if this is not removed by the ants it is allowed to drop on the foliage where it forms a sticky layer that interferes with the respiration of the plants and also serves as a culture medium for various fungi that are more or less injurious to the plants. The question, therefore, is somewhat more complicated than would appear from Mr. McDonough's communication. During dry spells, in the summer especially, one often sees the leaves of the trees covered with a black fungus which has grown on the honey dew that has not been washed off by the rains. At such times, if ants are abundant, the leaves are quite clean, and as aphids are rarely present in sufficient numbers to injure large plants, the action of ants would be beneficial rather than harmful.

Firing Hints for the Small Grower

Handling Bituminous

When a fresh supply of coal is placed on the fire it is advisable to leave a small part of the fire uncovered with the fresh coal, which will ignite the gases and prevent them from accumulating in the fire box.

A good way to fire soft coal is to push the live coal to the back of the grate and put the fresh coal in front; the smoke from the fresh coal must then pass over the back grates, where there is a bright fire, which will ignite the gases and prevent large volumes of black smoke escaping into the chimney. Any grate with a large enough air space for burning anthracite coal, egg size or larger, can be used for burning soft coal.

Using Buckwheat

To burn No. 1 or No. 2 Buckwheat coal, a grate with a smaller mesh is required, so that the coal does not fall through the grate, but to burn this size coal, a much greater draft is required than for the larger sizes, and the coal must be fired a little at a time and often.

In firing this small sized coal it is also advisable to leave a small part of the fire uncovered with fresh coal, which will act as a sort of relief to let the gases escape from the fuel bed, otherwise, if too much fresh coal is put on at one time gases are liable to form in the firebox and blow the fire door open. But the main point, in order to get good results from buckwheat coal, is to fire light and often and have a chimney of sufficient height and area for the proper draft.

John McArthur.

Costs and Overhead

Very pleased indeed to see Mr. Herr's note on "Let Competitors Know," (his letter on Cost Production), and I accept with pleasure his offer to work as a volunteer in keeping records on the cost of producing some of his staples.

The letter read by Mr. Amling recently in Chicago is a valuable one bearing on the same subject.

Secretary Young is now writing to the secretaries of the principal florists' clubs, asking them to organize committees in their local areas to tabulate costs so that when this information is all gathered together a fair average may be struck. Some of the largest firms feel that it costs them considerable time and money to get their records, and do not feel like making them public, but this is a narrow way of looking at it.

The greatest good for the greatest number and the benefit of the craft in general should be our aim and object as florists. I have already had the offer of one or two broad-minded men who are perfectly willing to give the Society the benefit of their years of study and experience, and if every large grower in the different sections will take up this matter in the right spirit much valuable information should be available at the next convention. At the present time much misapprehension prevails among the different branches of the trade. The grower feels that when the retailer pays him $3 a 100 for Carnations, and sells them for $3 a dozen an unfair advantage is being taken of him. The retailer, on the other hand, says the growers' only cost is the labor and his coal, while he (the retailer) has frightful rent expense. His help of late, so far as wages are concerned, has been out for an altitude record; his delivery costs have also mounted out of sight, all of which has to be paid by some one.

If this Cost Production is gone into in the right spirit, without digging too closely into anyone's personal business, a great deal of misapprehension will be wiped out and a much better understanding will prevail among the craft in general.

Obituary

James Harvey Griffith

We regret to announce the death of our personal friend and co-worker, James H. Griffith, at his home in Barrington, R. I., on Sept. 29, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. Mr. Griffith had been in apparently good health, and the day before his death worked industriously in his garden in the afternoon; upon returning to the house he fell at the doorstep and became unconscious, thus passing to his end the following day.

Mr. Griffith was born at Dix Hills, near Huntington, L. I., on April 23, 1854. He was at one time advertising manager of Garden and Forest, also serving in the same capacity for American Gardening when it was published by the A. T. De La Mare Co., from 1893 to 1898. Mr. Griffith was also associated at various times with the Rural New Yorker, Forest and Stream, Bankers' Magazine and the Brooklyn Daily Eagle. He was secretary of the A. T. De La Mare Co., Inc., proprietors of The Florist's Exchange, for twenty years, and was well and favorably known to the trade in New York and the Eastern States.

Since 1917 Mr. Griffith had charge of U. S. internal revenue collections in Eastern Connecticut and Providence, with office at Putnam, Conn. He had banking connections with the Atlantic Bank of Brooklyn, Bank of Long Island, Fidelity Trust Co. of New York, Union Trust Co. of Providence, and was an organizer of the 34th st. Bank, New York City.

Mr. Griffith was a man of pleasing personality and spoke well of everybody; he is survived by his widow, who was Miss Mary Fessenden, and two sons, Benjamin F., in the Students Army Training Corps at the University of Pennsylvania, and Robert F., in the navy, now stationed at Newport. Also by three children from a first marriage to Miss Mary H. Carman, daughter of Richard Carman; James Harvey, Jr.; an attorney and real estate dealer at Long Beach, N. Y.; Lester C., in the service of the Federal Department of the Bureau of Entomology, working in connection with the extension Department of Cornell University, Ithaca; and Mrs. Chas. H. Zimmer. For the past ten years Mr. Griffith had been located at Barrington, R. I., previously having made his home on Long Island, Lynbrook having been his last place of residence there.

empire to the south of us. Soon they will discover that cultivated grasses and grains raise better beef than pampas grass. Soon they will learn that there is no need importing American grown corn via Fiume, when steamers plying regularly will bring it from New York to Buenos Aires. Soon they will discover that American vegetables are better adapted to South American climates than those bought from Europe. We know that prior to the war several hundred thousand dollars of good South American money went to Europe regularly for vegetable and flower seed alone.

To our mind, this would be the ideal time for the constructive bodies in the seed trade to put America on the map as the seed storehouse of the world. Let the Wholesale Seedsmen League and the Grass and Clover Dealers Association get busy advertising our resources in South American markets. Let the American Seed Trade Association get busy with a broad campaign designed to keep up interest in home vegetable gardening. The next ten years are bound to witness unparalleled development in both agricultural and horticultural America.

By W. H. Dildine, Manager and Treasurer James Vick's Sons, Seedsmen, Nurserymen, Florists, Rochester, N. Y.:

You ask for an expression from us as to just what the armistice signed Monday, Nov. 11, means to the trade, especially the future trade. In our humble opinion it means everything but especially everything good. There may be a few instances where the coming of peace and the general lowering of prices may affect someone adversely, but the possibility of such continuancy is too remote and too unimportant to consider in the general proposition that peace will mean a big boom for the growers and dealers of all kinds of flowering and foliage plants. How can it be otherwise? What will better express our appreciation of the glorious, victorious peace than a land covered with flowers! We are going to appreciate peace as never before, since we now know what war is in all its horrible aspects, and, we are going to enjoy our freedom more than we have ever done before, because without knowledge of how close the world came to the abyss of slavery and militarism we Americans are going to complain less than we have done in the past over our infinitesimal troubles; we are going to be glad we are alive and we are going to enjoy our favorable conditions and pleasant surroundings to the greatest possible extent. For all of these reasons, America is going to be the gladdest, happiest land in all the world! By the same token we are going to make more of flowers and foliage plants around our homes because beauty and peace are inseparable sisters.

If, therefore, you consider our judgment worth anything you may quote us as believing that the door of opportunity is opening wide to the florists today and that the growing demand for flowers will not be outrun by the boom in home building, the selling of silks and satins ribbons and laces or the manufacture of popular-priced automobiles or other articles which affect the comfort and happiness of the American people. There's a boom in business directly ahead for the wide awake florists and horticulturists whose eyes are open to the possibilities of today.

By New York Wholesale Florists:

"Ridiculous question to ask: of course the armistice, and the peace which will follow will make conditions in the flower trade better in good time."

"A hard question to answer at so early a date after the armistice. Judged by the weak demand for flowers since Nov. 11, which bravely keeps a short supply market cleaned up, the effect of the armistice on trade appears bad, but again we say it is too early to formulate an answer on so important a question, one into which so many factors enter besides the armistice."

"No one can predict the future of the flower business even in normal times; an epidemic, like that which unhappily came upon us recently, and which was unexpected, helps increase flower sales, and some other equally unforseen event may make it worse. On the whole, returning peace should benefit the flower trade."

"We think the armistice will be very beneficial to the flower trade, and that we will have a large Thanksgiving business as an immediate effect, followed by a season of active demand for flowers."

"The armistice apparently, but perhaps not really, has had a depressing effect on the flower business. However, it is our experience that it is impossible to 'dope out' the future of the flower trade."

"While the lesser demand now for flowers for funeral work makes it appear that the armistice has caused a decrease in business, the daily, slowly increasing demand for cut flowers for use on social occasions indicates that there will be this coming season a resumption of the festive uses of flowers."

"From present appearances the armistice has made business worse, but present conditions may be attributable to causes other than the armistice which, in the long run, surely ought to make business better."

"It is too early to answer this question, as sufficient time has not elapsed since the armistice was signed to gather any data on which to base an opinion."

"Has not yet helped business, but the outlook for the coming season is good."

Gardeners' Conference

The gardeners' New England Conference, held under the auspices of the National Association of Gardeners, at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Friday evening, Nov. 22, was a highly successful meeting. Wm. N. Craig presided. In a stirring patriotic address he called attention to what had been won by the great war, but warned that there is still much to be done. He referred to the wonderful services rendered by the war gardens, but pointed out that production and conservation in the next few years will be as necessary as at any time during the war. Mr. Craig read a letter from Robert Weeks of Cleveland, president of the association, regretting his inability to be present.

War Gardens

H. D. Hemenway of the National War Garden Commission of Washington spoke. He said that the war gardens of the past two years would be converted into "victory gardens" as home food production is more essential than ever. The figures he gave showing the amount of food produced by the war gardens and the number of gardeners were astonishingly large. He said that unless this country provided food for Russia next year starvation would be widespread there, as official records showed that thousands of Russians, principally children, starved to death in the streets last year. Also that other European countries must be provided with food. Mr. Hemenway added that the National War Garden Commission is planning a campaign to increase, if possible, the production of food by home gardeners so that as much as possible of the country's general production can be released for suffering foreign nations. The discussion that followed brought out the fact that in many communities it was believed that war gardens were a thing of the past and would not be resumed next year. After learning how urgent it was to continue this work, the members present pledged themselves to renew their efforts, and a motion was unanimously carried that the National Ass'n of Gardeners co-operate in every way possible with the National War Garden Commission in furthering the campaign it has under way, and that individual members of the association interest themselves in the work in their respective communities by offering their aid wherever they can serve.

Plant Import Restrictions

J. K. M. L. Farquhar was called on to speak on the effects of plant import restrictions on American horticulture. After speaking of his several visits to Washington to protest against the proposed restrictions and the disposition of the Federal Horticultural Board to put the proposed restrictions into force. Mr. Farquhar said that American nurserymen were already growing plants, some of them of better quality than the foreign product, of varieties that it was believed a few years ago could not be produced in this country, and that in time other varieties would be produced. The speaker agreed that the restrictions might even be an incentive to increase production among American nurserymen. However, he believed that the time limit should be extended so as to give American nurserymen opportunity to prepare to meet the demand.

Leonard Barron of New York said that he had been endeavoring to discover just how American nurserymen stood on the question of plant import restriction and that his investigations proved they were somewh divided on the matter; that he was disposed to believ that, in the long run, it would be a good thing fo American nurserymen, although he believed that mo time should have been given them. In the discussio that followed, it was claimed that if American nu serymen would turn to the cultivation of our nativ plants, it would be possible to develop gardens th would be truly American. The opinion prevailed, how ever, that until the nurserymen can furnish such plant there should be some modification in the restrictior on foreign plants, and the secretary was instructed by motion to learn if it were not possible to have som action taken to have the proposed restrictions deferre for at least three years.

Gardeners' Problems

A general discussion followed of the gardeners' prot lems during the reconstruction period, one proble being the difficulty in obtaining capable assistants, a many of those who joined the colors will turn to mo lucrative vocations. The question of training youn men in this country was discussed, but the difficulty o interesting them in the work, due to the small financial re turns was considered a decided handicap. The substitu tion of young women was not favorably regarded. Th the gardeners' compensation is not high enough compare with that of other professions, was generally conceded but it was contended that many gardeners are them selves responsible for this condition. The cultivatio of greater confidence between the estate owner an the gardener, it was agreed, would be of much benef to the men of the profession.

M. C. Ebel, secretary of the association, urge greater cooperation between the gardeners through th national organization.

Japanese Maples as Easter Plants

Small Japanese Maples have been highly spoken of connection with Easter trade, and in localities throughou the United States where it is not too late to lift the small plants up from the open ground and place them i suitable receptacles with a ball of earth, if possible, the should be still time to prepare them for the above pu pose.

The most attractive Japanese Maples for the florist t handle are the following:

Blood leaf Maple (Acer polymorphum atropureum) red fern leaf (Acer poly. dissectum atropurpureum) Aconite leaf (Acer aconitifolium); golden leaf (Ace japonicum anteum; green fern leaf (Acer polymorphu dissectum).

Soldier and Sailor Credit Relief

H Tregoe, secretary-treasurer of the association.

The entire facilities of the organization are place at the disposal of the Red Cross for the benefit of an business being carried on by the family of a soldier o sailor, and the adjustment bureau of each local branc of the association will cooperate with the local hom service of the Red Cross wherever any soldier's bus ness in his absence needs expert commercial advice o relief, the service so given to be entirely free of charg

The Middle West

Indianapolis, Ind.

Indications are for a general resumption of the flower business. Florists are busy with funeral work, with occasional orders for corsage bouquets or boxes of birthday flowers. Flowers are scarce. Some growers lost courage, others had a shortage of help, fuel, etc., so now there is a wild scramble to get stock.

Full quoted market prices prevail in most instances both wholesale and retail. There will be hardly enough Chrysanthemums to meet Thanksgiving Day demands at $1.50 to $6 per doz. wholesale and $3 to $12 retail. Roses, including Ophelia, pink and white Killarney, Ward, Milady, Richmond and Hoosier Beauty, bring $5 to $15 per 100. Russell $10 to $15, and Am. Beauty $10 to $60. Lilium giganteum is scarce at $3 per doz wholesale. A few Callas are being received at $20 per 100. Carnations are accepted as soon as brought to market at $4 to $6 per 100; the retail price ranges from $1 to $1.50 per doz. Hudson River Violets are being received in quantity, $1 to $1.25 per 100. Local singles are scarce at 75c. to $1. A few local Cattleyas are being received at 50c. to 75c. each.

Trade Topics

Tomlinson Hall market reports a lively week both in wholesale and retail lines. Prices are much better than in former years.

The whole family of Henry Rieman, the well known South Side florist, is ill with influenza.

The Pahud Floral Co. is thinking of dismantling its whole establishment in North Illinois st., and offering for sale some modern glass.

Bertermann Bros. Co. is sending in a fine lot of big Chrysanthemums and Carnations from its Cumberland plant.

John Rieman is displaying fancy Cattleyas and Cypripediums in his Massachusetts ave. windows.

Baur & Steinkamp are preparing to make a great number of cuttings from their new pink Carnation which shows up to excellent advantage whenever shown.

Lester Benson reports a fine business in his present location which he says pays much better than a high rent location. I. B.

Cincinnati, O.

The supply of Roses has shortened somewhat during the past fortnight. Everything that comes in this line is cleaning up readily. Carnations are selling well but there are not enough of them to go around. The cut of Easter Lilies is heavier than it was. Still they are selling readily. Callas sell well. The Chrysanthemum cut is fair but not nearly large enough to take care of all demands, including Thanksgiving Day demand, upon it. Daily receipts are less than in past years at this time. Double Violets are coming into the market. They are meeting with a good demand. Lily of the Valley and orchids sell well. Stevia is in and is proving excellent property. Sweet Peas are cleaning up readily.

Florists' representatives from this city and vicinity who are in the military or naval service of the United States are the following:

Postal Money Orders for $11 each have been mailed to all overseas, while orders for those in this country will be mailed later, nearer Christmas by Miss Laura Murphy of the Christmas Fund Committee. TEDDY.

Cleveland, O.

The first real freeze of the season occurred Nov. 24, terminating the mildest stretch of all weather in a generation. Outdoor work is practically all done and the effect of the cooler temperature will soon be noticed in the improved quality of indoor flowers. Growers may now relax their efforts to conserve fuel, but doubtless firing will be conducted upon a more scientific basis than ever before.

Business continues brisk, apparently pleasing everybody concerned, as a fine spirit of optimism prevails in all branches of the trade. A ready sale awaits everything consigned to the wholesale market and retailers appear to have little difficulty in moving their merchandise. During the week ending Nov. 23 supply was slightly below demand, the market clearing up early each day. Prevailing prices are in advance of those of last year and daily receipts are heavier.

Thanksgiving week will completely wind up the Chrysanthemums. Goodly cuts of Carnations are in sight for December and the supply of Roses from local sources will be normal. There is an abundance of Stevia in course of preparation which will help out materially in the dark weather when stock is scarce. Easter Lilies are temporarily off the price lists. Callas are arriving in greater abundance and are eagerly sought for funeral purposes.

Christmas stock is generally reported to be in good shape with the exception of Poinsettias, which are not up to the usual standard of quality. Begonias and Cyclamens are in excellent condition and liberal quantities are available for the holiday requirements, which might also be said of ferns. Bulbous stock is about all planted. Based upon the present quotations on bulbs, prices will have to be materially higher than in the past or there will be little profit realized from forcing them.

Notes of Interest

Letter from Sergt. Chas. F. Irish, now with the 112th Engineers in France, announce that he is enjoying excellent health and that he is eagerly looking forward to the time of his return home.

Walter E. Cook, who was stricken with an attack of pneumonia while in Newark, N. J., is convalescing, but it will be some time before he is sufficiently strong to be brought home.

H. B. Wilkinson, proprietor of the Penn Square Flower Shop, has opened an additional store at 5622 Woodland ave., his intention being to make it permanent if the location proves favorable.

J. Salmon & Son, of Akron, Ohio, are cutting some very fine Bouvardia, which is meeting with much favor among their customers.

John T. Lambert, with Mrs. J. B. Freeman, Toledo, Ohio, spent Nov. 23 among Cleveland and Mentor wholesale florists.

F. C. W Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co., spent the latter part of last week in Chicago.

Morris Cohen, representing a New York ribbon house, called upon the trade Nov. 22.

George J. Wilhelmy, the Lorain st. florist is able to attend to business again after a severe attack of influenza.

C. Merkel & Sons, of Mentor, Ohio, have an unusually fine lot of Cyclamen in the pink of condition. This firm which was formerly headquarters for plants, is gradually devoting more of its attention to the production of flowers.

D. L. Johnson has purchased the business of the late A. T. Pollard, Canton, Ohio, and will operate under the name of Johnson's Flower Shop.

C. E. Barton, of Norwalk, Ohio, was in the city Nov. 22 purchasing stock for his Thanksgiving Day trade. Mr. Barton's eldest son is with the American Expeditionary Forces in France. J. McL.

St. Paul, Minn.

There is little evidence that stock is in excess of demand with most of the Rose growers off crop. Roses are scarce and likely to continue so, while Carnations are coming on more quickly; prices are firm at 5c. and 6c., with a brisk demand. Owing to the dull weather of the past two weeks Violets are slow in opening. While the Chrysanthemum crop is not large, there have been some very good flowers, especially among the pompons. Prices have been higher than usual and there is little doubt that at its termination the Chrysanthemum season will have been the best experienced.

Calendulas, Daisies, Stevias and Forgetmenots are finding their way into the stores and are useful for making up small floral tokens. Boston ferns, usually so plentiful at this season, are scarce. Pteris tremula is finding a ready sale. One noted fact is that, since the signing of the armistice, there has been a general call for landscape work, but coming as it does in the well advanced season, much of it will have to await the coming of Spring. We are experiencing a cold spell which will probably freeze up and stop all outside work.

Considerable quantities of Dutch bulbs have arrived and growers have lost no time planting but, generally speaking, there is about one-quarter the usual quantity of bulbs laid down in the Twin Cities, so there should be little trouble in realizing top notch prices. Giganteums are seldom seen.

News Notes

Henry Puvogal claims this has been the busiest Fall ever experienced.

At the Golach funeral in Minneapolis there were such quantities of both cut flowers and designs that a delivery truck was requisitioned to convey the flowers to the cemetery. The main portion of this work, including a handsome blanket, was furnished by The Midway Florist, St. Paul.

Swanson's of Minneapolis joined the celebrations on Peace Day by opening their store at 3 a.m., and had a record day's business.

Snelling Floral Co. has disposed of its entire stock of Chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving Day to O. R. Eckhardt.

E. F. Lemke, recently retired, leaves shortly for California for an indefinite visit. E. C T.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Business was very active last week, and the market was cleaned up thoroughly each day with hardly enough stock to go around. The weather has turned decidedly wintry during the past week, with temperatures below freezing, and these conditions have helped to save a few Chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving Day. There is no oversupply in 'Mums at present and prices are holding firm. There is a splendid line of Roses in the market, with Ophelia, Russell, Columbia, Shawyer and Killarney the leaders; the quality of these is unexcelled, but they are far from being plentiful. Carnations have been hard to obtain at any price, as they have never been so scarce at this season of the year; they will be decidedly scarce for Thanksgiving, according to the present outlook, and prices will be almost out of sight.

Some fine Snapdragon are being shown on the market, but the supply of other miscellaneous flowers, such as Violets, Sweet Peas, etc., is very limited. Some choice pompons are being offered, and the supply of these is almost unlimited. However, there will be a fine lot of blooming plants to choose from for the Thanksgiving trade, as some choice Cyclamens, Primula obconicas, Begonias and Chrysanthemum plants are being shown in the retail stores, and these will, in a measure, make up for the scarcity of cut flowers and the high prices for them. There will be a good crop of local orchids for this holiday.

There were several good sized weddings last week, and a score of prenuptial parties, which called for decorations and corsages of flowers. The local hospitals have again been re-opened to the public, and the sale of flowers for patients at these institutions has again become normal. Easter Lilies and Callas have been in great demand at top-notch prices.

Notes

Sergt. John W. Smalley, brother of Allen County Agricultural Agent H. R. Smalley, of Co. M, 353d Infantry, has been awarded the distinguished service cross, for heroism in action on the French Front near Vilcey, on Sept. 12, 1918. He gave his life for the cause.

Miss Helen F. Patten, of Toledo, Ohio, has been entertaining her brother, Thomas Patten of this city, during the past week.

Adolph Jaenicke, in charge of the city greenhouses, has answered the recent letter of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club to the park commissioners, by offering the surplus stock of the city greenhouses to the various florists of the city at special prices. The Florists' Club was dissatisfied because the stock of the city greenhouses had been sold at the 5c. and 10c. stores below market prices. The club has taken no action on Mr. Jaenicke's offer yet, but a special committee has been appointed to investigate.

Ed. Wenninghoff is displaying a handsome collection of Cyclamen plants in his show window on Calhoun st. He says the blooming plants are a boon to the florists in these days of great scarcity of cut flowers.

The Flick Floral Co. has sent out a number of victory corsages during the week for pre-nuptial parties. This firm has had a lively demand for wedding decorations in addition to a good, steady call for large funeral pieces.

Some excellent late varieties of 'Mums are being cut at the greenhouses of the Doswell Floral Co. The store force has had an exceptionally busy with funerals and weddings, and a lively counter and hospital trade.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey will have some fine late 'Mums for the Thanksgiving Day trade, in addition to a fine crop of Roses and orchids. This firm's specialty in orchids is well known throughout the country, and their houses now present a very attractive appearance with such a large number of handsome flowers in bloom. D. B.

Denver, Col.

This issue of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE goes to press before the extent of the Thanksgiving Day demand has fully developed, but at present writing there is every indication of an excellent market, provided enough stock is to be had. Cut flowers of all kinds are scarce. Cut 'Mums and 'Mum plants which were a drug on the market at this time a year ago, are not to be had. Many growers are cut out already. One of them who usually has a large supply of 'Mums for Thanksgiving Day said he would cut only about half of what he should owing to disease which has destroyed the plants.

American Beauty, Scott Keys, and all the best grade of Roses are cleaned up very quickly. Violets, orchids and Sweet Peas for corsage work are also scarce. In other years we have always received shipments of single Violets from San Francisco for the holiday rush, but the supply is limited. Pot plants such as Cyclamen, Primulas, Begonias and Jerusalem Cherries are selling well. If the shortage of cut flowers continues on this market, the demand for blooming plants will become more steady.

Carl Espelin of Espelin & Warren Floral Co., Fort Collins, was a visitor He reports a good demand for cut flowers and plants in his section, there being some prominent funerals of late.

B. Lammerman, of the City Floral Co., reports being all sold up on Poinsettia plants for the Christmas trade.

The Mauff Floral Co. has a fine lot of Begonia and Jerusalem Cherry plants for which they find a good demand.

Ben Boldt and family are about again after all being laid up with the "flu." All his family had it at the same time.

The Alpha Floral Co. put a new and attractive delivery car on last week—a good shade of blue with gold lettering and white wheels.

The Park Floral Co. has on hand a few 'Mum plants which it has been holding for regular customers.

Curtis Park Floral Co. has had its share of the business, is all cut out of 'Mums and will not have any for Thanksgiving Day unless they buy.

Emil Glauber was one of the patriot florists who donated his touring car for the Smiles parade. The moving pictures of this will be sent to the Colorado boys "over there" for Christmas. C. F. E.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N. Y.—Geo. T. Schuneman, of 679 Merrick rd., advises that his place has not been sold, but merely rented for a term of five years, with the understanding that if the contract and lease are complied with the option of purchase will be given.

Wedding Decorations in the Church and Home

Materials in general use and how to use them—Decorative properties—The prie-dieu, the gates and canopy—Objective points to cover in both church and home.

By W. CLEAVER HARRY

When we mention wedding decorations, the first thing that comes to mind is the Kentia palm. Generally speaking the Kentia and the common Nephrolepis fern form the basis of nearly all wedding decorations, both large and small, at home or in the church.

There is a certain class of private home decorative work where only just a few specimen plants are used, and sometimes none at all, in conjunction with cut flowers. Here the decorator makes use of many properties in basketry, pedestals and vases. Some of these he supplies, other receptacles are the art pieces already in the rooms. This style of decorating is an a-la-carte order, and is always the most expensive way for the hostess, but it is invariably the easiest and most profitable way to handle it from the florist's standpoint. In such an order, the instructions may call for a vase of two dozen American Beauty Roses in the drawing room, filling the two large urns in the library with yellow Chrysanthemums, and arranging the large silver service on the dining room table with orchids, etc. You can readily see that the man who attends to the arrangement must be more than a first year novice. Indeed, a good man with one assistant can execute a very large order on the a-la-carte plan with very little preparation. The florist in estimating the cost simply makes a store charge for everything used, adds an extra charge of 20 per cent. for service and arrangement, and bills the total.

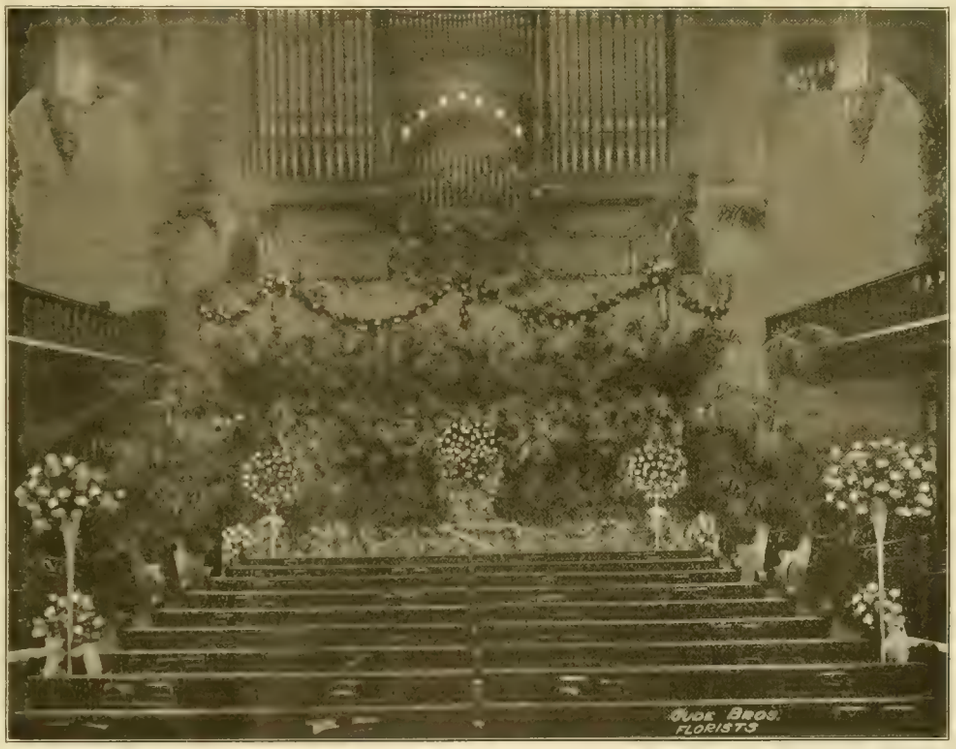
Too many plants are not always desired in the home affair, both on account of space and of the plants cutting out and hiding objects of art in various parts of the house and hall where there is no need for screening. In church weddings a certain number of foliage plants are absolutely necessary. Elaborate church weddings are exceptional with even the big city florist, no matter how much he tries to impress you to the contrary. But nearly all church weddings call for some decoration, although it may be but a simple bank up front, with two clusters of flowers on the pews in the aisle to mark the reserved section. In the use of flowers in the church it depends largely on the price and somewhat on the denomination of the church. If it is Episcopal the vases on the communion table in the chancel must always be filled with cut flowers even though your order was taken for a plant decoration only. Avoid trouble for yourself by noting this fact beforehand.

The Decorator's Properties

The supply houses furnish certain stock fixtures. Have a separate room or large closet wherein keep everything pertaining to decorating. Let this be the property room. In pedestals, the wooden tripod stand in two or three sizes is the most useful and inexpensive. A few iron stands are valuable, but in patent combination stands there is nothing to be recommended.

A few wicker screens of very plain design are useful in screening the music or cutting off a portion of the room. In covering the screens use green Oak foliage, or any foliage obtainable. Screens also make excellent backgrounds for any plants or flowers that are used in front of them.

An important fixture is the prie-dieu or kneeling stool. This is generally used and called for in formal weddings at home. Sometimes at the church the florist is asked to supply a kneeling stool, and recently we were asked to supply two of these in a Catholic church, the second stool being used for the two bridesmaids. Other properties are the wedding gates and arches, etc. These outfits are sometimes useful and effective in putting up an outdoor wedding and in church work, but they are of little use in the home set ups, although sections may sometimes be employed to help out. It is not desirable to have too many stock fixtures on hand. They are all right when used the first few times but after that they are in danger of becoming hackneyed. I once heard a lady remark that she knew Mr. G. was the decorator because she recognized that same Bamboo trellis he had used at her daughter's wedding. It is better by far to have a few simple fixtures from the supply house and use with them hand made ones that can be refixed and changed so as to be not easily recognized.



In this church wedding decoration a large group of palms is used in the center of the organ loft, concealing the organist, and specimen palms at the right and left of organ. The facade of the organ loft is covered with greens, and ropings of greens interspersed with flowers are festooned from the loft railing. Groups of large palms are placed at each side of the chancel, on the front of which are placed Nephrolepis ferns. There are standards surmounted by vases filled with Chrysanthemums, in the center and on each side of the chancel, and also at the points which mark off the pews which are reserved for invited guests, and clusters of Chrysanthemums on the pew heads at the same points. Greens are used on the gallery pillars and at other points of vantage. By Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C.

Aisle posts can be made by using iron plant stands with a basket of round plateau lashed to the top. When these are properly filled and the ribbon or silk cord fastened from one to the other the effect is better than the white enameled posts made specially for the aisle for home weddings. Speaking of home made fixtures we recall that one of the nicest effects on the church aisle we ever saw was made with white curtain poles with a small round basket nailed to the top; the poles were lashed to the pew on either side of the aisle, and the place where the wire ran around the pew was covered with green. The baskets were criss-crossed with wire and filled in with Asparagus Sprengeri and Laurel stubble. Into this were entered the stems of white Chrysanthemums in long stemmed effect. The poles were put up in position first and the flowers put in from a stepladder. The baskets being metal lined, held enough water to keep the flowers fresh.

The Canopy and Mantle in Home Weddings

In the home weddings the canopy is sometimes used. It consists of a wire frame from the wire supply of the wholesale house. The finishing or decorating of it is a simple operation; it is covered first with soft greens and the flowers are wound in garlands and draped over it. To make it more effective and misty, white tulle is drawn over and among the flowers and greens; the effect is truly wonderful.

In the majority of home weddings the locality directly in front of the mantle is selected as the fatal spot. The old fashioned way of decorating the mantle was to bank the top by covering it with a board mossed like a plateau and filled with flowers like a funeral design. Sometimes a glass vase was imbedded in the moss at either end for long stemmed flowers. The present day treatment of the mantle is not so set in its make up. The mantle board has long since passed out of use. In its place we use a low gathering basket in the center of the mantle top in long flowing effect; the basket being tilted in a most approved artistic manner. On the ends of the mantle tall baskets or vases are used to give height to the arrangements. Screen the mantle top with a little choice green, but only just enough to relieve it. On either side group the palms in loose open formation, bringing them forward to set the mantle in a recess.

In the work of home decorating it is often necessary to drive a tack on the top of the door frame, or the edge of a moulding, to fasten a guide wire for a garland. The warning is tactful, when we say, "don't let anyone from the household see you do it." Most people are sensitive about this, and of the matter of moving furniture and making dirt for some one else to clean up. In all of these things be careful. If you wish to put the stamp of highest approval upon yourself and your work, see that nothing is left but perfection, when you leave the job finished. Carry a kit with you, stocked with pins, wire, double pointed tacks, hammer, a spool of wire, etc. We recall decorating the home of a governor of the State for the wedding of his daughter. Lucky for us, we got a tip from a member of the household that the governor was very touchy about having any bric-a-brac moved from its place. The house, by the way, was crammed with trophies of every kind and description. When all was finished and he came in to inspect, and saw all his beloved treasures undisturbed, with the floral decorations peeping out from between them, he proclaimed us the best and only real decorators that ever came to his mansion. After giving us a cash present he said he would advertise us whenever he had an opportunity and he has kept his word.

The Use of Greens and Arrangement

In the arrangement of plants there is no set rule. The skilled decorator in clustering his plants avoids the tight bank of earlier years. It is far better to arrange your palms loosely and then fill in around the pots and open places around the pedestals with sprays of Oak, or any kind of foliage. We must, however, give preference to Oak, when it is obtainable, on account of its lasting qualities. Avoid straight lines in your arrangement. Let it be one plant up, and one down; one front and one back; break joints so that the general effect is like a cluster of well arranged shrubbery on the landscape. If blooming plants are used always place or group them in objective points. By this, we mean, place them where they will show off best.

One of the big points in church decorating is to cut the floor space. That is, bring the plants close to line, where the ceremony will take place. Reduce the size of the chancel, both width and depth. Cut the space with the palms, and get the credit for having filled it, when all back of the palm line is empty. It's the distant effect that is imporant. If the church is one without a chancel, and where the ceremony will take place at the head of the aisle in front of the platform, we would suggest cutting across the front at this point, screening completely the plaform, choir seats and all. In church decorating, if you wish the decorations to excite comment, make it seem that there is nothing in the church but the bride and the decorations. Regarding the remainder of the auditorium, nothing is needed unless, of course, the people wish to spend the money. Nothing shows up the church decoration like the white runner on the center aisle. This is not considered as part of the florist's decoration, but, if it is a big affair, and the awning and canopy man has received no order to cover the floor of the aisle in white, give him the order yourself; it is worth the cost to the decoration.

The Sale and the Working Plan

Don't wait until the day before the wedding to plan and prepare for the decoration. Just as soon as the order is given, which may be a month ahead, make out a specification sheet. On this sheet enter all memorandums of every item and detail of the work. No detail is too trivial, and a rough pencil sketch of something that words do not convey is a big help. Lay out just what properties you intend using and the approximate number of plants and cut flowers. Private marks and prices can be recorded on this sheet, since it is separate from the original order, and intended solely for your own private information. In the layout of the objective points, see that all material can be obtained before you promise it to the customer. If you expect to use the palms of another florist in conjunction with your own, find out first whether you can get them on the set date. By planning ahead you will not only reduce the actual work, but insure satisfaction for both yourself and the customer.

It is bad business to try to do decorating on a competitive basis. Keep out of the cut price game on decorations and remain in business to see the wisdom of it. Some big town florists refuse to bid on decorative work. Others have dropped decorations altogether, except to their regular patrons, whom they know will pay a consistent price. On the whole the wedding decoration is not a thing to be passed on lightly. It is an important and necessary branch of the business. It is profitable only to those who handle it in a business manner. Keep account of the extra costs and charge everything, even the tip to the sexton and the butler. If you do not you may find that you put in a hard and fast day for nothing. There is, as every one knows who has experienced it, a keen and lasting sense of satisfaction after the work is completed in knowing that you have delighted your customer and a pleasant sense of personal good will in yourself in realizing that you came out all right on the financial end as well.

How Do You Find Business?

How frequently this question is asked and how have you answered it? Those of us connected with flowers and also the men engaged in side lines, such as the sale and production of baskets, ribbons, greens and everything else connected with the trade have passed through a severe ordeal during the world war just ended.

Now and then one of our number says that the present period has proved the most profitable season he has ever experienced, due to the fact that he was optimistic about the outcome and went right ahead with his plan and then builded better than he expected.

One case in particular worthy of mention is that of one of our growers of the new school. Being young and progressive he surveyed the prospect for the year 1918 and saw that labor conditions were going to change; also that the increased price of coal was to be a factor and everything that entered into the growing end would be higher. He determined to stock up his establishment with every available foot of bench room, arranged to get the maximum results. This grower recently told me that, in spite of conditions, this will be the biggest year, both in profits and results, that he has ever had. Was this due to his optimism or pessimism? Or was it due to the fact that he would not lay down and say that this year would be an impossible one; just letting things shape themselves, as many others have done, who have taken the easiest way and fallen behind?

It is the old story of trying to make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, and I want to go on record as saying that the opportunity presented

Do you want flowers in Philadelphia? We furnish the best, artistically arranged itself to the grower mentioned was perhaps no different from that of many others, except that he took the bull by the horns and determined upon a policy and carried it out successfully, much to his credit. And this condition was brought about by the fact that he knew what he was going up against and provided for it accordingly.

The most complete, thorough and uptodate Design Book ever offered the retailer for his counter trade is admitted by "all in the know" to be our FLORAL DESIGNS DE LUXE. Write us for descriptive circular "F."

Now the same opportunity was open to the retailer, who also had unusual conditions to contend with. People who had in the past perhaps been in the habit of purchasing flowers seemed to get the notion that it was not patriotic to buy luxuries and were particularly anxious to put flowers in this class, and simply did without them whenever possible. Many stores which depended on this class of trade felt the shrinkage in their sales. But out of this also came the type of the florist who felt that the new class of buyers must be appealed to, those who were earning more money than ever before and who had always yearned for some of the luxuries of life but who could not until now afford them, these have developed into flower lovers and buyers at the same time. May we not suppose that those who went after this class of buyers by present-day methods of publicity and advertising plus fresh flowers and all that enters into a successful store's methods have also had one of the best years in the sale of flowers that they have ever encountered?

"Whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well." The florists generally throughout the country should feel genuinely happy that in spite of all the adverse conditions we have had to meet during the present year we, nevertheless, have reason to be especially grateful, because we live in this great land of ours, where everyone has the vision and courage to feel that for the next year we can do still better than the past, and that everyone connected with flowers—wholesaler, retailer, grower, supplyman and bulbman will see that our Publicity Campaign is given further support by sending in a subscription in proportion to his volume of business to create the nucleus of a still larger business for every one concerned.

The Publicity Campaign which we have started is only a small part of the development work but who will not acknowledge that it has started something which perhaps is but the means for new and more energy yet to be developed, so that we may all see progress in a broader and bigger light, and if it only does this, has it not merited your support?

We are soon to ask for funds for our 1919 campaign and perhaps those who have not had a successful year for 1918 may hope that the campaign will bring them better business for next year and those who have had a resultful year will surely show their appreciation by coming across without much effort. Then the Campaign of "SAY IT WITH FLOWERS" will steadily keep winning new friends and customers for those florists who will have done their duty.

Before closing may I add that our trade press is entitled to a great deal of credit for the many suggestions that are found in its columns, which always have the trend toward further encouragement and that the trade papers also deserve the support of all in the trade.—HENRY PENN, Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

Advertising Opportunities Negtected

The opportunity for doing an extra heavy business for Thanksgiving, 1918, has never been equalled since the day was inaugurated and yet in the prominent florist shops of one of our great cities not a solitary one was noted displaying in its windows the slightest reference to the notable occasion. What is wrong? Is it that it was feared such advertising would offend the esthetic eyes of wealthy patrons?

Flowers Express Joyous Welcome

Flowers played a conspicuous part in the recent triumphal entry of King Albert and the Belgian Army into Brussels. Newspaper accounts, in describing the event, say that flowers were thrown in the path of the royal party as the procession made its way along boulevards for miles densely packed with cheering crowds. The spectators along the route continually threw down small flags and Chrysanthemums from windows and balconies.

Lightless Nights Ended

The National Fuel Administration at Washington has rescinded the "lightless" order, which had been in effect since the coal shortage of last Winter. Beginning Saturday, Nov. 23, lights were turned on full, as in pre-war times. However, Fuel Administrator Garfield has issued a new order in which the Federal Fuel Administrators in charge of States may continue the original order in those communities in which they deem such action necessary because of local fuel conditions.

Effective Co-operative Advertising

ROSES, Violets and the earlier blooming potted plants compete with late Chrysanthemum varieties to dominate Thanksgiving displays in Flower shops everywhere. It's needless to say that Flowers will contribute much to your Thanksgiving observance.

This Thanksgiving, perhaps, your soldier boy will be on furlough, or you'll entertain another soldier boy in his place. Think how much he will appreciate the presence of Flowers there in your home.

Your florist is ready to handle Thanksgiving orders with infinite care as to details of arrangements. The cost will be small as you desire.

Meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday eve., Dec. 9, at 7.30, at the Grand Opera House Bldg., 23d st. and 8th ave. Election of officers.

The Market

Nov. 26.—This is Thanksgiving week. Today, Tuesday, the wholesale cut flower market is in receipt of moderately large arrivals of all kinds of staple and seasonable flowers. There is an active demand, but no rush; prices are moderately high and firm.

American Beauty Roses are in medium supply and moving well at 25c. to 75c. each, and the other grades at corresponding prices. There is a moderate supply of hybrid tea Roses which are selling freely at 6c. to 60c., but 6c. to 15c. covers most varieties. No. 2 grade blooms are realizing $2 to $6 per 100 according to variety.

Carnations are not in over supply. They are meeting with a fair demand at about $6 per 100 for select grades, with occasional sales of preferred varieties and colors at $8.

Cattleya orchids in medium supply are selling in general at 60c. to 75c. each for choice blooms of preferred varieties, but a few choice hybrids are touching the dollar mark.

There is a moderate supply of white and a few pink Lilies, which are going slowly at $10 to $12 per 100 for the white and $4 to $5 for the pink. Gardenias and Lily of the Valley are not moving briskly. The best blooms of the former are realizing $3 to $5 per doz., and those of the latter $6 to $8 per 100.

The supply of 'Mums is larger than that of any other flower in the market. The demand is large and steady. The large flowered varieties are selling at $1.50 to $5 per doz. in general, but a few extra large, choice blooms are realizing $6. Bunch 'Mums are selling at 25c. to 50c. a buch for anything worth while.

Violets are in medium supply and are moving fairly well at 75c. to $1.25 and occasionally $1.50 per 100 for doubles, and from 75c. to $1 for singles.

In other flowers there are a few fine Poinsettias, a very moderate supply of Sweet Peas, Calendulas, Mignonette, Pansies, and a large supply of Stevia, all meeting with a fair demand at quoted prices. All greens are in full supply and moving well.

Wednesday, Nov. 27, 2 p.m.—Up to this hour today conditions in the wholesale cut flower market show little change from those of yesterday. The arrivals today were somewhat heavier and the demand showed little if any increase. Prices remain unchanged, but as there is considerable unsold stock, and as there will be some afternoon arrivals, prices are not expected to advance, and may decline before the market closes Wednesday evening. On the whole, the demand at this writing appears to be larger than for Thanksgiving Day, 1917.

Important Meetings

The regular monthly meeting of The Florists' Club will be held at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and Eighth ave., on Monday evening, Dec. 9, at 7:30. The election of officers for 1919 will be held at this meeting.

There will be a meeting of the International Flower Show Committee on Monday, Dec. 2, at 2:30 p.m., at the office of Secretary John Young. At this meeting it is expected that a decision will be reached as to whether a flower show will be held in the Spring of 1919.

Nathan Whittley, formerly in the employ of Fred Miller, and later with Malandre Bros., retail florists, died of influenza on Nov. 21, at his home in Highland, N. Y., in the 31st year of his age, after a sickness of only three days. The funeral services were from his late residence on the 23d. Interment was at Highland Cemetery. Mr. Whittley is survived by a widow, his father, mother, sister and a brother, Alfred Whittley, well known in this city, and engaged in the florist business at Hackensack, N. J.

Edward Warendorff, formerly of Madison ave. and 59th st., is now associated with the Bloomingdale Cut Flower Department, Lexington ave. at 59th st. The new annex of this department, which opened on Nov. 23, gives this firm what it claims is the largest floral establishment in the world.

Capt. A. N. Kinney, Fort Washington ave. at 198th st., who has been a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve during the war, was seen again in civilian dress in the wholesale flower district this week, glad, he said, that the war is over, and hoping the world would never see another.

Adolph LeMoult, who is a member of the committee of the New York Florists' Club for the collection of flowers for distribution among the base hospitals in this city and vicinity, even at so busy a time as the day before Thanksgiving Day, and when flowers are so much in demand, succeeded in collecting a large number of blooms with which to gladden and cheer the patients at those hospitals on Thanksgiving Day. Credit is certainly due to Mr. LeMoult and other members of the committee, and to the donors for their faithful participation in this beautiful work.

VICTORY and The Return of Peace

Finds us doing a large volume of business. The demand is increasing. It looks like a great Flower Selling Season. We require larger arrivals of flowers, especially Roses.

The Market

Nov. 26.—The wholesale flower market is short. Dull weather last week reduced the supply. The demand for all kinds of flowers is heavy and prices have advanced considerably. As it looks now Thanksgiving Day business will be much larger than for several years. American Beauty Roses are in moderate supply, with a heavy call. They sell at $5 and $6 per doz., but may be higher before Thanksgiving Day. The supply of hybrid tea Roses has shortened and the demand increased. Prices range from 6c. to 25c. each. Carnations are scarce; prices are climbing and may be much higher tomorrow. The price is from 5c. to 8c. each. Cattleyas are moderately plentiful with a good demand at 40c. to 75c each. There are more 'Mums than of any other flower. The later varieties are of fine quality. Prices range from $1.50 to $3 per doz., with some fancy flowers higher. Lilies are scarce and are selling at 16c. each. There is a liberal supply of good Stevia which sells well at 50c. per bunch. Violets are plentiful and in good demand at $1.50 to $2 per 100. Sweet Peas are in small supply. Good flowers of Calendula are offered. Snapdragon is more plentiful and the stems are lengthening.

Lily of the Valley is in fair supply, but the demand is light at $6 to $10 per 100. The supply of greens of all kinds is sufficient and selling well. Plants are going well. 'Mum plants sold better than ever before. Begonias of all kinds are moving satisfactorily. Cyclamens are of good quality and in good demand at good prices. Erica melanthera is a favorite and has a good call.

Gardeners and Florists' Club

The monthly meeting of the club was held at Horticultural Hall on Tuesday evening, Nov. 19. The secretary read resolutions on the deaths of John Lally and Alexander Richter. The president apointed a committee, composed of Peter M. Miller, John L. Smith and W. N. Craig, to draw up resolutions on the death of John Blockridge, a member of the club who was killed in action in France. It was also voted to send copies of the resolutions on the death of Carl Borowski to his family. The following officers for 1919 were nominated: President, Andrew K. Rogers; vice-president, C. P. Sweetser; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, S. J. Goddard. Executive committee: George W. Hamer, James Wheeler, Herman Bartsch, James Meth-ven, William H. Judd, Walter H. Golby, Robert E. Montgomery, James Donald.

On the motion of S. J. Goddard it was voted to serve refreshments at the next meeting. During the period of the war refreshment had been given up as a patriotic act.

There were good exhibits of flowers, plants and vegetables. Janiten & Wollrath exhibited a fine group of plants, including Begonia melior and B. Cincinnati, Cyclamens and Oranges, which was awarded honorable mention. John L. Smith, of Swampscott, was given a report of merit for a plant in flower of Cattleya Moira. The William D. Edgar Co., Waverley, showed a group of plants of Euphorbia Jacquiniflora, Cyclamens, Begonias and Azaleas. S. J. Goddard exhibited a vase of Dorner's seedling Carnation No. 119, a beautiful light pink, which received a report of merit. He had also a pure white Carnation seedling of his own and also a scarlet one of Dorner's, both receiving honorable mention. The Thomas J. Grey Co. exhibited Canada Corn. W. H. Golby exceptionally fine Leeks, and Thomas W. Little, Clifton, Cucumber Tender and True, 42in. long. W. N. Craig also showed vegetables, and A. K. Rogers exhibited Apples. James Donald gave a talk on vegetable culture which was followed by a lively discussion.

About Town

The friends of Ed. J. Welch, son of Patrick Welch, will be pleased to know that he is convalescing at the Scobey Hospital. The operation for appendicitis was successful. Patrick Welch has been called for jury duty, but because of the illness of his son he has been excused for three weeks.

At a banquet given in celebration of the fifth anniversary of the establishment of the B. A. Snyder Co., at the Elks' Club, on Monday evening, Nov. 18, some 150 retailers, wholesalers and growers attended, several coming from a distance, including Frank J. Baker, Utica, N. Y., William Smith, Montreal, and Samuel Salzberg, New York. A magnificent wall clock was presented to the Snyder brothers.

As soon as news of the signing of the armistice was received orders for bulbs from large private estates came pouring into the seed houses, and there was not enough stock to supply the demand. Buyers were therefore sent to New York and Philadelphia to get bulbs to fill the large orders.

There is a shortage of flowers and the wholesale houses find it hard to get enough to fill their large orders. They say that the outlook is good for a big business.

The New England Florist Supply Co. reports excellent business. Decorating with Laurel and other greens has begun and the firm is exceptionally busy supplying the heavy demand.

The Boston Floral Supply Co., 347-357 Cambridge st., celebrated Victory Day, the Monday on which the armistice was signed, by attending the performance at B. F. Keith's Theatre. The president of the firm, Samuel Robinson, was a member of the party, which included the office force and 75 other employees. All had a most enjoyable time. The factory and office were closed during the greater part of Monday and all day Tuesday.

The New England gardeners' conference was held on Nov. 22, under the auspices of the National Association of Gardeners. Full details will be found elsewhere in this issue. R. C.

Excellent Market

Nov. 25.—Business has been good, and it looks as if the old time prosperous condition of the market had returned. In the shipping line there was more than usual activity. The local buyers are also laying in heavier stocks than formerly. Thanksgiving Day shipping started on Monday, when it was heavy and will continue so for the next two days judging from advance orders booked. It is the general opinion that this will prove the best Thanksgiving Day trade the market has ever had and that everything will clean up at good prices.

The supply of Roses appears to be coming in freely, but just what the growers will put on the market the next few days cannot be definitely stated. It is certain that there will be no surplus and that stiff prices will be maintained during the week. There is more long and fancy stock than short, so that the price of short stock had advanced considerably. All varieties are represented on the market, in good condition, from the recent novelties to the standard varieties.

Chrysanthemums predominate but the present week will see practically the end of their season, as many growers have made it a point to hold out their crops for this week's delivery. The demand for fancy stock is slightly in advance of the supply, but in the smaller flowers and pompons there is a large supply. White and pink varieties are mostly in demand; yellow pompons and small blooms of other yellows move but slowly.

The Carnation supply is getting better but still there is no abatement in price; they are bringing the best prices they have ever brought before in November. All stock cleans up daily and more could be sold if the stock could be had. They are selling this week at from $4 to $6 per 100.

The supply of orchids is larger than it has been for some time but still short of the increased demand there has been felt for these since the close of the war.

When ordering, please mention The Exchange

While the supply will be large for the present week's demand, it is thought all will clean up. Calendulas, Pansies, Mignonette, are to be had in fair supply. There are Callas, Sweet Peas, Daisies, etc., but they are in no special demand. The supply of greens is better, but prices remain firm, all stock moving, but there is no oversupply.

Retailers Organize

The retail florists have again formed an organization, starting with 24 charter members. L. R. Bohannon was elected president; A. Lange, vice-president; William Wienhoeber, secretary; F. S. Webb assistant secretary. It is their purpose for the present to hold weekly meetings.

The next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at the Randolph Hotel, Dec. 5. The election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

A. Lange, 25 E. Madison st., had an attractive advertisement in the Daily Tribune Nov. 20, in which he offers 'Mums as the "Flower of the Hour."

Rudolph Virus, 5224 Leland ave., has been hard pressed for the want of labor in his greenhouses, as his only son joined the army a year ago and is at present in France.

Sam Pearce has several houses of fine Poinsettias for Christmas sale, bench grown from cuttings. He has received large shipments of French and Holland bulbs. Mr. Pearce is of the opinion that, on account of the greatly increased cost of transportation this year, all bulb stock will bring record breaking prices in the coming Spring.

Thos. Conlon, the well known plant grower, who has had charge of the plant department of Poehlmann Bros. Co. at Morton Grove, will sever his connection with that company on Dec. 1. Mr. Conlon has so far declined to give any information as to his future plans.

The Anton Then greenhouses on Winnemac ave. are being taken down by the American House Wrecking Co. These greenhouses have been in operation for over 30 years and their removal is the passing of an old landmark.

Illinois' First Apple Show

The first Apple show, under the auspices of the Illinois Hort. Society, was held in the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, for four days, beginning Nov. 19. The show proper was held on Floor "A." The floor above, "B," was used for office and lecture rooms and contained a comprehensive exhibit of spraying machinery and insecticides. Here also box and basket manufacturers exhibited containers for shipping Apples. A cider mill was in operation and fresh cider sold to the visitors.

Prizes were offered for the best display of Apples in the various varieties, from a small trayful to twenty barrel lots. The largest commercial producer was Senator Henry M. Dunlap of Savoy, Ill., who has 1800 acres, principally in Apples, and spends more than $7000 annually for spraying materials alone. The show ended Thursday evening with an "Apple banquet" in the terrace garden of the hotel, where popular entertainment was provided during the evening.

Secretary A. M. Augustine of the Illinois State Hort. Society and other officials who worked with him have done good work in getting such an interesting exhibition together from various sections of the State.

Killed in Action

Corporal Howard R. Votaw, 97 Company, 6th U. S. Marines, was killed in action on Oct. 3. He was acting quartermaster at the battle of Chateau-Thierry and had been recommended for a commission. Corporal Votaw had many friends in the florist and allied trades in Chicago, being manager of the florist's department of the well known fertilizer house of Darling & Co. He was a member of the Chicago Florists' Club and his death will put the first gold star on the club's service flag.

A. Koch, head gardener at Garfield Park Conservatory, has received many compliments in the local papers for the fine 'Mum display now being shown at the park conservatory. Mr. Koch is an Alsatian and is greatly rejoiced over the return of his nattive country to France.

Market Firm

Nov. 26.—The market has firmed considerably for Thanksgiving Day and prospects are good for a brisk demand. Shipping trade was exceptionally heavy the fore part of the week. The supply is considered to be somewhat under normal because the Chrysanthemums are well over. There are fewer 'Mums for Thanksgiving Day in this market than generally noted in former years. Some extra fine J. Nonin are bringing $6 per doz. Eaton, Chadwick and Seidewitz big stock are all ruling about $5 per doz. Bonnaffons from $3 to $5 per doz. according to grade. Little of anything sells under $3 per doz. in any color or variety. The good supply of pompons is moving fairly well. Roses have stiffened with a declining supply; long Am. Beauty are up to $6 per doz; grade Russell $4 per doz. Carnations are going nicely at $6 per 100, selects. Cattleyas are in light supply and demand. Easter Lilies are showing a slight advance. There are more Sweet Peas to be had. Gardenias and Cypripedium insigne are starting to arrive. Snapdragon is increasing steadily.

News of the Trade

On Nov. 22 a steamer arrived at an Atlantic port with the balance of the Dutch bulbs, among them being a consignment of 250 cases to the Henry F. Michell Co. These were brought over by auto trucks.

The Henry A. Dreer, Inc., had a consignment of Valley clumps on the same steamer.

As usual Aschmann Bros. have a fine selection of flowering and foliage plants for the holiday trade, including Cyclamen, Poinsettias, Primula obconica, Begonia luminosa and ferns in variety.

The S. S. Pennock Co. is handling some superb J. Nonin Chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving Day. They were bringing $6 per doz.

Henry I. Faust of Merton has a fine lot of well flowered Cyclamen and Poinsettias for Christmas.

C. U. Liggit is spending the week visiting the growers throughout the State.

Godfrey Aschmann has a choice stock of blooming and foliage plants for Christmas. The variety includes Begonia, Primula, Solanum, Dracæna, Kentia and ferns in variety.

A happy event of the past week was the wedding of Josephine Michell, daughter of Frederick J. Michell, to W. G. Arader. It took place at Ridley Park, the home of Frederick J. Michell.

The Robert Craig Co. has this year some of the finest Cyclamen it has ever grown.

Th London Flower Shop always has attractive window displays. It has been especially noteworthy during the Chrysanthemum season.

Edward Dornheim is now with Berger Bros.

The supply houses are all overly rushed with Christmas business, showing that the trade is buying more heavily than ever before.

The Leo Niessen Co. is meeting with an exceptionally heavy shipping business this week.

Kansas City, Mo.

Local florists report heavy business and satisfactory prices, although stock is limited in variety and rather scarce. There seems to be little let-up in the heavy business that has been experienced for some weeks past. The business of the flower shops has come to indicate, in a way, the state of the city's health, as there have been few orders except for sick rooms and funerals for more than a year. Although the great rush of work that meant night work for many of the greenhouses and shops has abated, but there is still a steady and heavy business every day. The strange situation of there being practically no 'Mums for Thanksgiving Day will prevail in Kansas City this year. Growers have cleaned up on these blooms early; this has been partly due to the warm weather of early November. The few 'Mums left have been selling for from $1.50 to $4 a doz. wholesale. Roses were from 8c. to 20c. apiece. With the going of 'Mums, Roses were the only thing left, Carnations not having come in yet. B. S. B.

Toronto Retail Florists' Club

Owing to the big peace celebration on Nov. 11, the regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club was held on Nov. 18. There was lots of "pep" and it proved to be one of the most interesting and largest attended meetings yet held. Geo. Geraghty, who has been ill with pneumonia, occupied the chair and was given a hearty welcome.

Mr. Carter was made chairman of the sick committee, consisting of Messrs. Carter, Parker and Fletcher. A generous collection was taken up to permit sending jellies, fruit, etc., to members who may be ill.

A discussion took place on the value of promoting the window box trade in Toronto and to have the restrictions removed so that Toronto could vie with Ottawa, Rochester and other places as a beautiful city. Banks, office buildings, warehouses, clubs and factories are all good prospects for window boxes.

The formation of a Dominion wide retail florists' organization was energetically discussed. Inquiries concerning this have been received from Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg and Calgary, so that the success of such a movement is practically assured. A committee consisting of S. McFadden, chairman, and Messrs. Dillemuth, Waters, Carter and Parker, was appointed to send out a questionnaire to the florists of Canada to see how many are in favor of such an organization and to do any necessary preliminary organization work. J. J. Higgins was appointed financial secretary to supervise collections and handling of advertising and all special accounts.

The question of duty on palms and ferns was discussed and will be taken up again at a later meeting.

A request is to be made to the Toronto Hydro Commission to allow retail stores again to illuminate their windows at night.

Christmas advertising literature is being printed. This year florists in Hamilton, London, Ottawa and Montreal will join the Toronto florists in their Christmas advertising campaign.

Figuring Costs

H. G. Dillemuth read an excellent paper on the "Cost of Doing Business," in which he showed conclusively that the invoice did not represent the cost since there were many losses due to telephone calls, express charges, damaged flowers and regrading, which must be taken into account when figuring up the cost. These increase the invoice cost by 20 per cent. To this must be added a percentage covering overhead expenses such as rent, heat, salaries, deliveries, paper, etc. This latter should be recorded carefully.

In making up designs the cost of all materials entering into them must be taken into account before any work is done, otherwise there is every possibility of the design being sold at a loss. The goods should not cost over one-third of the price of the design.

Delivery costs vary with the distance and number of orders, but due allowance must be made for this by making sufficient charges, especially if the delivery is a long one.

People handling non-perishable goods add 100 per cent. to cost, but some florists think they can make a profit by an addition of 25 per cent. Such people do not consider losses.

Mr. Dillemuth then described the system of making up designs at the floral shop of A. W. Smith. When a sale is made the order is sent to another department, where the manager makes a study of flower costs and selects the quantity and quality of stock in keeping with the sales price and to permit a fair profit on the design.

"No matter how small the business," said Mr. Dillemuth, "there should be a cost accounting system to show whether or not profits are being made."

This paper will be discussed at the Dec. 9 meeting of the club. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting. The club rooms have been supplied with games of all kinds by the executive committee and members greatly enjoy the entertainment. A euchre party will be held at an early date to help in purchasing some much needed club room equipment.

Memorial Grove

The president of the St. Thomas Horticultural Society has proposed to establish a memorial grove of English Oaks in a suitable portion of Pinafore Park. Each tree would bear the name of a St. Thomas hero who fell in the service of his country.

Toronto, Ont. Canada

Next meeting of the Retail Florists' Club, Dec. 9.

Next meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Ass'n, Dec. 17.

Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Ass'n was held at St. George's Hall, Toronto, on Tuesday, Nov. 19, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Pres., H. G. Dillemuth; First Vice-Pres., Geo. H. Mills; Second Vice-Pres., F. D. Clark; Secretary, Alex. Simpson; Treas., George Hall; Executive Board, Thomas Manton, Frank Fletcher, John Wood, Geo. Douglas, L. P. Whittick, Geo. Thompson and Ernest F. Collins; Delegate to the Canadian National Exhibition, Thomas Manton; Representatives to the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition, Geo. Douglas, Alex Simpson, E. F. Collins and L. P. Whittick. A vote of thanks was tendered to the retiring officers: Alex Simpson, Pres.; Geo. H. Mills, Treas., and Geo. Douglas, Secretary.

Mr. Dillemuth made a short address in which he complimented the officials on their efficient work. He urged members to attend regularly and take part in the discussions.

The Canadian Horticultural Ass'n meet in Toronto next August and early plans must be made for that convention to insure a record attendance and make Toronto pre-eminent as a convention center. The next meeting will be held on Dec. 17, when the Agricultural Act of Ontario will be discussed.

Mr. Hall suggested that it would be of mutual interest to have fraternal intercourse with the S. A. F. and O. H.

The usual monthly exhibition was held, Geo. Thompson, of Sir Henry Pellatt's greenhouses being awarded nine points for 'Mums and the Allen Gardens a similar number of points on a Dracena. It was decided to extend these exhibitions and probably increase the prize list.

In a discussion on conventions the many benefits of meeting together were pointed out, enlarging the viewpoint of all and improving the industry. A committee will be appointed at the December meeting to meet with a similar meeting of the Retail Florists' Club and arrange for entertaining the executive of the Canadian Horticultural Ass'n when it meets in Toronto in January and the convention when it meets in August next.

News Notes

Mrs. Moore is busy these days supervising the redecorating and painting of the two stores of the People's Florists at 336 Queen st. west and 92 Queen st. east. Both stores are being finished in white enamel and equipped with new counters, wicker furniture and plate mirrors. Mr. James in commenting on them, said: "We are going to have two of the finest floral stores in Toronto."

A. Allen has opened the greenhouses at Duncan, B. C., previously occupied by the Victoria Island nurseries. Mr. Allen was formerly manager of the Covent Garden greenhouses at Cobble Hill.

The sympathy of Toronto gardeners and florists is being extended to J. C. Clark, gardener for Sir Wm. Mulock, whose wife died recently.

Mr. Brown, formerly operating the Majestic flower shop in Toronto, has opened the Arbor Florist Store in Hamilton.

E. Fry, "College St. Florist," has returned from Midland where he has been constructing a nine hole golf course for the Midland Golf club.

Norman Scrim of Scrims, florists, Ottawa, while visiting in Toronto this week, received word of his discharge from the army.

Harry Jones has opened a floral shop on Queen st., near Bathurst. G. C. K.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

Notice to Growers Using Our Advertising Columns

It is vital, to ensure the good will of your customers, that you faithfully observe

THE FOLLOWING RULES

1. Stop your ad as soon as sold out.
2. Acknowlege orders same day as received.
3. Answer all questions by return mail.
4. Pack carefully, securely, yet lightly.
5. Ship same day as order is received or send postal notifying day you will ship.
6. Ship by least expensive route.

Following these directions will make you friends and keep your business enlarging.

☞ When convincing proof reaches us that an advertiser is not doing squarely by his customers, these columns will be absolutely closed against him for good.

NOTE:—Advertisers will do well to ask for a business reference before shipping when order from unknown party is not accompanied by cash.

The Market

Market the past week showed advanced prices. Stock will be decidedly scarce and high for Thanksgiving Day. Carnations are quoted at 5c. and 6c.; Roses from 6c. up, Russells 8c. to 25c.; Narcissus 5c.; Stevia 35c. per bunch; 'Mums 8c. to 35c. Violets are scarce and selling at 75c. per 100. Fancy 'Mums, Eatons, Chadwick, are now arriving and selling from $4 to $5 per doz.

The wholesalers expect the biggest Thanksgiving Day in years, and the retailers are scrambling for stock. From the aid of extensive publicity advertising in the daily papers they expect a volume of business which will tax them to the limit. They believe the ending of the war and the near approach of the coming home of many of the boys will stimulate trade above all expectations.

Club Meeting

The postponed meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held at the Missouri Botanical Garden, Nov. 21, President Hummert in the chair, and about 30 members present. There was a discussion as to how to increase the membership of the publicity party and how to increase funds. Fred Ammann, president elect of the S. A. F., spoke of the great future bound to come to the flower business through the peace armistice and the return of our boys. Secretary J. J. Windler moved a resolution that the next meeting of the club in December be termed Victory Meeting, that all florists should be invited, and, as now, members should hear some good speaker talk on the benefits of cooperation in regard to the publicity movement. R. W. Rowe and others spoke. Luther Armstrong brought a few blooms of his yellow 'Mum Japanese variety which he has called Marjorie Armstrong. The secretary was instructed to send a letter to the family of James Young in commiseration of their loss.

Applications for membership from Charles Connon of Webster, Mo., and Julius Schaeffer, manager of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney.

St. Louis growers met Nov. 20, at 11 Mile House, all officers present. A Chrysanthemum show was given and the blooms were donated to the proprietor of the 11 Mile House. After the show publicity was discussed in general.

Application for membership by George F. Deutchmann. Growers well pleased with the prices now obtained on market. Next meeting Dec. 4.

News of the Trade

A dinner was held Thursday, Nov. 21, at Statler Hotel, and arrangements perfected as to the part the florists will play in the peace parade Dec. 7. It is contemplated to have a huge float with a banner, "Say It with Flowers," decorated with National Colors.

Personals

Chadwick blooms in yellow and white are seen at H. G. Bernings.

Alex. Sigel has increased his business and his stand is one of the busiest in the city.

Julius Diloff is in town this week. He is with Wertheimer Bros., of New York.

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES
Z-I-N-C-O WHAT IT IS

Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

Save Coal on Greenhouse Boilers

May we send you on a month's trial, prepaid, a Coggeshall Air Tube Cleaner to clean your boiler tubes? It creates its own air pressure with the use of low pressure steam.

Specially Adapted for Greenhouse Boilers

It cleans your boiler perfectly in four minutes, while running. It does away with the hand method. It saves its cost before the trial is ended. It can be returned, express collect, if you do not find it to your interest to purchase the cleaner. It lasts a lifetime. There are thousands in use. The price is $12.00.

– Everybody Happy – Uncle Samuel Says We Can Build Greenhouses Again

ALL the time our factory has been filled with war work, we have not for a minute forgotten about the greenhouses you would want when the war was over.

We saw to it that there should be plenty of materials on hand to promptly fill your early orders.

Unless all signs fail, and all sound judgments are wrong, there are years of great prosperity ahead.

Those of you who are best equipped to take advantage of it, will, of course, best profit by it.

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

Plant Exclusion an Accomplished Fact

o that the situation may be thoroughly understood, . to aid our readers in having before them as com- te a detail of the provisions of this ordinance signed Secretary of Agriculture D. F. Houston, Nov. 18, it is possible to give at this time, we submit the owing:

'lants and stocks to be excluded after June 1, 1919.

roup 1—Azaleas, Rhododendrons, Palms, Araucar- Bay trees, Hollies, Ericas and Acacias.

roup 2.—Conifers, dwarf and other kinds, Buxus, , usually shipped as specimen plants.

roup 3—Small potted plants, including Roses, Chrys- hemums, Violets, tender bedding plants, ferns, trop- and sub-tropical plants, etc.

roup 4—Clumps of hardy perennials used in forcing, anese Maples, Magnolias, etc.

egulation 2 provides for the unrestricted entry of groups of plants, namely (1) fruits, vegetables, ce- s, and other plant products imported for food pur- es; and (2) field, vegetable and flower seeds.

egulation 3 provides, under compliance with the con- ons of the subsequent regulations, for the importa- of five groups of plants as follows:

1) Lily bulbs, Lily of the Valley, Narcissus, Hya- hs, Tulips and Crocus, free from balls of soil or h.

2) Fruit stocks, seedlings, cuttings, scions, and buds ruits for reproduction purposes.

3) Rose stocks for reproduction purposes, includ- Manetti, Multiflora, Briar Rose, and Rosa Rugosa.

4) Nuts, including palm seeds, for oil or reproduction poses.

5) Seeds of fruit, forest, ornamental and shade trees, seeds of deciduous and evergreen ornamental shrubs, and seeds of hardy perennial plants.

We have it under the authority of the Federal Horticultural Board, that regulation 3 excludes all roots and bulbs except those specifically mentioned in item (1) and those imported for medicinal, food or manufacturing purposes. Under this ruling it will be forbidden to import, among other material:

Amaryllis	English Iris	Muscari
Anenome, or Windflower	Freesia	Peonies
	Fritillaria	Ranunculus
Begonia, Tuberous-rooted	Gladiolus	Richardia
	Gloxinia	Snowdrops
Chionodoxa	Iris	Scilla
Colchicum	Ixia	Spanish Iris
Dicentra	Montbretia	and others

Just why these distinctions we are not in a position to explain. Certain it is that while some of these items can be and are grown here freely, and even exported in quantity, as Gladioli, Peonies and Freesias, such bulbs and roots as Chionodoxa, some of the Iris, Muscari, Scilla, Snowdrops and in fact, every species of bulb or root which is not specifically mentioned under regulation No. (1), will be unobtainable in the United States after exhaustion of such stocks as may be imported between now and June 1 next.

Although vigorous protest against that portion of the Exclusion ordinance which affects the florists was made by the officials of the Society of American Florists, the florists themselves, as a rule, have made no expression of opinion on the subject, one way or the other; therefore it is hard to say how trade opinion will run when the full consciousness of this far-reaching edict is realized.

Full Steam Ahead

the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill.:

: looks to us today as if the results of the cessation var operations could be nothting but beneficial to all s of horticulture. The labor situation will un- btedly improve and certainly shipping conditions not be any worse than in the past, with all likelihood improvement. There is no reason why a pros- ous trade should not start in immediately and im- 've as time goes on. Perhaps we are too optimistic; ever, this is the way it looks to us at this time.

Wallace R. Pierson, Sec'y A. N. Pierson, Inc., Plant and Flower Growers, Cromwell, Conn.:

ow that the war is practically over, I feel, when I back over the past year, that my prophecy at time, to the effect that I did not believe the war ld make any great material difference to the florists' ness, was correct. We have all worked a little ler. We have not gained material wealth, but I be- : that we all are better for it. We will know better he future how to handle our business. We are g to be able to get more for our money in the way abor, in spite of the fact that we are paying out e money. There is a better feeling now between employee and the employer. We have had it hard, a financial standpoint, but our loss has been as ing when compared with the losses suffered in other tries.

still believe that the florist trade in this country is ving and has derived benefits which will more than et any losses sustained. I believe there is a very ht prospect for the future. I still believe, how- ; that anyone who is not in the greenhouse business ld be wise to keep out of it. I do not believe that s, iron and labor, at the prices of today can be fitably used in constructing greenhouses, but those ch are already built will, in a very short time, be to recuperate from the financial loss caused by the

Macnair, Florist, Providence, R. I.:

Although Thanksgiving business was flat we are in wise to remain discouraged. The dullness was caused constant money appeals, and the ding dong on the blic's mind that somehow peace was to have its ups downs; and maybe "demnition bow wows" if we n't look out. Somehow each generation considers its blems as the apex of long accumulated difficulties, ch statesmen and master minds alone may find a way straighten out. Politely stated this attitude is one of in bluff, both statesmen and the public contributing. re is a way out, always.

When America got into the war, folks were requested in a large and public manner to economize and right here the florist got his bumps and is today getting them. Notwithstanding one or two startlingly good holidays, we have felt the pinch. The rich man, especially bade the buds and blossoms goodbye, and is still doing the Rip Van Winkle. If it had not been for Mr. Middle Class, the business would have touched a wicked rock bottom. And thereby hangs a moral: viz, the next time Mr. or Mrs. Wealthy asks you to scour the market for something special, tell them it will cost so much and so much, and on your life don't handle the commission unless it affords you a living and then some. The truth of the matter is that the rich have used the florist as a football during the past decade, and now at last we realize we are free and that the average customer has turned the trick for us. There are exceptions, of course, and may a beneficent Providence bless the rich customer who did the handsome thing by his florist since 1914.

Sometimes the florist proprietor thought the end was near, when lo and behold a windfall of business approached and helped over the rough places. Time and again this has happened during the past two years, and we must look for it again and keep on expecting, for as surely as the flower business is not frivolous, this strange salvation will show up on time. People may forget us the while, customers pass down on the other side, likely prospects conclude that they won't purchase just now, and our hearts are submerged in gloom. But don't let your shop do any submerging, nor your face, nor the tone of your voice. Keep everlastingly at it, Mr. Storekeeper; sell most of your goods at a goodly profit, clean up at some price, but with discernment, and don't ever dwell on the proposition that the flower trade is some day destined to be on the blink.

We are needed; our blossoms are needed, and you have but to look back on the recent heavy call for our goods, when as sure as the needle turned to the north, bereaved families looked to us for a way out of the gloom; eloquent testimony to our most worthy profession and its ability to serve.

Memorial Trees for Heroic Dead

The New York City Park Department has contracted for 40 American Elms to be planted on an avenue in Central Park to commemorate the New York City soldiers and sailors who fell in the great war. These trees are nursery grown, perfect in form, 30 feet high and 8 to 10 inches in diameter. They are to be delivered and planted next Spring. Each will represent a local draft board and will bear a bronze tablet whose design will be approved by the Municipal Park Commission, and whose details will be prepared by the community Council of National Defense. All the tablets will be identical except as to size, this feature being governed by the number of heroes named to be included and the brief motto or sentiment peculiarly suited to the draft district it represents.

The idea of planting trees in memory of soldiers' deaths is credited to the American Forestry Association, though as announced last week it probably had its inception at the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen in Chicago in June last. The American Forestry Association pointed out the desirability of shading the Lincoln Highway with trees that might have local significance and associations so as to assure their preservation by the community through which the highway passes.

The suggestion has found immediate favor, and many communities far from the highway have signified their intention to plant memorial trees in open squares and parks. Some of the middle Western towns have even arranged for the creation of groves with trees to commemorate not only their dead, but many notable incidents of the war, including expressions of public men that give promise of becoming immortal.

It has been suggested that the planting of each tree be made the occasion for a memorial service, to be conducted by the local community council of the draft board district in honor of whose dead each tree is marked.

Collecting Back Due Accounts from Men in the Service

We have received several inquiries as to how men can be proceeded against who, joining the Colors, have left unpaid debts for the payment of which they have made no provision and whose family shows no disposition to assume these obligations. So far as we can learn the situation here is much the same as that related by our correspondent who writes us:

"In Great Britain all subjects who have been called up for military service are protected by a section of the Moratorium Act and cannot be proceeded against unless by special authority of a court of justice. This authority is not difficult to obtain, provided it can be shown that the means exist to pay the debt. But you cannot sell a man up while on Service, neither can you turn his wife out into the streets on account of unpaid rent, but if she is receiving the regulation State allowance while her husband is on duty, she can be compelled to pay."

The law enacted by Congress to protect the soldiers and sailors of this country from having judgments entered against them while they were in the service of their country provides among other things that the execution of any judgment or order entered against such soldier or sailor may be stayed or vacated, or a stay of any attachment or garniture of property for debts by order of the court. Thus, as past due accounts cannot be sued for and recovered, it is up to the trade to protect itself by refusing to extend credit on sales to those who are liable to avoid payment of their debts by securing benefit under this act.

Watch Your Selling Price

The United States Food Administration has just published some interesting figures as to the profits of the Childs Company, which owns many restaurants in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities. In 1917 this corporation served more than 50,000,000 meals at an average cost of 27.26 cents and a profit of 1.78 cents each. During the first eight months of 1918 it served upward of 40,000,000 meals costing an average of 31.38 cents and yielding a profit of three-quarters of a cent each. This reduction of profits was partly due to a 15 per cent. increased cost of materials, etc., partly to wage bonuses paid to employees.

These figures have an interest for the florist because they show that the profits in any transaction may be greatly reduced by sales on which practically nothing is made; also that it is essential to figure all sorts of items to determine whether the balance shall show a true profit or really a loss. If a concern like the Childs Company, which practices rigid economies must look to the fractions of cents in order to make money how is the florist to conduct his business when the actual cost of production and of sale are not systematically figured at regular intervals and a reasonable percentage of profit added to the selling price? Some florists are already awake to this matter, but perhaps the great majority are still sleeping.

"Often we amateurs see in our gardens things that we didn't plant, but are afraid to pull them up for fear we did."—Fargo Courier-News.

"Tommy," asked his uncle, "what is the name of May's young man?" "I call him April Showers," replied Tommy. "April Showers! Whatever makes you call him such a ridiculous name?" "Because he brings May flowers," Tommy explained".—Tid-Bits.

Here is a specimen of newspaper English from a California newspaper: "The bridegrooms present to the bride was a handsome diamond brooch, with many other beautiful things in cut glass." Another good one is from an Iowa paper. It reads: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fremont are the proud parents of a fourth son since last Thursday." At this rate how many children will the Fremonts have by Christmas?

Adiantum Farleyense Gloriosum

A Valuable Florist Fern

There is every indication that flowers ll be short for the coming Christmas h in pots and cut. You can't make a stake in stocking up well with almost rthing that can be used to advantage the filling of dishes, pans and baskets. ile for this purpose Asparagus plumsus and almost any of the table ferns useful in connection with small Beias, Primulas or Cyclamen, Adiantum rleyense gloriosum will not only add atly to make attractive arrangements will be appreciated by your patrons something a little out of the ordinary. is new form is more hardy than the Farleyense and therefore more deible. The beautiful, pinkish color of young fronds with the soft green of older ones give a dainty setting to r flower. Even small 2½in. stock be used to good advantage. While is almost impossible for the smaller wer to handle or grow on his own uirements and make it pay he can ke money out of it by purchasing his plies ready grown now and have the ots on hand when needed for Christmas k. There isn't any reason why only large florist in the big city should dle this fern. The smaller out of n man can do the very same thing and reby prove to his patrons that he is to date.

Christmas Suggestions

Plants to Take the Place of Flowering Stock

With all the neighbors I visited and h myself since Thanksgiving Day iness has been the best ever. The only son for complaint was due to lack stock. While there no doubt were extions in other localities, it is safe to liet that the very same thing will pen around Christmas. So if you eager to get the most out of that it holiday you must get ready. If you be short of flowering plants, which will no doubt know by this time, e is only one good way out of it: palms, ferns, ornamental plants and plenty of red ribbon instead. Birdnest ferns, Crotons and the many beautiful sorts of Nephrolepis all make desirable holiday stock. Moderate sized palms are always a good and safe investment. I feel sorry for the man who is sold out when the last Cyclamen or Begonia Cincinnati leaves the establishment. Poor management, that is all one can call it. Green and red are the colors for Christmas. Every one of us can furnish them. A nice fern in a neat basket with red ribbon on the handle, or one in a pot cover with red ribbon, is deserving of a prominent position in your display. That is only one of many desirable Christmas plants.

Roman Hyacinths

For Late Forcing

No doubt a good many florists will miss the Romans this Christmas. Nothing else we have will quite take their place for filling small dishes, pans or inexpensive hampers. Some, of course, will come in on time but with many the bulbs arrived too late. Late shipments are still coming along and I am sure it will still pay to plant bulbs, for to all apearances there will be more or less of a shortage of bulb stock all through the Winter. One may use the Roman Hyacinths to best advantage both as cut flowers and as pot plants. If you can fill a small basket with a half dozen Romans, a few ferns and a little ribbon and obtain from $1 to $2 for it according to size there is every bit as much money in it as there would be in Tulips, Narcissi or Carnations. Customers will buy them, even occasionally prefer them, to cut flowers if given a chance to see them, especially this season when there will be a scarcity around Christmas. If the plants are intended to be used not so much for cut flowers as for plants to be lifted and potted up allow one inch or so of space between the bulbs in the flats; it will give you shorter and stockier plants.

Climbing Roses

Now is the proper time to place your order for whatever climbing Roses you need for sale next Spring in pots. No doubt there are florists who do a good bedding plant business in Spring but who don't think it worth while to bother with such Roses because they have no call for them. But the only reason that they don't is because they have no plants to offer. It matters little where you are located and just how unsatisfactory Roses may be in your neighborhood, people are sure to plant Roses and are willing to keep on taking a chance with them. With just a little pushing every retail grower may during Spring dispose of more or less of them with a good margin of profit. To plant dormant stock in Spring of climbing Roses such as Crimson rambler, Tausendschœn, Hiawatha, Lady Gay or Dorothy Perkins means that the plants have to be cut away back, and the stock will make but little showing the first year. A much better way is to plant pot plants such as have been potted up during January and kept practically dormant in a frame or cold house until Spring. With such treatment plants with 3ft. to 5ft. canes may be planted out in May and flowers enjoyed the first year. That means that you may realize a good price for such stock and please your customers at the same time.

Lilacs for Forcing

Lilacs in flower any time during the Winter and early Spring months always sell well and attract attention in the store of the retail florist. There is nothing to bringing the plants into flower if you have pot grown stock to do it with. While you may not wish to go heavily into it, a few plants coming along from February until April are sure to bring good returns. Pot grown stock and the same time home grown can be bought at reasonable prices now. Kept in a deep coldframe until needed for forcing, they will prove a good investment. Plants not sold may be planted out next Spring in nursery rows. In a couple of years they will develop again into nice specimens.

Jerusalem Cherries

There are two ways of increasing your stock of Jerusalem Cherries: One by seed, the other by selecting some of the nicest plants for stock to take cuttings from. Cuttings root easily. The variety known as Cleveland is the only one to grow. It makes an ideal Christmas plant. Now is the time to select a plant or two to be used later on for stock. Don't wait until after Christmas and be obliged to make almost anything do in order to obtain enough seed or cuttings for your next year's demands. As with other plants so with these Peppers, it pays to select the very best for propagating. You won't be able to do that around New Year's.

Pansies Under Glass

Don't neglect to reserve at least a part of the Chrysanthemum benches for a good sized batch of Pansies. These plants don't require much heat. They take up little space, flower for months and will pay any retail grower to handle. But you must keep them clear of aphis. When you plant them put into the same house a few Forgetmenots as well as some double Sweet Alyssum. From the end of January these plants will furnish flowers up to the time things flower again outdoors.

Chrysanthemum Soil

Most crops to be grown on in the benches where the Chrysanthemums flowered are usually planted in the soil the 'Mums came out of. Good results are obtained. If you have Geraniums or other bedding stock to be potted up this soil usually will answer, but better results may be had if one-half fresh soil, free from manure, is mixed with the 'Mum soil. If you have a good supply of soil on hand for potting it is still better to dump the old soil outdoors so the Winter's frost may get a chance at it. Small bedding stock doesn't need heavily manured soil nor do the young Carnations. Too much stable manure is as bad as no manure at all, if not worse. 'Mum soil which received a lot of food and has been watered practically every day for the past five months is anything but good enough for potting.

National Publicity Campaign

early every mail now brings to the etary's office requests, accompanied cash, for deliveries of flowers at istmas in different parts of the coun- Many, of course, are from soldiers France. If our publicity is working this extent abroad, what may we ex- it is doing here at home? Our an, "Say It with Flowers," is taking l better even than we expected. And Christmas advertisements in the azines are doing just what we inled they should do: They are influing the public to consider floral offer- as most acceptable and desirable istmas gifts.

t may be stated once more, that eight azines of national circulation are rying our Christmas message. If we judge by indications, this advertis- will result in an enormous amount of iness for florists, which without this rtising would not be produced. And yet hundreds of florists who will share in this increased business seem to be unable to make up their minds that it is to their own interests to subscribe to our publicity campaign fund, so that we can complete our plans for the present year. Most subscribers of amounts of $100 or more are amazed to think that in spite of an improved demand for flowers resulting from our efforts so far there is an apparent unwillingness on the part of many florists to shoulder even a very small proportion of the expense. A quarter of a dollar a week seems an insignificant sum, but we should be glad to enter up subscriptions for it just the same—less if anybody thinks he cannot afford that much.

Those among our subscribers who have watched closely the progress of our campaign declare that there can be no doubt about the fact that business has been increased from 15 per cent. to 35 per cent. over what would have been the aggregate this particularly lean year.

The best way to get direct benefit from our magazine advertising is to connect with it locally by running in in local newspapers, under the florist's own name, an electrotype which is, as nearly as possible, a counterpart of the magazine advertisement. Our promotion bureau, at 1170 Broadway, New York, supplies these electrotyes at cost. The Christmas electrotype is now ready. Send us $1 and it will be promptly mailed. With proper use it will demonstrate to you better than anything else the value of our campaign. It is a sure winner. The hundreds of florists who have used the electrotypes previously sent out are all back again for the Christmas production. They know its value, for they have determined it by experience.

We have a little pamphlet describing all our aids for direct advertising. Anyone who has not received a copy should drop us a request for one. These aids are designed especially to assist the trade to get the full benefit from our advertising.

Representation on the Executive Board

The officers of the various florists' clubs and societies are reminded that if their organization can qualify for representation on the executive board of the S. A. F. and O. H. evidence of qualification in accordance with Bylaw 2 Sec. 2(a) must be in the hands of the secretary before Jan. 1 next. It is necessary under the bylaw that a complete list of membership of an affiliating organization be presented, together with a certified copy of a resolution passed by the body expressing a desire for such representation.

Scale Insect on Ferns

Will you kindly tell me what the trouble is with the fern leaves of which I am sending a sample? Is it a kind of scale insect? It appears on what seems to be otherwise perfectly healthy and vigorously growing plants. What is the cause and what remedy do you recommend?—A. M. M., N. Y.

—The insects on the frond submitted for inspection are scale insects; the nearly white ones are the young and the brown the old insects. To destroy these spray the fronds, especially on the undersides, with a soap solution made by dissolving one ounce of Ivory soap in five quarts of boiling water, using this solution while warm, or spray with kerosene soap emulsion. When practicable it is still better to dip the ferns in the soap solution or keresone soap emulsion.

Directory of Nurserymen

The directory of the American Association of Nurserymen, dated Oct., 1918, has just come to hand. It gives names of firms or individuals entitled to wholesale or trade listing, arranged by States. These lists were furnished to the secretary of the association by the vice-presidents of the States listed.

WESTERLY, R. I.—It is reported that the land and greenhouses formerly owned and occupied by S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., on Beach st., and now the property of the Washington Trust Co., have been the subject of negotiations by Charles Munro of New Haven, Conn., who has a greenhouse and retail store in that city. It is said that the deal is practically closed, and it is quite possible that by the time this appears in print that the sale will have been brought about.

European Notes

Peace once more is ours. Our hearts e so full of joy and thankfulness that a mundane matters as seeds have t received the attention they deserve. The true purpose of the spirit of ankfulness is to stimulate us to make best possible use of the glorious opportunities now vouchsafed to us, and s in some measure to undo what ould never have been done.

A famous and successful American neral, whose acquaintance the writer ade many years ago at the Fifth Ave- e Hotel, New York City, is reported have said, with a full knowledge of true facts of the case, "War is ell!" No one who has had to spend e past four years moving about in the lied countries of Europe will doubt e justice of the remark. A double ty now lies before us: we have to re- im that which has ruthlessly been laid ste, and render more fruitful the land nich has remained inviolate. Only in s way can even the bare needs of hu- nity be provided for. To enable this portant work to be done the intelligent i of the seed grower and merchant ust be enlisted. Free scope must be orded him to bring his abilities and contributions into play. The sense- s and needlessly irritating restriction it may(?) have been necessary while war was proceeding should be comtely swept away at once. The statent that man does not live by bread one falls unheeded by the official mind ich is also utterly oblivious of the t that the first duty assigned to man his Creator was to dress and keep d enjoy a garden and be nourished the fruits thereof. Happily for us the experience of the past four years s indelibly impressed the full meanof these facts upon the whole of civild humanity, as the splendid success the allotment movement bears ample imony.

Now just a brief report upon the esent conditions in regard to seeds. e weather being much more favorable harvesting of our late ripening crops oceeds apace. Mangels, particularly long red variety, have not developed we expected prices therefore remain n. Threshings of earlier crops are not isfactory in several cases, notably as, of which many samples will lose ly 50 per cent. in picking. This will tend still further discourage the growers this most important crop. The alst fabulous price obtained for Pars- seed last season induced many garers to allow their roots to stand for d. The result is a surplus of unrele seed, which brings down the price seed properly grown to an unremuative level. Onion and Carrot present ilar features and for the same reason. nditions appear to be similar on your e. European Seeds.

The Liberation of Bruges

The recent successes in Belgium have ulted in the liberation of the town of ges. It is interesting to learn that business at Messrs. Sanders' nursery ablishment at St. Andre, Bruges, has en carried on by the staff during the r years the town was occupied by the rmans. Messrs. Sanders received a let- from the manager, T. Mellstrom, inming them that he was well, but that nursery had suffered considerable mage, mainly in broken glass. He also ted that they were able to maintain portion of the stock of plants. It is grettable that the head of the clerical partment was killed on the day before e town was liberated. During the rlier part of the war business was ssible, mainly with America, but more ently all communication with the head ablishment at St. Albans had ceased. d there was no knowledge as to whether e nursery was even in existence. It is to be hoped that the many large nursery establishments in and about Ghent may be equally fortunate in escaping total destruction, as the nursery trade of Ghent and Bruges was one of the principal industries of this part of Belgium. —Gardeners' Chronicle. (The preceding was written before the signing of the armistice. It is quite probable that conditions have improved since then.—Ed.)

New York Seed Trade

These are days of anticipation and preparation in the seed stores, rather than of any considerable volume of sales over the conter. The travelers of these stores are now going their rounds, their hopes now increased by the reasonable expectation that many private estates will reopen their greenhouses now or in early Spring, and give the usual attention to flowers and plants, as well as to fancy outdoor vegetable gardening, and will consequently buy the usual supply of seeds, bulbs, roots and plants. In fact not a few such orders have already been booked by the travelers.

The sales of Dutch and French bulbs, which have practically exhausted the supply, except a few remnants, now being over, the next bulbous items of stock to arrive will be the samll flowered forcing varieties of Gladioli, some of which are already reported to be on the way, and also large flowered Gladioli, Lily of the Valley, Gloxinias and tuberous rooted Begonias.

Lieut. Robert M. Burnett, son of Geo. Burnett of Burnett Bros., 94 Chambers st., who has been a member of the 29th U. S. Army Division, known as the "Blue and the Gray," has returned to civil life, having completed his term of military service covering a period of two and one-half years in the Mexican difficulty and in the recent great war.

Robert Kerr, formerly a well known private gardener, but more recently of the Islip Greenhouses, Islip, L. I., died on Friday morning, Nov. 29, of pneumonia, following an attack of influenza. The funeral services were held on Sunday, Dec. 1, in the Episcopal Church at Islip. Mr. Kerr is survived by a widow and one son.

Chicago Seed Trade

Fred Lempke represented the W. W. Barnard Co. at the meeting of the Wisconsin Pea Packers Ass'n in Milwaukee, beginning Nov. 25, and continuing four days. He reports an interesting meeting.

D. D. P. Roy, who for the past few years conducted a seed store in Lake Forest, and who was recently declared a bankrupt, has accepted a position with the American Bulb Co. It is the intention of this company to open a retail seed department in its store at 172 N. Wabash ave., under the direction of Mr. Roy.

Chas. O. Wilcox, well known traveling salesman, until recently with the W. W. Barnard Co., has accepted a similar position with Wood Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky. Mr. Wilcox has a wide acquaintance with the seed trade in the Southern States. He will continue to make his home in Chicago.

Seedsmen who are preparing to handle the usual line of decorative greens for the Christmas trade report a scarcity, especially in bouquet greens and Holly. Prices will be considerably higher than in former years. There has been a stimulation of business since the signing of the armistice, but now weather conditions for picking are not so favorable. It will be too late to make the shipments by freight and to send them by express will so greatly increase the cost that the price may become prohibitive.

Private Ed. Goldemstein, who for many years had charge of the bulb department of Vaughan's Seed Store, before joining the army, has been given his discharge and is again busy at his desk.

Three delayed lots of Dutch bulbs for Vaughans' Seed Store have reached the city. This enables the firm to complete all orders booked and accept some new ones. The delay in docking those late shipments in New York and getting them through the Customs have been a great disappointment to both importers and growers, who have waited more than two months for these bulbs.

Kentucky Seed Notes

While peace was expected to develop a big export demand for Blue Grass, Orchard Grass and other Kentucky field seeds, it now appears that shipping will be needed to supply food, clothing, lumber steel, etc., for Europe, and that seeds may be one of the last commodities exported. It is claimed that Europe is far more concerned in clearing off wreckage and straightening things up than in replanting lawns. The result has been that prices have not strengthened as a result of peace.

As a fact prices are now so high that no one is interested in seeds, and the market is claimed to be top heavy. Retail dealers and jobbers are not buying for Spring delivery, but are waiting to see what the market will do. The result is that the market is stagnant just now.

Louisville dealers are making an effort to place all seed sales on the basis of 100 lbs. quotations, instead of quoting by the pound and the bushel. The Government has been backing this movement, as shown in quotations on produce of various kinds. Due to indifferent measures the 100 lbs. basis is a safe basis upon which to buy and sell. At present jobbers quote the following prices on principal seeds handled in this district: Blue Grass, $23.25 per 100 lbs.; Orchard Grass, $28; Timothy, $12; Red Clover, $44; Alsike, $35; Alfalfa, $22; Red Top, $15.50.

The Onion set market is interesting at present because prices named are far from actual valuation. For instance, speculators and large buyers are keeping off until things settle down somewhat. Southern buying has slumped as the demand is supplied. The result is that there is no immediate demand, so it appears no real demand will occur until January when the big movement generally starts. In the meantime a few growers who need ready cash are bringing a few barrels of sets on the market. The commission merchants are not interested in taking them, carrying them and taking chances with the market, except at very low figures. The result has been that small lots have been sold by growers at $7.50 to $8 for colored sets, and $9 for white ones, according to the usual differential of $1 per barrel. However, these prices do not establish the market, which should be around $9 for colored sets and $10 for whites in big lots. Such deals would bring prices upon that basis. Big operators at present are quoting colored sets at $2 per bushel of 32 lbs., immediate delivery; and $2.75 for whites. Spring delivery, January or later, is quoted at $2.50 for colored, and $3.25 for whites.

The Ross Seed Co. has just received notice to the effect that Corporal George Howell Barnes, formerly connected with the company's office, was killed in France on Oct. 23. He enlisted shortly after the war started, and went to France in June, as one of a company of 100 picked men, the advance guard of the 138th Field Artillery.

Field & Co., seed dealers of Owensboro, Ky., are erecting a large steel and concrete seed warehouse, at a cost of several thousand dollars. O. V. N. S

Eastern Seed Notes

Bristol, Pa.—The D. Landreth Seed Co. is sending out cards inviting all interested to visit its establishment any afternoon between two and five p.m., except Saturday or Sunday.

Baltimore, Md.—J. Bolgiano & Son, Pratt, Light and Ellicott sts., have added to their staff Thorburn A. Bixler, in the field seed department. Mr. Bixler comes from an old line of seedsmen, having been named after his great great grandfather, Grant Thorburn, who founded the house of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York City. Mr. Bixler has for a number of years been connected with the wholesale feed seed trade.

Canadian Seed Importation Rules

The Department of Customs of Canada has issued a memorandum, No. 2257B, entitled "Further instructions respecting the importation of seeds." The primary object is to prevent the importation of undesirable seeds. It is desired that the delivery of good seeds be facilitated as much as possible, so the authority given the Minister of Agriculture is declared operative under the regulations.

Grass and Clover seeds may be considered as marked within the requirements of the Orders in Council, when the grade and test number are given in the invoice, or when the consignee presents the invoice and a certificate of analysis from a Canadian Government Seed Labaratory, with a written statement that the certificate was issued on a sample which represents the seed covered by the invoice, provided that the certificate shows that the seeds are to be salable in Canada.

Until notification is received to the contrary shipments of root and vegetable seeds may be delivered without bond to all consignees. Further details of the memorandum cover: Entry pending drawing of samples, privilege of delivery without bond, drawing samples, where to send samples, advice notes and where supplies may be obtained on requisition.

Packages for Abroad

The Post Office Dept. calls attention to the fact that parcel post packages for Australia and other foreign countries are often damaged in transit, through improper packing. Hereafter, therefore, the post office will not receive packages for foreign mail unless they are securely packed.

Christmas Seals on Mails

The Post Office advises that Christmas seals or stickers should not be placed upon the address side of mail matter, also that they should not be used to seal parcels of fourth class matter, as this makes them unmailable. Postage in all cases should be prepaid, especially if the package is addressed to a foreign country; name and address of sender should be written on all mail packages.

How to Get Rid of Snails

What is the quickest way to get rid of large snails in a greenhouse?—Reader.

—You might try any one of the following methods, or a combination of them: Place pieces of Cabbage or Potatoes where the creatures gather, scatter bits of camphor gum near the plants; make lines of salt along the edges of the bed, or dust lime near the plants. These methods all have the merit of being cheap and easily applied. One may succeed where another may fail, so all of them may as well be tried. M. G. K.

Club's Crape Myrtle Plans

The Houston Horticultural Society held a highly interesting meeting on Monday night, Nov. 18, at the store of the R. C. Kerr Co. The attendance was large and all seemed to be extremely enthusiastic over the prospects for the future.

The society has gone ahead with plans for the planting of Crape Myrtle plants on the streets, with the intention of making Houston a Crape Myrtle city, and at this meeting final arrangements were completed for securing the plants and arranging other details. The Texas Nursery Co., of Sherman, Texas, is to furnish the plants, at least 10,000 being called for, and they will be sold practically at cost, by all the leading flower stores and seedsmen of Houston. The week designated as planting week will probably be the first week in December. All the local papers have agreed to give planting week plenty of publicity.

On Jan. 6 the society will hold a big peace banquet at the home of R. C. Kerr, but the fixings will all be furnished by the club.

Paul Carroll has the sympathy of the club in the loss of his father, a Confederate veteran well known in the community. The usual offering of flowers was sent in the name of the society.

F. A. Baker and Mrs. Baker, of Columbia City, Ind., stopped in at the city greenhouses. They said that they were visiting their son, Leeman S. Baker, who is stationed at Ellington aviation field, and that they liked this locality so well that they would probably stay here all Winter. C. L. B.

Auburn, Ala.

The long neglected greenhouses of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute have taken on a new appearance since I took charge Aug. 23, after a nine years' service with Rosemont Gardens of Montgomery. In so short a time I have turned out some fair stock of 'Mums, both large and sprays, and am building up a good stock of pot plants, together with Roses and Carnations. Sweet Peas are well advanced to succeed the 'Mums.

Local trade is picking up, but all stock not needed for this is disposed of to Atlanta parties, the climate here, while only 60 miles from Montgomery, is 500 feet higher and is a fine place for Asters, Dahlias and such stock as does not succeed so well in the lower lands. Experimental work is under way, and a class started in flower culture. Pupils will receive not only a theoretical course, but a practical one as well. W. C. Cook.

Louisville, Ky.

Business with the Louisville florists over Thanksgiving Day was extremely heavy, as big orders were received from soldiers at Camp Taylor, and many telegraphic orders sent from this source. Thousands of boys from the camp were invited to the homes of local residents for a real old Kentucky Thanksgiving dinner, and in many cases endeavored to relieve the obligation by returning their thanks with flowers, in other words, "Saying It with Flowers."

This camp business took the place of the trade formerly connected with the Thanksgiving Day foot ball game, interest in which had died out, however, since the consolidation of the two boys' high schools several years ago. Before this took place many thousands attended the games, and florists had a hard time handling the business and making morning deliveries.

Mrs. Marie Kleinstueber Knopf, daughter of John Kleinstueber, the latter a well known florist here, died of influenza. Her five months' old baby had died four days before Mrs. Knopf. She is survived by her husband, her parents and four brothers; two of the latter are in the service.

Flowers for Sick Soldiers

Although there has not been much surplus stock in Louisville during the past few weeks, the florists have managed to brighten things up considerably at the Camp Taylor Base Hospital by contributions of flowers.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., has petitioned for the right of way for a switch to send coal into his establishment. There has been a hot fight in the Board of Public Works over his petition, but it looks as though he would get his switch.

The Jacob Schulz Co. has been advertising freely, making a special point of giving prices. The company had appropriate Thanksgiving Day ads. in the newspapers.

Lifting of the holiday ban came as a relief to the Louisville florists, who could not see any possible way of handling their heavy holiday business and deliveries without employing extra hands and working longer hours. A recent notice of the State labor inspector indicates that florists employing school children must get permits from the school boards.

The Coal Situation Easier

Jos. Schulz, president of the Kentucky Society of Florists, recently received official notice from the Kentucky Fuel Administrator of the modification of fuel restrictions. During the past few weeks dealers have been cutting prices 15c. and 20c. a ton below Government prices and are so anxious to get business that they are forgetting about their former cash policy; they are offering longer terms and other inducements.

The effect of the coal restrictions upon the production of flowers is to be noticed in the stock that is being sent to the local market. For the most part the flowers cannot begin to compare with those offered at this season last year. The withdrawal of the coal restrictions on Dec. 2 came just too late to help out the general situation. The Rose and Carnation crops are suffering most. Carnations are bringing $6 and $8 per 100, and there are not nearly enough to go around.

Retailers are finding it rather difficult to get what they want in the way of cut flowers. Many of their orders because of the general shortage of stock must go unfilled. It is a seller's market and everything moves as soon as it is offered. With the ending of the war the demand for first grade flowers increased materially. People seem willing to pay the high prices that are being asked; before the war they would have gasped at the mere mention of such figures.

Sweet Peas show the effect of coal conservation and are only fair. However, they bring $2 and $3 per 100 and clean up daily, the retailers being glad to get them in any condition. Stevia is holding its own and cleaning up daily also, the demand being for filling out retail orders. Asparagus is in better demand.

Short stemmed Am. Beauty Roses are offered at $6 per doz.; long stemmed stock bringing up to $9 and $10. Their sale was poor this year at Thanksgiving Day because of the competition by 'Mums. Bunch 'Mums continue to sell well in the absence of Carnations; they were in heavy demand last week and the wholesalers and growers quickly sold out their supplies. Small bunches bring 50c. each at wholesale; last year at this time it was almost impossible to give them away.

Nashville, Tenn.

The past six weeks have seen us pass into the busy season again, though there was no really slack time this Summer. Most of our florists missed an opportunity in not making a display at the State fair this year. The city parks made one that certainly did them credit. They showed hybrid Water Lilies, some Victoria regia crosses as fine as we have ever seen. The new managers are giving excellent service to the city.

The season has been hard on out of door flowers, hence there was little display of these plants at the fair. Charley Trichlet, whose greenhouses are located at Sylvan Park, made an artistic display of plants. He has a Coleus that is a sport from the yellow Trailing Queen, similar but a great improvement on the original. His best production is his new fern Victory found in a bench of Varona. It seems to have all of the vigor of the old Boston with as beautiful foliage as the best of the double curled ostrich plume type of ferns. It is propagating true to variety, and will stand more rough handling than any fern we have seen.

As the holiday season approched we had the heaviest demand for flowers ever known here, simply impossible to get enough flowers. Chrysanthemums have been plentiful, and the quality good, but they have cleaned up well. Rather fewer pot 'Mums were grown this year than usual. As there have been few other pot plants they have appeared doubly scarce.

We have seen no unusual 'Mums this season and few novelties. This year our growers have stuck pretty closely to the old tried flowers, except in Roses.

Dahlias did not cut any figure in the market this year, there being few on account of the excessively dry season. Frost came so late that Dahlias should have made a record for themselves.

Carnations did not come in as early this season as they sometimes do, but they are plentiful now, and of excellent quality. We have seen some really great seedlings at Joy's. These have been culled from several hundreds Mr. Smith has produced, and have been propagated until they are now plentiful enough to tell what they really are. One or two will undoubtedly appear as competitors for the public favor later.

Roses are rather plentiful at present, and of excellent quality. The new Rose Columbia has already established itself in the hearts of both growers and buyers. It cleans up as fast as it appears on the market, the good specimens fetching $5 per doz. readily. This combined with a productiveness equal to Ophelia means that in spite of its first cost it is a money maker. If it lives up to its present record it will undoubtedly be the most widely planted Rose here another year.

The powder plant has discharged some 30,000 hands. It remains to be seen just how this will affect business. Thousands of people are looking for work, but of course few of them are men that can fit in the greenhouses. There is no question that the unusual business of the past year has been due in some degree to the powder plant.

Bulbs, and especially Paperwhites, are more plentiful in Nashville than usual this year. Our growers believed that their bulbs would not come over, so ordered from any source that offered a probability of delivery. At the last every order was filled. If present demand continues they will all be needed, and everybody will be happy.

The best pot plants we have seen this season were the Anemone flowered Chrysanthemums raised by Charley Tritchler. They were sold out clean before Thanksgiving Day. Charley is the only grower in the city who has considerable space that caters principally to the wholesale trade. He has the largest stock of hardy evergreens, etc., in the city.

The high price of bulbs seems to be affecting the sale this Fall. Cut flowers are selling better than they ever did at lower prices, but bulbs do not seem to be working in that way. M. B.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Thanksgiving Day business was not large this year on account of the scarcity of stock. 'Mums and pompons were done and Roses and Carnations are scarce. Had plenty of stock been obtainable perhaps it would have been the best Thanksgiving in many years. The dark weather of the past two weeks shut off the Rose supply entirely. It is not only in Pittsburgh, but seems general all over the country. What few Roses are on the market still continue to sell at high prices. Some good Russell sell at $25 per 100. American Beauty are selling somewhat better than they have been. We look for them to continue to hold up in price until after the holidays. Specials sell at $6 per 100; other grades in proportion. Carnations are still short in supply and the demand is heavy. There should be a good cut from now on, as no grower has cut much this season. The price is still $6 per 100. Lilies are coming more plentifully, a great help to this market. They are badly needed so can command good prices. Among the novelties seen are Valley, orchids, Sweet Peas, Daisies, Primroses, Violets, Calendulas and Baby Roses. The supply houses are sending out great loads of merchandise every day which indicates the retailers are preparing for a large Christmas business. Boxwood seems about the only green likely to be scarce.

Geo. McCallum enjoyed a three days' furlough at home last week. He enlisted with the U. S. Navy Auxiliary Forces last September, and has been stationed at Municipal Pier, Chicago, Ill. Within a few weeks he expects to be transferred to a vessel at New York to complete his course. He looks the picture of health, having gained 20 pounds since enlisting.

Murry McGrew is receiving congratulations. A baby girl was born Thanksgiving morning.

Edw. Weaver is on the sick list.

Lancaster, Pa.

(Other florists' clubs might well emulate the example of the Lancaster County F. A. as shown in letter to Mr. McAdoo herewith, which is self-explanatory.)

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 4, 1918

Honorable Wm. G. McAdoo,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

We the Lancaster County Florists' Association do respectfully request, that you insert a clause in your instructions to the United Express Companies, that they give priority to cut flowers and plants on account of their very perishable nature, and caution your employees against rough handling of packages marked with the flower or plant labels. We also pray that you instruct said Express Companies not to place an embargo on plant and cut flower shipments during the holiday season. Recognizing your ability to grasp the business needs of the country we feel that it would be taking up your valuable time to go into a detailed explanation of the urgency for this action, but if desired we will gladly furnish you with such information.

Respectfully yours,
Elmer Weaver, Pres.
Albert M. Herr, Sec.
Harry K. Rohrer, Treas.

Thanksgiving Day came in a cold, dreary day, and before it was many hours old a cold, drizzling rain drove all thoughts of flowers from the minds of those affected by weather conditions—about 95 per cent. of the population of Lancaster, so business while not so good as it might have been was slow and a disappointment to all the retailers. Even those who braved the weather to see the foot ball game did not wear any flowers. Wednesday previous and Thanksgiving eve came up to those of other years and this helped to reduce the supply somewhat.

B. F. Barr perhaps never had a better lot of 'Mums for this day. Most of the good ones were sold. Master Snodgrass, chief of his delivery service, had to carry some of the deliveries over into the next morning and was much worried over the fact that he might be late for his turkey dinner. This chap is an imaginative genius and will no doubt stumble on something novel one of these days. Right now everything is gates ajar whether in wood work, pottery or in brass.

H. D. Rohrer shipped his main crop of Bonnaffon for Thanksgiving Day. It ran into the thousands.

The cloudy weather reduced the supply of flowers somewhat but nearly every grower had a fair cut and there was no special lack of flowers, although H. A. Schroyer reported having had trouble in getting some for Friday as everything had been shipped out of the county.

Buffalo, N. Y.

The 'Mum show held at the Buffalo Botanic Gardens at South Park this year, although somewhat affected by the shortage of help at the gardens, was of high quality and received very favorable comment from many visitors. Nearly three thousand blooms were exhibited, in all types and methods of culture. An interesting feature was the fern decoration on the brick wall. Director Herr H. Elbers was highly praised by prominent horticulturalists who visited the show, for the excellence of the exhibi.

Many new specimens of native flora and others from California have been added to the large Herbarium, which is now classified, and a complete catalog is being prepared for the use of students and visitors generally.

Plants for the Holidays

Prepare now for Christmas. There is going to be a big demand for plants this year. The war is over and there is joy in every home; your customers will want fine plants to decorate their festive boards and to make presents. There has been a scarcity of help the past year and many growers had to close some of their houses; a great many places closed up for good which, no doubt, will make good stock scarce. We have a very fine stock of plants and will give you good value for your money. We recommend the placing and shipping of orders early, as there is no telling what the weather or railroad conditions will be later on.

CYCLAMEN. We have a very fine lot of this choice Christmas plant in 5½-in. pots, in bud and bloom, $9.00, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

POINSETTIAS. 4-in. pots, $3.60 per doz.; 5½-in. pots, tall, 2 flowers to a plant, $6.00 and $9.00 per doz.

SOLANUM. Jerusalem Cherries. Bushy plants, full of berries, 6-in. pots, $7.20 and $9.00 per doz. 7-in. pots, very heavy, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

PRIMULA Obconica. 5-in. pots, $4.00 per doz.

BEGONIA Luminosa. 5-in. pots, $4.00 per doz.

FERNS. Our ferns are very fine this year, and we will give you good stock.

NEPH. Scottii and Teddy Jr. 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in. pots, $7.20 per doz.; 7-in. pots, $12.00 per doz.; 8-in. pots, $1.50 each; 12-in. tub fern, $3.00 each.

NEPH. Bostonensis. 6-in. pots, $6.00 per doz.

NEPH. Norwood. 6-in. pots, $7.20 per doz.

NEPH. Smithi. 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

PTERIS Wilsoni. 3 plants in 6-in. pan, very fine, $4.20 per doz. 4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.

HOLLY FERNS. 4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.

ASPLENIUM Nidus Avis (Bird's Nest Fern). 5-in. pots, fine stock, $9.00, $12.00, $15.00 per doz.

FICUS Elastica (Rubber Plant). 6-in. pots, $7.20 and $9.00 per doz.; 7-in. pots, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz., extra fine.

ASPARAGA Plumosa. 3-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

DISH FERNS. 2½-in. pots, the best varieties, $6.00 per 100.

HARDY IVIES. Fine plants, staked, 5-in. pots, $3.60 per doz., 6-in. pots, $6.00 doz.

To save express charges, please mention if pots are wanted.

Cash with order. No plants shipped C. O. D. All shipments travel at purchaser's risk and we are not responsible for any delay in transit, as our responsibility ceases when delivery is made to Express Company.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Sam Trockman, for many years with Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., Boston, Mass., is in the Navy and is cruising in South American waters.

George McCallum, who enlisted with the U. S. Naval Auxiliary forces last September, spent a three day furlough at home last week. He has been stationed at the Municipal Pier, Chicago, but expects soon to be transferred to a vessel at New York to finish his course.

Emil Francis Decker, son of Emil Decker of Orange, N. J., has been reported missing since October 4. He was with the forces abroad. His brother, Ralph A. Decker, was wounded in action early last month. Emil, who enlisted with the Marines in February, has been in France since April.

Sgt. V. A. Di Clemente, former monotype operator on THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, in a recent letter tells us of his surprise at meeting Paul Viguier, formerly a linotype operator on this paper, in the same division with himself—surely a coincidence, the one young man having left this office six months or so before the other, and each reporting to widely separated camps on this side. Di Clemente had seen signs of battle everywhere, including the saddest, but most convincing sign of all, numerous burial places. In a German cemetery a clever sleight of hand could be seen in the really artistic carvings made on nature's roughest offerings—tree stumps and branches.

Nathan A. Miller, of Branford, Conn., has two sons in France, the elder with the 26th Division, the younger with the 79th. The former has not been heard from since Sept. 21, the latter wrote on Nov. 3 that he had been four days and five nights in the battle of Sept. 24, and had been in the hospital for more than a month, but his censored letter did not tell the nature of his injuries.

"A glorious death is his
Who for his country falls."

We regret to learn of the death of Raymond C. Thoirs, son of James M. Thoirs, the well known florist of Camden, N. J. Young Thoirs died in France from wounds received in battle. He was a corporal in the 104th Engineers, and trained at Camp McClellan, Anniston, Ala.

We regret to record the death of Private Jens Christian Peterson, of Company H, 35th Infantry, who died of pneumonia Nov. 25, at Camp MacArthur, Texas. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Ohio, and was born in Westwood, Cincinnati, August 29, 1893. After leaving high school, he was employed for a time by the Park Floral Co. of Denver, Colo.; also the A. N. Pierson Co. of Cromwell, Conn.; and afterwards at home with his father. He volunteered in the service of his country in May, 1917, and on July 5 following was sent to Nogales, Ariz. The following November his company was sent to Ajo, Arizona, for guard duty at the copper mines. There he remained until August of this year when his company was ordered abroad, and was sent to Camp Travis, Texas, for mobilization. From there he was sent to Waco, Texas, with a battalion to participate in the military manoeuvers which were a feature of the Cotton Palace Exposition. His father and mother were with him at the last and the end came very peacefully. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, also four brothers and two sisters. Services were held at his home, and he was buried with military honors, in the family lot in Spring Grove Cemetery, Nov. 30.

Corporal George Howard Barnes, formerly connected with the Ross Seed Co., of Louisville, Ky., was killed in France on Oct. 23. He enlisted shortly after the war started, went abroad last time as one of a company of picked men, the advance guard of the 138th Field Artillery.

Toronto, Ont. Canada

A writer in one of the local papers has been taking florists and horticulturists to task for not taking greater interest in the beautification of the city. This question has been under discussion at the various florists and horticultural societies where it was pointed out that it would have been unpatriotic to carry on a campaign for this purpose during war time as all the vacant lots in the city were required for foodstuffs and the general public was all interested in production. Now that peace has come it is probable that some steps will be taken to place Toronto on a par with Ottawa, which has been greatly beautified by the Ottawa Improvement Commission appointed by the Dominion Government and supplied with almost unlimited funds.

Memorial flower gardens are being advocated for next Summer, that is the dedication of a corner of each garden to be planted in Poppies in memory of those who "sleep where Poppies grow" in Flanders fields.

Social events are becoming more numerous and more decorating is being done. Orders at present are small but are growing in volume and size.

The 'Mum season is over. There is a scarcity of flowers, especially Roses. However a visit to Dunlop's greenhouses at Richmond Hill assures the visitor that there is a good outlook of Roses of good stock for the Christmas trade. Among the varieties noticed were: Russell, Winnett, Dunlop, double white Killarney and Sunburst.

A good variety of flowering plants is appearing in the stores, including Cyclamen, Primula and Poinsettias. Tea Roses are retailing at $3 to $7.50; Am. Beauty Roses at $6 to $15; Violets at $1 per bunch and orchids at $9 per doz.

The Canada War Trade Board announces that under certain circumstances, from now on, it will be prepared to give favorable consideration to applications for licenses to import baskets of all kinds.

During the recent visit to Washington of Mr. Magrath, the fuel controller for Canada, the present restrictions in the coal supply to florists in Canada was considered. Since nearly all restrictions on the fuel supply to less essential industries in the United States have been repealed, the U. S. Fuel Administration expressed its willingness to have similar action taken in Canada. Under these circumstances, the Canadian fuel controller has now withdrawn the restrictions on fuel supplies to this industry made on the 9th of October last. This withdrawal applies only to bituminous coal. Florists throughout Canada must still deal with the various Provincial Fuel Administrators in respect to any anthracite coal they may require.

Trade Personals

Harry E. Brandt of Wertheimer's, New York, was a recent visitor to Toronto.

Henry Mullis of Brampton was a visitor to Toronto recently.

Orlando L. Smith of O. L. Smith & Son, florists, Smiths Falls, Ont., died in the Western Hospital, Toronto, on Sunday November 23, at the age of 67. He suffered from influenza which developed into pneumonia. He leaves two sons, James, who was associated with him in the business, and Harry and one daughter.

The International Seed Co., Limited, has taken out a charter in the province of Ontario. The head office is at Galt, Ont., and the capital is $100,000. The provisional directors include J. P. Joffrey, H. J. Foster and J. H. Hancock of Galt.

A seed fair will be held at Maple Creek, Sask., on December 10 to 12.

Newport, R. I.

At the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society on the 26th there was a complete change of program. While a communication from Mr. Jurgens was read there was no discussion thereon. Instead there was a discussion over best methods of destroying pests infesting shade trees. W. John Du Fais, representing Newport Improvement Association, and W. Leyland, superintendent of play grounds, appeared before the society urging concerted action to the end that Newport's many beautiful trees on the streets, in the parks and in the many fine estates may be saved. As a result a committee was appointed to go before a sub-committee of the city's finance committee of 25 to urge an appropriation for the work.

ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.

New Haven, Conn.

Among New Haven florists Thanksgiving Day trade fully came up to expectations. The demand for cut flowers was good and satisfactory prices were paid without demur. S. H. Moore reports that Moore & Co. ran out of 'Mums although they had bought all they could get. Mr. Moore's principal concern now is where the florists are going to get flowers enough for the Christmas trade. Azaleas particularly will probably be short. Plants are in more demand than ever. Many Cherries were sold last week.

The various florists were all asked the question as to whether they thought the national advertising stimulated the Thanksgiving Day demand for flowers and the unanimous opinion was that it did.

Nathan A. Miller, importer and grower of Dahlias, Branford, Conn., whose oldest son is in the 26th Division in France, has not heard from him since Sept. 21. The younger son is in the 79th Division. Nov. 3, he wrote that he was four days and five nights in the battle of Sept. 24. He has been in bed in the hospital for over a month. He does not state the nature of his injuries. The censor had cut the letter considerably. He does state, however, that one company was wiped out with the exception of three men. Mr. Miller's family is nearly prostrated with the uncertainty.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society announces that its next meeting will be held in the Alderman's Chamber of the City Hall, Dec. 10, the city having kindly granted the use of the room for future meetings.

WM. J. RATHGEBER.

Worcester, Mass.

Thanksgiving Day business came up t expectations. Every florist who ha figured on an increase of business ove the year previous had little trouble dis posing of his stock. In addition to th excellent Thanksgiving Day trade ther was an abundance of funeral work th two days previous which added to th week's business. Many prominent busines men's names were among the obituaries fo the week and high class floral pieces wer much in evidence. Figures given by som of the leading florists showed an increas of 15 per cent. to 25 per cent. in busines for the week, over the correspondin week for 1917.

The cut flowers market prices, althoug good, were not as high possibly as som other years.

Newsy Briefs

Martins & Gustafson, doing bus ness as the Webster Floral Co., dis solved partnership Nov. 19, the busines now being conducted by Mr. Gustafso who reports an excellent trade. M Martins was formerly a bookkeeper fo the A. N. Pierson Co., Cromwell, Conn while Mr. Gustafson was a grower fo the same concern, they having purchase the business of F. C. Riebe about tw years ago.

Local stores are now receiving thei first consignment of greens for Chris mas showings. Clerks are already mak ing up quantities of fancy artifici baskets, wreaths, etc., in anticipation o the greatest Christmas trade ever.

Prevailing wholesale prices were a follows: Carnations $3 to $8 per 100 Roses $4 to $20; Violets $1 to $1.50 Sweet Peas 75c. to $1.50; single an pompon 'Mums 50c. to $1 per bunch one dozen sprays; regular 'Mums $1 $3 per doz; Asparagus Sprengeri an plumosus greens 50c. per small bunch Adiantum $1 per 100; Easter Lilies $ per doz. All small flowers such a Candytuft, Stevia, etc., have a read market at good prices.

Waste Turned into Fertilizer

According to information recently pul lished, W. H. Ross, of the U. S. Burea of Soils, Washington, D. C., is quoted a stating that the fertilizers obtained fro industrial wastes in the United States i 1916 included 40 per cent. of the potash 8 per cent. of the phosphoric acid an 85 per cent. of the nitrogen.

A wide variety of substances wer called upon to furnish the potash, amon them being tobacco stems, wool washing cottonseed hulls, hardwood ashes, cemer flue dust, furnace flue dust and suga residues.

Basic slag, bones, shells, fish scra and similar materials supplied the pho phoric acid.

Nitrogen resulted as a by-product fro wastes in the manufacture of castor, li seed and fish oils; various animal waste such as blood, horn, hair, hoofs and hide wool wastes and leather also supplie their quota, and coke and numerou other materials completed the total.

It is believed that by the addition feldspar and other potash minerals cement materials the potash procurabl from cement waste may be raised fro 70,000 to 100,000 tons.

Capitola, Cal.

James A. Brown, manager of th Brown Bulb and Berry Ranch, Capitol Cal., advises under date of Nov. 24 tha he has just returned from the five Nort western States and found the trad throughout busy and assured that bus ness would be better than ever befor even after the rush caused by the fl was over. Mr. Brown also found ther has been more building and improvin than he had expected to see during th past year.

Eureka, Cal.

Wm. P. Stark, formerly of Eureka Cal., has associated himself with th Cottage Gardens Nurseries of Californi Mr. Stark takes the position of opera ing manager and sales director. H will have entire charge of the productio as well as the selling end of the busines He will dispose of his interests i Eureka and will associate himsel permanently with the Cottage Garden Nurseries and give it his entire time an attention.

Cold weather will soon be here and the shipping of plants will be difficult. If you order at once they will go through without danger of freezing. We have a splendid lot of KENTIAS to offer, in both single and combination, of a quality and finish that cannot be excelled.

Western States

Fort Wayne, Ind.

The Thanksgiving Day flower market was far from satisfactory this year; for, although the demand showed substantial increase over last year, the supply of flowers was inadequate. Many customers were turned away. Chrysanthemums, especially, failed on account of the unseasonably warm weather of the past six weeks, late varieties coming to maturity ahead of time. Those 'Mums actually offered were of poor quality, and prices were out of proportion. Few pompons were offered in comparison with other years. These brought $1 and $1.50 per doz., while the double varieties sold for $4 to $6. Carnations brought $1.25 to $1.50 retail. Even Roses were short, although the quality was fine, especially in the Russell, Ophelia, Columbia and Shawyer. The finest of these brought $3.50 to $6 per doz., while the shorter lengths sold from $1.50 per doz. up. Lilies were scarce, but there was an excellent local supply of orchids, which helped considerably with the better class of trade. The call for American Beauty Roses for this holiday was negligible. All the smaller flowers—Sweet Peas, Violets, miniature Roses—generally used for corsage work were in shorter supply than ever. Many florists took advantage of the fine supply of blooming plants to tide over the scarcity of cut flowers, and whenever possible sold Cincinnati Begonias, Cyclamen, Primulas and Chrysanthemum plants in place of cut Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums. Stevia, a welcome addition to the variety offered, brought 75c. per doz. Turner, Eaton, Jones, Chadwick, Enguehard, Bonnaffon and Chrysolora were the main varieties offered for this holiday. Preparations for Christmas are in full swing. Artificial Christmas stocks of all kinds are moving fast. The trade is preparing for the biggest Christmas trade in years.

Gossip of the Business

The New Haven Floral Co. had Primroses for the Thanksgiving Day trade, and a large number of Cyclamen and Begonia Cincinnati. These were quickly sold on account of the shortage of cut flowers. They had also an excellent crop of Roses and late 'Mums.

The Freese Floral Co. had one of the largest weddings of the season on Thanksgiving Day for the Fletemeyer-Irmscher nuptials. These included a large church decoration, in which bankings of ferns and palms and Chadwick Chrysanthemums were used, and an elaborate house decoration of baskets of Jones, Chadwick and Turner 'Mums, Ophelia and Columbia Roses, and pompons. The bride carried Lily of the Valley, and her six attendants arm bouquets of Columbia Roses and baskets of pompons and Sweet Peas, arranged with artistic effect.

Although the W. J. & M. S. Vesey firm had a mammoth cut of Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Lilies and orchids, yet they were unable to supply the demand for Thanksgiving Day. They have a big crop of all the seasonable orchids and a splendid crop of Tomatoes and Lettuce.

David Vesey, who has been in Washington, D. C., in the Metals Dept. of the War Service Bureau, has returned, following the signing of the armistice. Before leaving Washington, he was admitted to the bar of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Several weddings and funerals during Thanksgiving week kept things humming at Ed. Wenninghoff's.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports a big increase in the Thanksgiving Day business this year over last. Mrs. R. W. Doswell, who has been absent from the store for the past several months, has resumed her position.

The Flick Floral Co. did an immense Thanksgiving Day trade, both in this city and out of town.

A. J. Lanternier & Co employed many attractive accessories to make up for the scarcity of flowers.

Out of town funeral work has been in demand during the past week or ten days as never before. One of the local hospitals is still closed to patients, on account of an epidemic among the nurses, who contracted the disease at Camp Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, and were sent here for care. D. B.

Cleveland, O.

Following an unusually heavy Thanksgiving Day business the market has become normal. The advent of December finds the question of supply occupying foremost place. Many small retail growers are worried because of the probable curtailment of their business because they cannot obtain sufficient cheap stock. Indications point to a continuation of the present moderate receipts of Roses and Carnations, which, of course, will be materially reduced if dark weather prevails.

Arrivals of Easter Lilies are limited and the price is high. Callas are now cutting a greater figure and are eagerly sought for funeral orders. As yet bulbous stock has not put in its appearance. American Beauty Roses in all grades of rarely good quality may be had. The call for eastern Violets is growing steadily because of the returning popularity of corsages. The supply of locally grown Adiantum is depleted and good Asparagus is far from being plentiful. Excellent Stevia is reaching the market and meets with an almost immediate sale. Thanksgiving Day trade completely exhausted the pompons and 'Mums.

November Business

Reports from all sources, both wholesale and retail, firmly establish the volume of business for November as the largest on record. Throughout the entire period the market was brisk, absorbing everything offered at prices enabling wholesalers to make satisfactory returns to their growers, both realizing profit. At last the cost of production appears to be operating in the prices of flowers. Retailers were kept constantly busy and at times were scarcely able to secure sufficient stock to take care of their greatly increased orders. Thanksgiving trade surpassed expectations and much more business could have been done if more stock had been available. Collections are good and the monthly basis of settling wholesale accounts has become the rule, instead of the exception, as formerly. On the whole, trade is in a healthy condition, and as the labor scarcity improves, every changing factor will make for progress.

Purely Personal

Fred Witthuhn is the recipient of many congratulations occasioned by his recent second plunge into the sea of matrimony.

D. R. White, leading florist of Sandusky, Ohio, made a business trip to the Sixth City, Nov. 30.

Harry C. Walther, of Youngstown, Ohio, is able to be about again after a serious illness with influenza.

W. Q. Potter closed his wholesale store on Thanksgiving Day for the first time since its inception, to enjoy a brief outing in the country with gun and dog.

Wm. N. Brothers, for several years in the retail store of the J. M. Gasser Co., has taken a position with J. B. Keeler & Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

W. E. Cook, who had been ill with pneumonia at Newark, N. J., accompanied by Mrs. Cook, returned to his home here Dec. 1.

Club Meeting

The first meeting of the Florists' Club held in two months took place in the rooms in the Hollenden, Dec. 2, President Chas. J. Graham presided and Jos. McLaughlin filled the secretary's chair, owing to the absence of Secretary Walter E. Cook, due to illness. Previous to the regular meeting an executive committee meeting was held to formulate, in conjunction with Secretary A. J. F. Baur of Indianapolis, Ind., of the American Carnation Society, plans for holding here the annual meeting, Jan. 29 and 30, 1919. Chairman Knoble also held a meeting of the publicity committee for the purpose of completing plans for the December advertising. The soldiers' committee was instructed to send a letter with Christmas greetings to each local trade member overseas in the expeditionary forces and in the various cantonments.

Mr. Baur gave an interesting talk on matters pertaining to the coming convention. Incidentally he was elected a member of the club. E. Barnwater, of New York City, was also elected a member.

A letter was read from Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn., asking assistance in the work of starting a convention garden for the S. A. F. and O. H. annual convention to be held here in 1920. The consensus of opinion of those present seemed to be against the proposition, as there was no suitable place which would do the project justice. Frank Friedley was appointed a committee of one to take care of the matter.

The committee on awards unanimously voted a certificate of merit to a beautiful pink seedling Carnation, No. 414, exhibited by Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis. The vase was then auctioned off for $13 to F. C. W. Brown. The amount going into the entertainment fund for the Carnation convention.

The chair appointed the following on the American Carnation Society meeting: Carl Hagenberger, Frank Friedley, H. P. Knoble, R. P. Bryden, Jos. McLaughlin and C. E. Russell. The attendance was large and enthusiastic and the meeting was thoroughly enjoyed.

Large Business Changes Hands

Albert B. Barber has severed his connection with the Jones-Russell Co., of which he was one of the original incorporators, and has purchased the interests of that concern in the Park Flower Shops of Cleveland, Akron and Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. Barber, whose former home was at Beloit, Ohio, is well and favorably known throughout the local trade, and is a young man of rare business capacity, from whom, we dare prophesy, much will be heard in the future.

The Park Flower Shops, of which Mr. Barber is now sole proprietor, are a unique enterprise, operated at a slightly reduced margin of profit based on quantity sales. They are always located in congested sections tapping vast crowds, and make a strong appeal to the transient public by the prominent display of an immense supply of stock. Dealing is eminently fair, with a view of making each purchaser a permanent patron. Supplies are secured by a single purchasing agent in the local as well as distant markets, and forwarded to the point needed; which, together with a cash business requiring little bookkeeping, constitutes the strictest economy in operation. The plan is an excellent one and capable of great development. The Park Flower Shops perform a great function for the trade in general; out of the raw material they create permanent flower buyers. The heartiest congratulations of his fellow tradesmen are extended Mr. Barber in his new venture.

Now that 'Mums have cleaned up, stock is again very scarce. This Thanksgiving Day most of the florists were unable to obtain extra stock of any kind. The main shortage was in large 'Mums; the few in the stores brought from $6 to $10 per doz. Without special advertising plenty of orders came in, but many had to be turned down or other stock substituted. Some of the florists had to refuse even funeral work on account of not having stock. They are all wondering what they will be able to get now in cut flowers, as appearances are that Roses and Carnations will be extremely scarce during the next few months. Moreover, most of the florists secured only a small part of their French and Dutch bulbs. Pot plants are selling well, but it looks as if there would be a stortage of these also for Christmas.

Walter J. Engel, who has been ill with influenza, has now recovered. W. J. E.

Holiday "Most Satisfactory"

Business for the first holiday of the season proved to be most satisfactory, the weather being bright and cheerful right up to the day itself, so that there is no doubt that all sales expected were realized at prices that should be satisfactory to the retailer. Roses were quoted at $5, $4, $3 and $2.50 per doz. Carnations $1.50; Violets 50c. per bunch Sweet Peas 50c.; 'Mums $1.50 to $4 and apparently there was little left on hand for the morning of Thanksgiving Day. However, as the morning of the holiday was very windy, with heavy rain there was little store business done except over the 'phone.

Shipping business was brisk all the early part of the week, with a reasonable amount of stock available. 'Mums were about cleaned up by Thursday, so that there will most likely be a bare market for a few days.

The prospects seem to be good for the maintenance of a fairly good price list as there is no likelihood of any large crops of either Roses or Carnations till the New Year is a few weeks old, and therefore a snappy market seems assured. Inquiries among the retailers indicate that while business is satisfactory on the whole, there is no great enthusiasm among flower buyers, so that it is as well that greater supplies are not in sight. The opinion prevails here that business will develop steadily right along without any great or sudden changes.

The fixtures and supplies on hand, as well as the book accounts of Smith the Florist, were put up at auction on Nov. 27. What resulted therefrom I have not yet been informed. S. B.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Thanksgiving Day trade was fully up to expectations in most quarters, though a large portion consisted of funeral work. Prices were the highest in the history of the trade for this holiday, 'Mums retailing from $3 to $12 per doz.; Carnations $1.50 to $2 per doz; Roses $2 to $9 per doz.; and Violets $2 to $3 per 100. The supply of flowers was far from adequate, so scrambling for stock was common. Good Carnations in particular were scarce at $5 to $7 per 100. Roses wholesaled at $5 to $20 per 100 with the exception of Russells at $10 to $30 and American Beauty at $1 to $60. 'Mums netted the growers $2 to $5 per doz. A noticeable incident was the fact that people from all walks of life participated in the buying.

Many ferneries and indoor boxes were brought in for filling; corsages were more in evidence and the number of centerpieces all showed that people who had left off buying on account of the war have resumed. Lilies are generally easy during the Chrysanthemum period, but this year there has been a lively demand for them. Some brought as high as $3 per doz. wholesale during Thanksgiving week. Potted plants have been selling better than for some time, but the supply is hardly up to the stand or other years.

Business Brevities

J. C. Nielsen, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., is booking trade in this vicinity.

The family of Henry Rieman which has been sick with influenza has been reported as much improved.

Henry Muerdter has accepted a position with Bertermann Bros. Co.

E. A. Nelson has been cutting late Asters, the last of which were disposed of this week. He says business has been good this Fall.

Earl Mann, of Richmond, Ind., was a recent visitor. Business at Richmond was the best ever through October.

F. T. D. orders during the Thanksgiving period were far ahead of last year. The outlook for the holidays in this line is promising. I. B.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN—President, J. R. MAYHEW, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. EDWARD MOON, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. HILL, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, CURTIS NYE SMITH, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

Reconstruction—Our Part in It

But a few short weeks ago the paramount business of this country was war and the sanguine determination to win it. Men and women in all walks of life had this one end in view and all strove to do something that would bring about the desired consummation.

Now that the war has been won and the high seat of autocracy overthrown, the one word that is finding expression is "Reconstruction." As with a ship in rapid motion there is the wake; a well defined line of foam. So in the wake of war there is desolation and devastation.

Through word pictures of war correspondents, by actual photographs in our magazines and on the screen, we are shown what has been wrought by an unscrupulous enemy whose creed is that the end justifies the means. In these pictures we have beheld beauty in ruins; the beauty of architecture, of home surroundings and civil life. More than this, we have seen the beautiful trees of the woodland, the field, and the roadside mutilated or razed to the ground and what was once a charming landscape has been transformed into a dreary waste by the hand of the spoiler.

With the land re-won and in the possession of those who love it (because it is home) comes that desire for reconstruction. In this great work of restoration, we, who are in horticultural pursuits, have just as important a role as the architect, the builder and other kindred workers; for as the rebuilding of towns and cities is of great consequence, so of equal importance is the replanting of the laid-waste lands with health-giving trees.

Before trees can be planted, they have to be grown and in this American nurserymen will have a share. At this time of the year, perhaps, more than any other, the importance of saving seed of our forest trees appeals to us as a very vital point to consider. Devastated France and Belgium will require millions of trees to re-forest the dismantled sections of the country and the one way that is both economical and effective is the supplying of seeds and seedlings of the various forest trees, most of which are adapted to that part of the world.

The nursery seedsmen who have been watchful of events and have laid plans accordingly will now find the door of opportunity open to them in this very matter of tree seeds. Many of our best woodland trees mature their seed in the fall and if collected and carefully handled are available for sowing in the spring. Such are: the Red, Scarlet, Pin and Black Oak, Sweet Gum, Tulip tree, Locust, Kentucky Coffee, Hickory and Black Walnut. To these may be added many other ornamental trees, native and others, whose fruits are ready for collection at this time and earlier.

We call to mind our native Thorns, such as Cratægus coccinea, C. cordata, Crus-galli and others of that genus; also Halesia tetraptera, Styrax japonica, Cornus florida, Magnolia acuminata, Magnolia tripetala, Catalpa bignonoides and C. speciosa. For all of these and many others there is a call and a use in the re-making of forest, of woodland and of sylvan glade which are sign posts of health, wealth and beauty.

Winter Window Boxes

The accompanying illustration shows an excellent example of a well-filled concrete Winter window box at the Plaza Hotel, New York City. The material used is Retinisporas and English Ivy. Such window boxes undoubtedly add to the attractiveness of a hotel or other building and have a distinct financial value, greatly in excess of their small cost, since they undoubtedly increase the desirability of the premises.

Home Grown vs. Imported Plants

The merits of both and what Plant Exclusion means to Florists, Nurserymen and the American Public

By SAMUEL NEWMAN BAXTER

With the Federal Horticultural Board's ruling prohibiting the importation of certain plants America's prospect of continuing to import plants as extensively as in the past appears slim. The war has curtailed the supply, but the embargo will discourage, if not prohibit many Americans from "Saying it with Flowers;" at least with their favorite flowers. Of course we can change our flowers, and even though all the florists and nurserymen were to retire from business we could still express our sentiments with the flowers of the field in Summer and, possibly, Pine cones, ferns or dried grass plumes in Winter. But why this test of our resourcefulness? Our adaptabilities? Why the sacrifice? Especially if it means expensive experimentations and higher prices.

The enactment of this embargo is surely not a question of stifling undesirable foreign competition that American labor may receive the preference, because American nursery labor is amply occupied in "growing on" much of the imported stock which comes to us in the seedling or cutting stage. In fact, much of the stock offered today by our nurserymen was "born" on the other side. As for the embargo, as a precautionary measure in preventing the entrance of injurious insect pests into this country, it does seem that a less drastic method could well have been invoked.

Does home grown stock suffer by comparison with the imported? "Yes" and "No," depending upon the class of stock compared. Rhododendrons and Azaleas, grown here, are acclimated and more dependable than the imported yet the latter for forcing purposes, are as good if not better, and their price is certainly more attractive. Foreign evergreen seedlings and rooted cuttings of trees and shrubs will, as a rule, compare favorably with those of American propagation. If price in this case is the determining factor the imported plants will be given the preference, yet many may prefer to pay more to get home grown stock. Imported Box bushes have a lustre and freshness lacking in American grown, yet the latter are more desirable for those who buy for permanent lawn specimens where the climate is too severe for newly imported plants. Large deciduous trees from Europe may not be as bushy or well furnished as American grown, but their heavy, straight stems could not be produced as quickly or cheaply in this country and, after being planted out here in the nursery, soon form a well branched head. The showy flowering Magnolias, now imported with a ball of earth about the roots, and which come under the ban, can be propagated in this country, but the process is slow and inadvisable when the plants may be imported more cheaply. Think of that famed avenue of Magnolias in Rochester and the thousands all over the country which delight us each Spring with their bloom, all of which came to us from overseas.

Low prices—the reason for which, from the standpoint of a Holland grower, is given in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE of August 10, 1918—has possibly been the dominant factor in building up the importing business for plants which could be propagated here. It relieves our nurserymen and florists of expensive and often slow propagating methods and the American public profits by the lower prices.

Then there is that class of plants the propagation of which is not regarded as feasible, or at least seldom practiced in this country, i. e., Acacias, Araucarias, Ericas, Bay trees, etc. Unsuitable conditions is the reason ascribed for inability to produce this stock here. Necessity is indeed the mother of invention and possibly favorable conditions could be created or found in some parts of our broad country, but only at a far greater expense which growers would hesitate to incur with the possibility of the higher price killing the demand.

Should the public be obliged to pay extra just to prove that certain plants now imported could be grown here when Europe, by reason of more favorable growing conditions and skilled gardeners practicing intensive methods of growing, can furnish us with plants at much cheaper rates? Incidentally, a "skilled gardener," a propagator, threatens to become a lost vocation in this country if one may judge from present day conditions. We're not turning them out!

And so, to summarize our subject and justify the title, American grown stock is better in most instances in that it is acclimated and vicissitudes and uncertainties of an ocean voyage are obviated, but in the exceptional cases of the socalled florists' flowering specialties and ornamental plants the imported stock could be grown in this country only at prohibitively higher prices, if at all. The florists will be deprived, at least at reasonable prices, of many specialties now popular with the public. The nurserymen will go into the propagation of plants heretofore imported, except the more difficult sort which few will undertake to experiment with because of the lack of facilities and the uncertainty of finding a sale at the inevitable higher prices. And the public—as usual will be "long suffering." An Easter Rhododendron or Azalea will cost three or four times the present price. The florist will be under suspicion of profiteering and the floral menu will be reduced and assume a "war bread" aspect.

Why are coins made round? asks a correspondent. They are made that shape, of course, so that they may circulate freely. Banknotes, on the other hand, are rectangular, in order that we may square up large accounts with facility.

Our Lancaster correspondent sends us a copy of a letter mailed to Hon. W. G. McAdoo requesting acceleration of express shipments of plants and cut flowers during the holiday season. Similar letters might well be sent by other florists' clubs. See Lancaster news letter.

Letters to members of the American Expeditionary Force will not be sent forward unless the envelopes bear the return address of the sender. The instructions should be fully carried out, as it will enable the letters to be returned to the senders in cases where the persons addressed have been returned to the United States.

W. E. Wallace & Son, famous Carnation raisers, write us they will be delighted to see any American or American soldier florist who may honor them with a visit. They add that their firm has had the honor of giving many boxes of Carnations to the sick in American hospitals and to the Eagle Hut in the Strand. W. E. Wallace expects to cross to this side next Spring. The address is: The Nurseries, Eaton Bray, Dunstable, Beds, England.

Suitable and Unsuitable Memorial Trees

While THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE respects the patriotic intentions of the New York City Park Department to honor the memory of our soldiers and sailors who paid "the last full measure of devotion" in the great war by planting 40 American Elms in Central Park, we regret that this species of tree should be the one chosen. The Elms planted years ago in this same park have mostly died because of insects, diseases, smoke or plain neglect. Therefore, why not choose a more permanent, healthy and resistant species? Among as typically American trees as this Elm are Pin Oak, Sycamore and Beech, each of which is long lived, clean, free from insects and disease, capable of withstanding smoke and beautiful at every season of the year, even in Winter when bare of leaves. We, therefore, suggest that one or other of these species be given the preference wherever the memorial tree idea is adopted.

In our issue of Oct. 5, page 542, we stated editorially:

"While it is quite possible that it may take until late in 1919 to conclude the war in the only manner in which it can be concluded, that is decisively and on our own terms, the end seems to be coming nearer and it may come sooner than expected. Who knows? Just now, the decision for a quick peace is in the hands of the German people themselves. If they arise in their might and rid themselves of the military caste which has so long ruled them with a rod of iron we might see peace by Christmas."

Naturally optimistic, the editor at the time did not think it advisable to say more than he did say, but the belief was strong within him that Marshal Foch at that time was after something substantial and which he felt was getting well within his grasp. From what has appeared in print since then it is manifest that had the German people not seized upon the suggestion of an armistice the way they did, it would have taken but a few days or weeks longer for the Marshal to have completed his disposition of the forces at his command which would have brought about practically either surrender or annihilation of the enemy forces.

Letters and Post Card Rates Reduced

The Senate Finance Committe has reduced the rate of first class letter postage from 3c. per ounce or fraction thereof to 2c. and the rate on postal cards and private mailing cards from 2c. to 1c., this reduction to take effect July 1, 1919.

All Coal Restrictions Withdrawn

Commencing with Dec. 2, all coal restrictions imposed by the Fuel Administration upon the florists were removed.

From this we gather that the florists have the opportunity to buy anthracite, as there is no order standing against it; at the same time it is feared that anthracite will be a short commodity all through this Winter. Some 700 anthracite miners were to be released this week from the various home camps, so as to immediately get back at work in the mines, and doubtless other releases will follow as quickly as possible.

Window glass and clay product materials were also fully released, so that greenhouse glass and flower pots will likely be found freely upon the market, although in all likelihood these will be held at a much higher price than before the war.

Give Them Their Daily Bread

We made a statement in these columns but a few short weeks ago to the effect that immediately the war closed we would be called upon to feed from 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 people in Europe. At this day and from all facts obtainable, it would seem that in that prognostication we were not far from the facts. It is today said that there are 200,000,000 hungry people there now, and that among others we are called upon to supply food to Belgium, northern France, Serbia, Rumania, Montenegro, Poland, Russia and Armenia, additional to which it is more than likely we will have to supply food before long to Austria and parts of Germany. It is reported that contracts have already been made to ship 20,000,000 tons of food overseas. Housewives are asked to give greater thought to the matter of food economy even than as practised during the war. This for several months to come. The food situation, summed up, means that in the United States there must be no waste.

Quoting from Mr. Hoover:

"The determining factor for the success of such an enlarged appeal will be the vivid consciousness in every individual of obligation and opportunity. Such an intelligent 'world conscience' in the American people must be the main dependence of the stricken countries of the world until normal conditions are once more restored.

"America by her participation in the war has established the foundations of government by the people throughout the enemy countries, and this is the real bulwark of world peace. No government nor nation can stand if its people are starving. We must do our part if the world is not to be consumed in a flame of anarchy."

Argentina, India, Australia and Canada will also draw on their stores and give of their savings, but the resources of the United States are so much greater that our own people will be called upon to play the leading part in relieving the food necessities of these European peoples. We have been saving food to win the war and must now save it to keep nations alive that they may know happiness and prosper in the new era in which war is to be abolished.

No more food will be lost through the sinking at sea by submarines of food ships, and soon as the next harvest can be reaped the demands upon our own resources will have immediate relief.

Reconstruction and Re-education of Disabled Soldiers

On a high ridge skirting the western boundary of the city of New Haven, Conn., overlooking the city and harbor, is located the United States Government Hospital No. 16, devoted to treatment of tuberculosis patients from the Army.

A visit by the writer to the hospital and a talk with Captain Frank A. Waugh, Chief Educational Officer, brought out the following facts, which are especially interesting in their connection with horticulture:

Rehabilitation work will be carried on in fifteen general hospitals throughout the country. Vocational reeducation is under the authority of the Federal Board of Vocational Education. The New Haven Hospital not only conducts the physical reconstruction of disabled soldiers but gives them a vocational education and technical training in lines in keeping with their physical capabilities.

When play and work and study will help a man get well, this is the kind of medicine that is prescribed. The training given is such that a man can earn a good living after his discharge from the hospital.

Naturally, outdoor work is the most beneficial, as well as the most attractive to convalescents. During this year gardening in the hospital grounds was carried on extensively, the work being done by the patients with great enthusiasm, and it was frequently necessary to check them to prevent them from overworking.

It was hoped that the Government would sanction the erection of a greenhouse this Fall, so that horticultural work and plant propagation under glass could be taught, but this permission has not yet been given.

The question now is: "Will the growers and greenhouse men be able to take on these young men and give them suitable employment after their discharge from the hospital?" There is no doubt that the training they receive will thoroughly fit them for horticultural work and while it does not devolve upon the hospital to find these men positions, but rather upon the employment bureau of the Federal Board of Vocational Education, the hospital authorities, nevertheless feel that they would like to be reasonably sure that they are going in the right direction in training these men along the lines of industry mentioned. The opinion of horticulturists will be of real value in this matter and those in position to offer employment would be rendering a commendable service in giving their opinions through the columns of THE EXCHANGE.

WILLIAM J. RATHGEBER

Remission of Restrictions

Have our readers noted the difference between the announcement of the removal of restrictions and the announcement of their imposition—that is, the amount of newspaper space required in each case. Details of restrictions often occupied columns of explanatory text—a paragraph is all the space required to announce their annulment! The text of the latter calls for no amplification. As we go to press scarce a month will have elapsed since the signing of the armistice, yet in that brief time practically every bar which tended to impede the lines we represent has been let down, until today every wartime restriction has been remitted.

We are in the condition of a patient who has had a severe illness but who is now convalescent. Provided he takes proper care of himself he is allowed to go freely about his daily business, but he has to bear in mind, and in fact is hourly reminded of it, too, that he is not quite as strong as he was before he was taken down, and that he has to proceed with circumspection in his daily walks.

So it is with all our industries. We are free to go ahead and restore business to normal, but this restoration must be done using due discretion. Money is much cheaper than it was even two years ago, and on that account commodities are bound to remain higher in price, as also labor. As a preliminary to restoration, growers should have and, in fact, must receive more money for their products.

The Small Florist vs. a "Florist Trust"

Conditions seem ripe, says a correspondent in another column, for the formation of gigantic corporations to produce plants and flowers in specially favored sections of the country. The small florist may therefore well ask, "What is to become of me? If these great concerns, by choosing ideal soil and climates, by using the highest productive and manufacturing skill in a wholesale way, and by employing modern methods of transportation and marketing, place their product in the market at perhaps far lower cost than I can realize, I'll be forced out of business."

Doubtless such corporations, ably handled, would be able to undersell and even might continue to sell at a loss until the small local men would be "frozen out." If such concerns were formed they would likely practice the tactics of other trusts successful in their respective lines. It seems safe, however, to say that only those men who produced stock inferior to that of the corporation, who really did not know the costs of production and sale, and who failed to practice uptodate methods of advertising, would suffer seriously, at least in the cut flower if not also the ornamental plant line.

With such perishable products as these, especially cut flowers, it would seem that the local florist should be able to hold his own in spite of corporation competition. First his stock could and should be freshly cut and second, he would normally be more personally interested in his patrons than would a corporation's salesman. This sort of thing has already been proved in the "chain" stores in other lines of business. For each such store manager or salesman who is genuinely interested in the customer there are several times as many who are not. The result is that in every town and city where "chain" and corporation stores are established there are also private stores which do a business profitable in proportion to the acumen, the personality and the enterprise of the proprietors.

We, therefore, believe that while such florist corporations may become an actuality in the near future, the florist who watches his costs and who insists upon making a reasonable profit thereon, who has the three qualities just mentioned, and who "delivers the goods" has still a fair chance to secure his full share of business, the volume of demand being increased (even for the outsider) through the liberal advertising which a big corporation would feel it incumbent to undertake.

The Florist Business in War Times *

By J. Otto Thilow

The florist business in war times, whether active or dull, is no guide for future planning or preparation for times of peace, unless the strain is felt through loss or buoyancy enhanced through victory.

During the period of the Civil War of '61 to '65, I was located in the most strained quarters of the Southern States: viz, Richmond, Va. During that period the florist of those days knew little of forcing houses, or the production of flowers in quantity, save the once famous Camellia Japonica and Stevia serrata, grown in pots.

As the conflict continued four years and under strained conditions the florist was much in obscurity. Decorations were confined to funeral work, and to the social events among the then wealthy. As the years went on to the ending of the conflict and a vanquished South, thoughts were not directed to a speedy return to prosperity. But in the course of half a decade reconstruction and rebuilding awakened the people from their despondent lethargy, partly forced by markets opening for the southern products, Cotton and Tobacco.

Revival of Business in the South

The florist business was inactive, but with the trend of commercial growth and the remaking of the South, the boom was as much delegated to the florist as to other commercial lines. The steady growth of new methods, modern houses and equipment, placed Richmond in the forefront of the business in the South. In 1910 records show that there were about 700,000 feet of glass area, and a corresponding high grade of trade. Up to the time of this reconstruction the influence of the war upon the people was not hopeful, depression lasted a long time. As soon as the florist found that his business was a factor he began to advertise. This was long before the advent of the slogan, "Say it with Flowers."

During the Spanish-American war the business within the borders of the United States remained as active as at other times. The scene of action was in Cuba, the Philippines and other remote places. The only pressure brought upon us was a slight form of taxation. Not enough of our man power was taken from our population to make a perceptible difference in our operations. The war being of short duration, the effect was not marked. Therefore, we cannot draw any comparison as the business, unhampered as it was, made its usual stride in both construction and expansion.

Great War Rulings and Their Effect

Many problems have confronted us during the war just closed. We are still seriously under the pressure of those times. Our business was interrupted by Government rulings, such as the calls for our working forces for military purposes, the limited coal supply, and transportation restrictions. Many florists who feared the worst felt that they must close down for the coming Winter. Besides the Government restrictions the country had to face the recent epidemic, which, however, fostered sales of enormous quantities of flowers for funeral purposes. Many customers entered florist shops for the first time, otherwise they would have considered flowers a luxury as against the needs of the Red Cross and other benevolent organizations, whose functions are to alleviate sufferings of war.

While labor conditions are, by no means settled—their being less than 50 per cent. of efficient labor obtainable—florists have learned many points of efficiency in curtailing expenses, some thought impossible until tried. Construction was unthought of, except for repairs which are necessary. Knowing the value of material, florists constructed only to the extent that high labor cost and their working ability permitted. They will thus be better able to cope with the periods of business slumps which often come after war, or during peace times. These are called financial crises.

Have the strain and requirements of curtailing voluntarily the Government demands taught as the lesson by which we can profit? I am of the opinion that the majority of florists have, in their operation, noted many points never resorted to before. These will ultimately be a source of saving and profit.

The awakening of a consuming public, after a period of depression when all energy and time has been directed to war needs, will demand greater intensity, the florist business being fostered by the liberal patronage of the public, especially the leaders of benevolence and patriotism will profit to a large extent. People have not thrown aside their interest in floriculture. They will again turn to their surroundings and work among and talk to their garden pets, as well as adorn their homes with ornamental plants. Even those who have suffered losses, will not harbor their sadness, except with a sorrowing pride. They will not forget nature's product. It is food for the soul. The liberal patronage upon the return of order out of chaos will enhance the florist business as much as in any other line.

The florist who depends on his glass and heat is not alone in this disturbance. The nurseryman also feels the loss of trade severely, if he has been importing, whether outside stock or stock for under glass, he has been restricted likewise. Operations have been latent. But the same spirit that dominates the home interior and all social functions, is also a factor for the home environment. The grounds of the established estate and those of new operations for new homes all will need the attention of a horticulturist, so the awakening comes to all alike.

Gains Follow Losses

During the past two years losses have been many, both on account of war and plague; even now the prospects are not altogether promising. We must reflect upon the losses our horticultural brethren have borne abroad, those who have seen their establishments shattered by shot and shell, their all, even their families, torn and vanished. What must be their hope and prospect? The interdependence of man so clearly manifests itself from this conflict, that the work is united as never before.

As a nation, we have given much, so great good must come from our sacrifice. In the South the reconstruction lasted for many years, because the Southern struggle failed, but in this great war, now hopefully finished, our land is yielding in greater abundance and thousands who knew not what labor means are now enjoying the bit they can do to encourage mother earth to double her yield. What man power did before we entered the trouble has awakened the prosperity of this land, not menaced by the encroachment of the enemy. With new vigor and determined spirit to meet the new era and dawn of prosperity, we must not forget that peace has come to all, and victory to us.

* Synopsis of an address delivered before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, December 3.

Second Class Mailing Rates to be Reduced

Under the proviso of the first war revenue act which became law in 1917, the newspapers of the country entered as second class matter which, for ages past had been mailed at the rate of 1c. a pound, were placed in the same distance zones as governed the mailing of parcel post packages. Graduated postage rates from the first to the eighth zones were fixed—one rate for reading matter, a higher rate for advertising. These charges were to be increased annually for four years at which time they reached their maximum. The advertising section then in the eighth zone would have reached 10c. a pound. The rates went into effect July 1, 1918.

Even under the first year's term they are proving considerable burden to the papers, not only through the increased rate which they (the newspapers) are called upon to pay, but owing to the amount of bookkeeping necessary to be done with every issue in order to fix the zone, the number of copies to each zone, and the amount of charge for that zone.

None of the papers have increased their subscription price on this account so far as we know, all publishers evidently being of the opinion that the injustice of the enactment would be recognized sooner or later, and long before the oppressive rates would be put into force after the first year's mailing.

Consequently, the relief felt among all publishers has been great this week through the knowledge that by unanimous action of the Senate Committee on Finance, the old mailing rates have been practically restored all along the line, to take effect July, 1919, the highest rate mentioned being 1½c. a pound for all contents, whether advertising or reading, beyond the first 200 miles.

Quite naturally, the publishers hope that the House and the Senate will agree with the action of the Senate Committee on Finance, and thus put an end to what threatened to become an onerous tax which would have borne most heavily on long distance subscribers, as there would have been no escape from calling upon these to pay the extra postage. It would have been necessary for many of the papers to have added all the way from 5c. to 10c. per copy to the prevailing subscription rate.

It wis oor kettle—"Ill learn ye tae tie the kettle tae the dog's tail!" Tommy's mother yelled in her wrath. "It wasna' oor dog!" cried frightened Thomas. "Naw it wisna' oor dog," shrieked the enraged mother, "but it wis oor kettle!" —Pearson's.

Obituary

Mrs. Alonzo J. Bryan

Mrs. Anna Bryan, 34 years old, wife of Alonzo J. Bryan, of Washington, N. J., died Dec. 1 at her home, 282 Washington ave., from pneumonia, following influenza. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Babcock and was born in Washington. In 1908 she was married to Mr. Bryan, besides whom and her parents, she is survived by two children, Mary Bell Bryan and Alonzo J. Bryan Jr. She was active in the affairs of the Methodist Church. The funeral, held on Wednesday, was conducted by Rev. J. E. Washabaugh, pastor of the Methodist Church, assisted by J. B. J. Rhodes, now of Long Branch, a former pastor of the church. Interment was in the cemetery at Asbury, Warren County.

John Henry Small

John Henry Small died on Dec. 2, at his late residence, 1117 Vermont ave., N. W,. Washington, D. C., aged 63 years. Although he had been in failing health for many months his death was not looked for, as he continued actively engaged in business affairs up to Friday before his death, on which day he appeared at his flower shop for the last time. Sunday his condition became serious and he died the following day.

With the passing away of Mr. Small the trade loses a foremost artist in his line. His work was always original, unique and artistic. His horticultural talent was inherited from several generations of ancestors; his father, John H. Small, the first, who died in 1909 at the age of 82 years, enjoyed not only the distinction of being the pioneer floral decorator of Washington, but to him belongs the honor of having brought about the use of natural flowers for table decorations in this country, after having persuaded the social leader, Lord Lyons, then British Minister at the Capitol, to discard the customary feather flower and wax fruit decorations for natural flowers. Mr. Small's paternal great-grandfather was the possessor of a nursery at Colnbrook, England, for many years, and his maternal great grandfather was a Welch authority on landscape work, serving the first Duchess of Marlborough in that capacity, while Blenheim palace was being constructed.

His firm has for years enjoyed the White House patronage, as well as that of dignitaries both in this country and abroad, and because of this patronage perhaps few other firms in the country received as much publicity as the Washington flower shop of J. H. Small & Sons. During Mr. Small's residence of forty years in the District of Columbia he took an active part in its business, civic and social life. His acquaintance with public men of several decades was a large one and numbered among his friends presidents, high officials of our own Government, as well as ambassadors and diplomatic representatives of many lands.

Mr. Small was the senior member of the firm of J. H. Small & Sons which was established in Washington by his late father in 1855. Today, in addition to their Washington establishment they possess one of the most distinctive flower shops in New York City at Madison ave. and 52d st. as well as a branch at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Mr. Small was a director of the Union Trust Co. and of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank of Washington, D. C., and he was a past president of the Washington Board of Trade. He ranked high in local Masonic circles; he was a member of Washington Centennial Lodge, No. 14, F. & A. M., and in 1891-2 he served as its Master of Masons in the District of Columbia. He was the leading spirit in the conception, plans, location and erection of the handsome Masonic Temple at 13th and H sts. N. W., having served as president of the Masonic Temple Ass'n, which built it. Among the social organizations to which Mr. Small belonged were the Commercial Club of Washington, the Blue Ridge Rod and Gun Club, the Ass'n of Oldest Inhabitants, and as a member of the famous dining organization, the Gridiron Club. Mr. Small was responsible for the ever varied and impressive artistic floral effects which have been such a striking feature of the dinners held in the Capitol City.

Mr. Small is survived by his wife and by three children, Lieut. John Henry Small, Jr., U. S. A., Mrs. Paul Sleman and Mrs. H. B. Leary.

Miscellaneous Decorations in the Hotel and Private Home

The modern hotel interior calls for relief decoration, except where a transformation is required—A lesson on table decorating, defining the three kinds, and explaining the method of doing the work—How to make a correct boutonnière.

By W. CLEAVER HARRY

To keep pace with the style in modern decorating is to know the requirements of the new interior and to profit by the experience of the older one. Coupled with the practical knowledge there must also be in evidence a fund of resourcefulness and common sense and the ability to promote an opportunity, no matter how small, to a marked advantage.

The old fashioned interior was either so ornate with the ginger bread style of the period, or so gloomy that much decoration was needed to transform it for a festival occasion. Banks of foliage plants and a profusion of bloom were needed to change the whole interior so that not a trace of the room in its original form could be recognized.

The later order and present day decorations for hotel and private home call for what we now term relief decoration. By that we mean the floral decorator uses his art and skill to further augment and give the festive touch to an interior already beautiful in its color and design. He does not try to cover up or hide the walls with heavy foliage, tightly arranged, but he idealizes the scheme of the interior, takes advantage of the present beauty of the room, and accentuates it until his vision is realized. Floral decorating of the present is not more difficult than that of former years. It is easier to all except the florist who is unwilling to part with his old ideas. Easier by far to the man who uses his faculties of observation; and who has some initiative and versatility.

Formerly, when the Five o'Clock Club gave its big event in the old Bellevue Hotel, the gloomy room was a bower of palms and blooming plants. The ceiling was entirely covered with greens and dotted with miniature lights. On the wall back of the speaker was the clock design in red and white carnations, with the hands pointing to the hour of five. The same design could have been used for a funeral, if taken from the wall and put on a base.

A modern interior in the millionaire circle, decorated on the à la carte plan, using special vases on standards

Nowadays, the same club meets in the new Bellevue Hotel, on the site of the old. The room is so different that it is like a modern greenhouse compared with the one of 35 years ago. The walls are already in such harmonious and cheerful colors that they form a magnificent background for everything. We just group the plants in lovely clusters between the draperies so as to relieve and heighten the interior; place garlands of wild smilax in the panels on the wall, etc. The Five o'Clock emblem of the club is correctly followed in an electrically illuminated dial, with the hands pointing to the hour. The dial is banked with a setting of greens, flowers and the national colors, cleverly executed.

Table Decorations for All Occasions

One of the most important departments in general decorating is that of table decorations. This work, while separate from the handling of plants and cut flowers in house and hotel, is included in the decoration, and is therefore inseparable from it. Rarely do we plan and execute a decoration of the kind referred to in this chapter that the table is not one of the most important features of the order. It is important that we take up the intensely practical methods of table work, and the mental concept that exercises most influence over it, namely the color scheme.

Table decorations may be divided into three classes, all having points in common, yet differing in detail of arrangement. These three kinds of table decorations are: 1, Dinner Table; 2, Buffet Table; 3, Banquet Table. Of the first class, we consider tables for dinners, luncheons or wedding breakfasts. This class calls for the most detail in the choice of design and color scheme. A dinner table is more or less a private occasion, and the decorations, when anything is attempted, have much to do with the success of the entire affair.

The whole center of the table is given over to the floral decorations. One of the main points is to see that the view across the table is unobstructed. If a low center piece is used the line of vision will be above the flowers. If a high arrangement is used, it must be high enough to allow a view across below the lowest flowers. Whatever is undertaken on the dinner table must be well done, and the price must be sufficient to do the work right—otherwise let the other fellow do it.

The second class of table decoration is for the buffet or service table. This one, when completed, may be spoken of as a decorated table, rather than a table decoration. No guests are seated. The table is usually well filled with piles of plates and the supplies of the caterer. The guests view the buffet from a standing position about the room. The decorations should be as high as space permits. Tall vases and high baskets are the proper receptacles.

The third kind is the banquet table. This is also a dinner table, but it does not call for the same detailed treatment as a private dinner. One of the reasons is that the price for this work is much lower in proportion to the size of the tables and number of the guests. The banquet tables may be long and narrow, with a head table running across the ends like a gridiron, or they may be individual round tables, seating eight or ten people each, with one long table for the speakers. Sometimes a horseshoe table is used, but in all cases the decorative principle is the same. An effect is made of low baskets, or pans filled low, with thin glass vases alternating. The greens on the cloth may be hardy ferns, Wild Smilax or Asparagus, according to the available material and the price. General effect is all that is wanted here. There are occasions when banquet tables are executed with as much detail as a small dinner, but they are exceptional.

Choosing the Color Scheme

There is a psychology of colors in table decorating. The most effective color scheme, without exception, is pink. This color radiates joy, laughter, fellowship and good cheer. Women are most beautiful under soft pink lights and the reflections from pink flowers. This is why pink is always the vogue color. Combinations where pink is dominant are even more beautiful. For these, take pink Roses and white Lilac, or the various shades of pink in Spencer Sweet Peas. Yellow is richer in daylight. It pales at night, especially if bright light is used. Candle lights subdue and enrich all colors. The dim, soft light offsets the glare of the white cloth. Violets are hard to handle in color schemes. When used alone they are gloomy and depressing. Red is a jolly good cheer color, and will stand more light than any other. Be careful that the general colors in the room are not "old rose" when you use red. Miniature electric lights are often effective in table decoration. A set should be kept on hand with the necessary attachments for connecting so that there will be no danger of blowing out the fuses and putting the whole dining room in darkness. The bulbs can be colored in a few minutes to match any scheme.

Spring flowers are popular in season. The very latest in color schemes is the pastel combination. It consists of a mixture of the principal pastel shades in a harmonious and contrasting combination. One color sets off the other. For instance, yellow Daffodils and yellow Daisies by themselves are weak and insipid, but in the pastel combinations, the blue Pansies and the wonderful pink of Sweet Peas, enrich the color of the Daffodils and Daisies.

Receptacles and How to Fill Them

First in the line of properties for table work are baskets, all of which must have metal linings. Flowers in damp moss will not keep fresh long enough to prevent wilting. Cheap glass dishes, bowl shaped, are practical receptacles; the cost is so little that in many cases it does not pay to send for the empties. A beautiful sunburst can be made by using one of these for a receptacle. Stretch green twine across the diameter of the dish by going around the bottom and across the top until it is crisscrossed like a loose woven web. Place the dish in the center of the table and place the greens in position. Then begin filling, placing the flowers in the outer edge of the circumference first. Use long stemmed flowers and try to have the stems reach the water. As you approach the center, shorten the stems and build the center higher by placing some heavy greens, like Laurel, between the strings of the dish to block up the flowers. While this arrangement is intended to be flat, it must not be too flat, so be careful to have the center deep enough to give graceful lines to the whole design when finished. No wiring nor stemming is necessary; the flowers, being in water, will keep well. If Roses are used in this method the stems must be scraped to get them between the strings.

Children's straw hats make a good receptacle for table work. An ordinary tin pan, from the five and ten-cent store, just fits the crown. On account of the shallowness, it will be necessary to fill the pan loosely with moss and turn a No. 22 wire on the ends of the stems to keep the flowers in position. Draw a medium wide ribbon around the crown, just enough to give the brim a nice flare, then note the effect.

For luncheon, a gathering-basket, with bunches of Sweet Peas, which can be given to the guests to wear afterward is an old idea, but it is a good one for a midday, informal affair.

Just a word about the proper use of greens. Do not let your green goods stick up at all angles through the flowers. Greens are backgrounds. They are foundations, and should never be in evidence.

at the Marlborough. There will be about fifty covers. We have just $75. Go ahead and give us the best show you can for the money." To book the first order, you may need every bit of knowledge that you possess. On the second you simply need a pencil and pad.

To the first, an immediate suggestion may be a bad one, so you play for time and ask if she has decided on a color scheme. If so, you may then bring tactfully and slowly on your suggestive selling talk. Watch carefully for a cue on the arrangement. You rarely get "new ideas" finished and complete from customers, but we do get some valuable material in chips that can be developed later on. Never allow yourself to be cajoled into doing a piece of work that you know in your own mind is going to be unsatisfactory either way. It's nice to have a reputation for things that are novel and new, but that reputation is worth most when it is built on a few things you did well rather than on some freakish knick-knacks displayed as novelties. Whatever you attempt in novelties let it be done so that it can be easily interpreted. If you wish to carry out the travel idea in a bon voyage table, don't make a ship out of flowers. It's absurd and an offense to good taste. A sea of flowers, say Sweet Peas, with a fully equipped ocean liner to be obtained from a high-grade toy store, would carry the message. Always use flowers wherever possible but don't kill the idea with them.

There is personality in table decorating. While there are certain best ways to handle the mechanical end of the work the one great principle in arrangement is to make the decorating look as if it grew there. Keep in mind the mental picture of how it is going to look when the guests take their places at the table. By the use of this faculty of constructive imagination you will develop that master touch, that invisible something, that makes your work incomparable with any other; the touch of personality.

Making the Boutonnière

The main point in boutonnière making is neatness. They must be made very formal. The principal flowers in use are: white Carnation, white Rose, Gardenia, Lily of the Valley, Sweet Peas, sometimes white Violets. Never use a wire heavier than No. 24 on boutonnières, and do not wrap the stem with the wire with more turns than are absolutely necessary to secure it.

In preparing the foil, first cut it into small squares and turn the edges like a hem on all sides. To foil the stem properly so that it will run to a neat point, start a corner of the foil at the base of the flower, twist it around the stem to a point. Notice that by starting at the upper corner of the foil and putting it around diagonally, the stem will be much neater than if wrapped straight, which always makes a clumsy blunt stem, that gives the whole thing a crude look. Use green foil, whenever obtainable; it is much more refined looking than the nickel or purple.

In making the Gardenia boutonnière, remove the foliage from just under the flower and place a couple of the leaves under the back of the petals. Fasten them by running a wire right through the stem and leaves and turn it down the stem. See that the leaves do not stick out very much beyond the flower. By stemming it in this manner, the Gardenia should now be flat like a rosette, supported and protected by the leaf on the back.

Another way of making or flattening the Gardenia is to slip a disc of thin white cardboard close up under the back of the flower like a bouquet holder. Personally, we do not favor this because it is then difficult to make the boutonnière set nicely on the lapel.

Lily of the Valley and Sweet Peas, and all flowers of this character, when used in boutonnières must be bunched carefully in a knot, that must neither be too flat nor too round, too large nor too small. Your eye will guide you. Then try it on the lapel and see how it looks. If the Valley spikes are too long, strip off some of the bells from the bottom, otherwise the boutonnière, when finished, will be straggly and fall over when it gets the least bit wilted. Keep the flowers close together and build them up snug. Omit all greens unless it be a tiny bit of the point of a leaf. This also helps to support the flowers, as with the Gardenia. In the choice of boutonnières for the wedding, the groom usually wears one of the same flower as is in the bride's bouquet; but there is no set rule, just custom, that's all. Don't slight the boutonnières. Make them nice and don't forget to put a pin in the stem of every one.

Possibility of a Florist Trust

Samuel Batson reviews present and prospective conditions. High cost of production and sale mean bare existence to small local florist. Wireless Telegraphy and motor truck discount time and distance. So huge producing, distributing and selling concerns may grow plants in best adapted regions and control markets

Many years ago, even before the invention of electric lights and the telephone, a learned man whose name I have forgotten, if indeed I ever knew it, wrote a treatise on time and space, arguing that if either or both could be eliminated everything would be different from the then present conditions. Well, tthe telephone and the wireless have, as far as time is concerned, eliminated distance, while the motor truck and the airship promise to be a good second in many respects; so now that the shadow of war is lifted and the era of peace and good will is at hand it may be well to consider the prospects before us and their relation to the trade.

Talk of Normal Times Return

There is a fairly general opinion and talk of things and business again becoming normal, the prevailing note being the expectation of a resumption of business based on pre-war conditions, perhaps with some increase of prices to help balance cost of production and so on. These conditions may easily obtain for a certain length of time, but not for long, for as sure as the sun rises in the East our business will be readjusted within the next few years on a basis unparalleled in the history of the trade. We may fairly assume that the present prices asked for cut flowers represent but a bare existence for the grower. The condition of wholesaler and retailer are little if any better. On the other hand the ultimate consumer is paying all the stock is worth and often quite a bit more. For instance, $18 or $20 for a dozen Am. Beauty Roses at Christmas! Under past conditions in order to make ends meet these fluctuating prices could hardly be avoided. I am offering no criticism except to show we cannot expect prices to advance to meet our present and future high cost of production under the existing crude methods of growing and marketing. No indeed, regarding values I must admit the buyer is paying all the flowers are worth, but as a grower I must also confess I am not getting sufficient to make a decent profit. This certainly is an unfortunate state of affairs and one for which at present I can offer no remedy except to make whatever adjustments one can from time to time to meet each succeeding condition as it arises. When these come I imagine they will come in rapid sequence.

Cost of Production Excessive

At present we are producing our flowers under the most difficult conditions, both in regard to climate and costliness, and totally regardless of the labor supplies. We are not to blame for this for hitherto the nearness to the market has been an object of the first importance. Unfortunately there is a lot of money tied up in buildings, in locations unadapted for the successful growing of flowers, causing the expenditure of much extra first cost of building and subsequent upkeep, and the fuel and labor costs in proportion. No wonder, under these circumstances, cost of production mounts above all possibilities of price quotations ever selling even. There is no use to expect the price of either labor or fuel will ever drop to the level of pre-war times. We are certainly facing a situation that will call for co-operation and earnest consideration. I see no reason to cover with a foolish optimism circumstances which may well bring disaster unless carefully prepared against.

Huge Growing Establishments Expected

In brief, we may well expect to see established within the next few years gigantic corporations formed for the production of plants and flowers located at widely different points as for instance the growing of 'Mums and all kinds of bulbs and flowers on the Pacific coast. Roses, etc., at points like Oregon, greens and ferns in Florida and Carnations in those sections wherever favorable, and so on through the list. The cost of production will be at the lowest, it being a well established fact that almost every plant has its favored location where it may be grown with an ease and certainty not obtainable elsewhere.

Wireless installations, motor and airship service, together with a chain of wholesale or retail stores throughout the larger cities at least, will supply the public with an abundance of fresh flowers daily at a price we, under present conditions, may think impossible. Moreover they will make good dividends and pay good wages. A general manager will sit in his office in some city in the middle West, having his finger on market conditions in every city. Through his direction almost regardless of weather conditions, stock as needed will arrive wherever wanted. First class artist decorators and designers will be attached to each district so every possibility will be provided for at the least expense. Every employee will be kept busy and all labor saving devices installed. There will be no useless duplication of store rental or other overhead expense—everything will be made to count and no wastefulness allowed. We shall see organizations like the Standard Oil and the Meat Trust in our business a few years from now so it behooves us to make our preparations.

The Market

Dec. 3.—In our review of the market last week we spoke of supply, demand and prices of flowers for Thanksgiving up to 2 p.m. Wednesday. Subsequently we learned that both the arrivals of flowers and the demand were light during the remainder of the day and also on Thursday morning. There were few, if any, advances in prices above those named last week, and in the case of Carnations as early as Wednesday there was a decided break in prices to the extent of $1 to $2 per 100. Even at these lower prices there were more than enough to satisfy the demand. The supply and the demand in general were pretty well balanced. As regards the general verdict of the wholesalers on Thanksgiving business is expressed, to quote a few exactly, thus: "A good Thanksgiving business," "Very satisfactory on the whole," " surpassed anything we expected," "we must not expect at Thanksgiving any such volume of sales as at Christmas or Easter," "the supply and the demand were fairly well balanced this Thanksgiving," "the results in general were fully as good as we expected."

Today, Tuesday, the market on the whole is in short supply and there is a moderately good demand. Prices are high and firm on most items of stock.

American Beauty Roses are in medium supply and are meeting with a fair demand at 20c. to 60c. each for special grade blooms. Other grades are realizing corresponding prices. Hybrid-tea Roses are not in large supply, and are moving well. Top grade blooms, according to variety, are selling at 8c to 30c. each and No. 2 grade blooms at 3c. to 6c. each.

There are considerable arrivals of Carnations, which are not moving briskly. Prices for select blooms are from 4c. to 6c. each.

Cattleya orchids are in moderate supply and are in good demand at about 40c. to 50c. each. Lily of the Valley is moving well at $6 to $8 per 100 for the best blooms. There is a medium supply of white and a small supply of pink Lilies, both of which are moving freely, the former at $12 to $15, and the latter at from $4 to $10 per 100.

The supply of 'Mums is small, and the quality not such as to attract buying. This is especially true of most of the bunch 'Mums, the demand at quoted prices is moderate. Their passing out of the market will make a gap which it will be hard to fill.

In miscellaneous flowers, there is an abundance of Stevia, considerable Bouvardia, a few Wallflowers, Sweet Peas, and Calendula, a moderate supply of Mignonette, Pansies and Violets, and plenty of greens all of which are meeting with a fair demand at quoted prices.

Flower Show Possibilities

There was a meeting of the Flower Show Committee, composed of a committee of the New York Florists' Club and one of the Horticultural Society of New York, at Secretary John Young's office, on Monday, Dec. 2, at 2:30 p.m., to discuss the matter of holding a flower show in the Spring of 1919. The committee decided not to have a show in 1919. There is, however, the committee believes, a fair possibility that a flower show will be held under its auspices in the Spring of 1920 in the Grand Central Palace in this city.

Charles H. Totty, president, and John Young, secretary of the S. A. F. and O. H., left this city on Monday night for Atlantic City, N. J., to attend a convention of trade interests called by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Herman Kurth, aged 29, for many years traveling salesman for Reed & Keller, Inc., this city, died on Nov. 24, of pneumonia, at his home at Union Hill, N. J. Mr. Kurth was well known to the trade and well liked because of his kindly and courteous disposition.

Capt. Joseph Raphael De Lamar, who died in New York this week, was a man of many parts and his history reads like a romance. Originally a sailor, he is reputed to have accumulated over 20 millions of dollars, the bulk of which was obtained from mining enterprises. To our trade Capt. De Lamar was known as a collector of plants and flowers. The trained Chrysanthemums shown at the exhibit in the Natural Museum of History, of which two illustrations appeared

Patrick Donigan, well known to everyone in the wholesale and retail flower business in this city, died suddenly of heart disease, on Dec. 2, in his home at 26 Cambridge ave., Jersey City, N. J. Mr. Donigan was 63 years old. For about 15 years he was salesman for Ford Bros. and for M. C. Ford, wholesale florists, having previously worked for James Hart, and at the time of his death was working for Joseph Levy. The funeral services were held at his late residence at 2 p.m., Wednesday of this week. A beautiful floral design was sent by the proprietors of the wholesale flower stores and their employees as a token of their sincere respect for the deceased.

Members of the Florists' Club are requested to note that the election of officers for 1919 will take place at its next meeting, Dec. 9 at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Bldg., 23d st. and Eighth ave., when a full attendance is desired.

R. J. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., was a recent visitor in town.

Letter from Adolph Le Moult

The following has been received from Adolph Le Moult of the firm of Adolph Le Moult & Son, Inc., 202 Bowery. The letter refers to the work of the Florists' Club committee for collecting flowers for the base hospitals, of which committee Mr. Le Moult is a member.

In THE EXCHANGE of Nov. 30 you speak of credit due me for the collecting of flowers for the hospitals. I would like to state that the credit is entirely due to those who so cheerfully contributed; as far as my part was concerned, it was not only a pleasure but a privilege to be allowed to do what I consider a most dutiful work. I assure you if those who gave could only see and hear what their flowers accomplished they would feel that they were doubly repaid for what they have done.

My father often told me that a single flower given from the heart spoke volumes, and I never realized how true it was until last Spring when I started visiting the base hospitals. We saw cases on Thanksgiving Day where boys were too sick to eat, too sick to care, and who could not be cheered up even by the good ladies in our party; yet, when they saw a flower, their faces lit up and with a smile they reached out and took the bloom and invariably said: "Oh, I thank you," or something to that effect.

These are the words that were meant, not for us, but for those who so generously gave. Let us therefore keep up with this glorious work, and let those of us who are in the business which, above all others, appeals to sentiment give in sentiment to those who have given so freely of their life's blood in a cause so full of sentiment and love of mankind, until we are joined by the general public in "Saying it with Flowers," not only to soldiers but to anyone sick, to whom flowers bring such comfort.

We will be called upon by the good women of the National League for Woman's Service, who do such wonderful work among our boys (really doing our work) and if the committee sees fit to give me the privilege of helping, I shall be pleased to call on everyone who, I know, will give, not for charity, but with a heart full of sentiment and happiness, to be allowed to spread joy and comfort in a world already too sad.

The Market

Dec. 3,—Business at the wholesale flower market since Thanksgiving Day has been rather quiet. There isn't any heavy supply of flowers and demand is light. Prices are lower. The supply of American Beauty Roses is not large but the quality is good. Prices range for first grade Roses from 35c. to 50c. apiece. Hybrid tea Roses are only moderately plentiful. Most of them are cleaned up early in the day at prices covering all grades from 3c. to 20c. each. Carnations, slightly more plentiful, are in good demand on account of 'Mums being pretty well cleaned up. Prices are from 3c. to 6c., with a few fancy flowers at higher figures.

Cattleyas are in good supply. The demand is fair at 50c. to 60c. each. 'Mums were pretty well cleaned up for Thanksgiving Day. Those offered now are not of first quality. Prices are still good—$2 and $3 per doz. for not high grade material. Pompons go for 50c. per bunch. Violets are not over abundant. Quality is poor on account of the mild weather some weeks ago. Prices vary from 50c. to $1 per 100. Stevia is plentiful and is selling well. The supply of Sweet Peas is rather meagre; Calendulas fair; Pansies plentiful but short stemmed. Lilies are in fair supply but the call is light at 12c. to 16c. each. Asparagus supply is adequate to fill demands. Plants are plentiful and of excellent quality. Cyclamen and Begonia sell well. Nicely fruited Orange plants sell readily. Heaths are moving well and there are now offered nice pans of Poinsettias.

Thanksgiving Day Report

On the whole Thanksgiving Day business did not turn out as successful as was anticipated. In the first place, flowers shortened up in supply early in the week; consequently from that time prices began to advance. Many more flowers could have been sold if prices had been lower. Undoubtedly the unreasonably high cost of living had a good deal to do with the curtailment in the sales of plants and flowers. Until this is

BEAUTIES BEAUTIES

During the entire month of December we expect to have a large supply of Beauties. The quality of our Beauties will satisfy the most particular buyer. If you are acquainted with the conditions in the Philadelphia Market you will know we have the largest supply, and also the best. You can recommend them to your customers, as we feel sure that they will give satisfaction to both of you. If you are in the market get our prices—they will interest you.

CYPRIPEDIUM

They are in full crop now and we can supply most any quantity. We are selling the cut of the largest collection of plants in this section. You can always get them here in most any quantity. We sell them in quantity, and we have several hundred on hand most of the time.

WHITE LILAC

We received the first shipments of Lilac this week and from now on you can depend on us for a regular supply. Suggest White Lilac to your customers as a substitute for Valley. Lilac has been a specialty with us for years, and this season we will have it in quantity of the usual fine quality.

remedied the buying of flowers will not be as large as it should be. Then if flowers are too high in prices the public will do as it did with turkeys at 60c. a lb. last week; will go without them.

Carnations were not plentiful and sold from 6c. to 8c. Roses were fairly plentiful; 6in. stock sold for 6c. and from that price they went to 25c. each. 'Mums were in good supply; Bonnaffon was the leader at $2 to $4 a doz. Pompons sold in small bunches at 50c. Violets were from $1 to $2 per 100, but did not sell as well as usual. Plants, such as Cyclamen, Begonias and small Heaths sold well.

Timely Lectures

The next meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club will be on Tuesday evening, Dec. 17. Herman Bartsch will speak on "The Growing of Christmas Plants" and Henry Penn will talk on "Handling Christmas Plants at the Store."

A letter has been received from Sam Trockman, who was for many years with Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., and who is now in the navy. He is cruising in South American waters. He is well and likes the work very much.

The writer regrets to have to report the death of Walter Aylward, florist, Woburn, Mass. He had been ailing for some time with diabetes, and succumbed to the disease on Friday, Oct. 29. He was a well liked young man and his many associates will be sorry to hear of his death.

Welch Bros. Co., did a good business for Thanksgiving, slightly ahead of that of last year. Shipping business was brisk, but would have been better if prices had been lower.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., reports that business was far ahead of last year's and shipping trade excellent.

B. A. Snyder Co. also report a much larger business than was done last year, and was much more easily handled in their large new store. The new and very handsome clock presented to them a week ago has now been placed in the store.

The high price of coal and also its scarcity has caused the closing of 40 greenhouse establishments in this vicinity. This in itself will make flowers shorter in supply during the Winter.

On Tuesday, Nov. 19th, the greenhouses of Miss Helen Mansfield, 53 Pine Grove ave., Lynn, were damaged by fire. The loss is about $500.

The New England Florist Supply Co. is rushed with Christmas business. There is an unusually large demand for Laurel coping and wreaths. R. C.

John J. Cassidy, florist, at 6 Beacon st., will again be candidate for city council, it is reported. He has been a member of the sinking fund commission for many years.

Chicago

Thanksgiving Market Excellent

Dec. 2.—The Thanksgiving demand was one of the best for several years. The shipping trade that started early in the week kept up until Wednesday, and the local buyers all put in larger supplies than on former occasions. Roses, Carnations and 'Mums comprised about 85 per cent. of the stock offered. All Roses and Carnations were sold out early in the week at list prices. Some dealers also report a cleanup in 'Mums, while others report more 'Mums on hand in the pompon and small flowered varieties than there was any demand for. From a wholesaler's standpoint the market was all that could be desired.

From a retailer's view there were some disappointments. The weather on Thanksgiving Day was the worst ever seen here. It rained and snowed continuously, accompanied by high winds, so that all outdoor sports and festivities scheduled for the day had to be cancelled and few, if any people were seen on the streets. On the day previous to Thanksgiving business was good; everybody reported good business in the filling of advance orders and with most of them the average business for the occasion showed a substantial increase. It was those who depended on a good transient Thanksgiving Day trade that were disappointed the most.

Since Thanksgiving Day there seems to have been a general tightening of all stock. Apparently the growers cut so closely for the holiday they had nothing left and will not have for a few days. It is generally conceded that the market will remain tight throughout the entire Winter and stock will bring higher prices than ever before.

The supply of Roses is particularly short; dealers have trouble in getting stock to fill orders. Short-stemmed stock, for which there is a greater demand than for long-stemmed, has advanced to $5 per 100, with the better grades proportionately higher.

Carnations are also in short supply; they are bringing record prices for this time of year. The stock coming in is of good quality and brings easily from $5 to $6 per 100. Some fancy stock brought $8 and $10 at Thanksgiving. The 'Mum season is nearly over, except in a few extremely late varieties, which may be had for probably a couple of weeks longer. Probably the present week will see the end of pompon supply, as well as some poor stock in other sorts. With these out of the way, buyers will face the stiffest market for the remainder of the season that they have ever experienced.

The supply of Easter Lilies is improving, but still all move at good prices. There is enough Valley at list prices. More orchids could be sold some days if they were to be had. Violets are moving well. The supply of Callas is getting larger each week and while not appealing specially to buyers, all stock moves, as it is often a case of taking whatever can be had on the market. Paperwhite Narcissi are coming in freely and have been selling at record breaking prices, some going as high as $6 per 100, fully three times the price in other seasons.

There are some Daisies, Mignonette, Sweet Peas, Snapdragons, but not in any quantity to relieve the shortage of other stock more generally in demand. There is an insistent call for all greens, with no large supply on hand. The wholesale houses remained open Thursday until noon, when all closed to enjoy Thanksgiving celebrations with their families and friends.

General News

A. Lange, 25 E. Madison st., and Fleischman's, in the Railway Exchange building on Jackson boulevard, had attractive Thanksgiving advertisements in the Daily Tribune offering appropriate flowers.

Zech & Mann report one of the most satisfactory Thanksgiving week's business in their history. Shipping trade was unusually heavy.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department is having a big demand for all supplies. The lifting of the embargo on wire for the manufacture of designs gives much satisfaction to the supply trade; heretofore most orders were only partially filled.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club at the Randolph Hotel on Thursday evening promises to be interesting. Growers will exhibit late flowering 'Mums and one of the supply houses will show Christmas novelties in baskets, etc.

Plant growers around Chicago who grow flowering plants for Christmas trade, report a heavy demand. Some of the largest firms are refusing current advance orders taking up all stock. Dealers who try to purchase flowering plants late this season will find stock well cleaned up.

There will be little if any early flowering bulb stock this season on account of bulbs coming in so late.

The D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, is sending to the local trade attractive evergreens for filling window boxes. Sample plants of miniature Christmas trees, balled and burlapped are to be seen at some of the stores. Owing to the scarcity of Boxwood small evergreen plants will be in better demand than ever this season.

Cypripedium Insigne

In quantity, both now and for the holidays, of splendid quality.

It would be advisable, on account of express conditions, to have your Christmas order shipped a week or ten days ahead of time. They will keep all right, besides making a good show.

Light Thanksgiving Day Market

Dec. 3.—The market for Thanksgiving Day showed a very light supply, with the result that there was not enough stock fully to meet all demands. Prices ran about as per this week's list. This week is opening with a very limited supply, with prices holding up to last week's figures. 'Mums, with the exception of some late ones, are almost over with:

pompons are also well on to the end. Roses, with the exception of American Beauty, are all on the short side of the market. Carnations are going actively at the ruling price of $8 per 100. There are a few more orchids arriving. Lilac has made its appearance again; it is selling at about $1.50 per bunch. Easter Lilies remain steady at 15c. Callas at the same figure. Violets are beginning to move. Mignonette, Snapdragons, Gardenias, Calendulas, Sweet Peas and Stevia are in light supply. Christmas greens are coming in, showing higher prices than last season. Holly is quoted at $7 per case.

Gives Life for His Country

The trade will regret to learn of the death of Raymond C. Thoirs, son of James M. Thoirs, florist of Camden, N. J. Further details will be found in "Our Florist Soldiers" column. His death makes two gold stars on the service flag of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, of which he was a member, the other gold star being for Henry F. Michell 2d. The club's roll of honor includes Jacob Deutcher, Lester T. Hanlon, Elmer B. Mahon, Edwin Wilhelm, Stanley W. Wilcox, Chas. D. Ball, Jr., and D. H. Skidell.

The Henry F. Michell Co. have something of a novelty at their store in the way of exceptionally full grown plants of Spiræa Gladstone. These were raised by E. T. Alburger of Pencoyd.

There was an exciting time at Mrs. Mary A. Alburger's the day before Thanksgiving Day, when two deer broke into the greenhouses and before they were captured did considerable damage. It is presumed that they escaped from the preserve in Fairmount Park, adjacent to the Alburger place. The night fireman, about 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, was startled by the crash of broken glass, and on investigation discovered the two panic-stricken animals in wild flight tearing through the greenhouses. With the aid of the police and park guards one of the deer was captured, the other escaped and was caught while swimming across the Schuylkill River, but was so cut by glass that it had to be shot. The other one also had to be killed. A rough estimate places the damages to the greenhouses and stock at $250. The question is who is to pay the damages; no one claims the deer.

W. H. & F. Evans, of Rowlandville, had an excellent cut of 'Mums for Thanksgiving Day, besides a heavy cut of Carnations. Among newer Carnations they are trying out Laddie this season.

Secretary John Young, in behalf of the S. A. F. National Publicity Campaign, appeals to all the trade in this city to cooperate in the great advertising campaign of "Say It with Flowers." Mail your subscription to John Young, secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York. There still is about $4000 lacking to make up the total of $50,000, the approximate cost yearly of carrying on the work.

W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., was among the week's visitors.

Club Meeting

There was a good attendance at the December meeting of the Florists' Club, which was held at the Hotel Adelphia, where the future meetings will be held. J. Otto Thilow was the essayist of the evening and read a highly interesting paper on "Our Business in War Times," which will be found elsewhere in these columns. The resignation of President Mark P. Mills was accepted and Vice-president Edmund A. Harvey was appointed president, Arthur A. Niessen and John P. Habermehl being nominated for vice-president. Resolutions were read upon the deaths of the late Wm. F. Dreer and Theodore Schober and sent to their families.

The January meeting will be given to national publicity when it is expected to have John Young, President Totty and probably Major O'Keefe and a number of other speakers. John Aschman, Jr., and J. Josephs were elected members, and three new members were proposed.

St. Louis, Mo.

From all reports Thanksgiving Day business was the biggest in years. Stock was very scarce in all lines, with the exception, perhaps, of yellow 'Mums. Among the wholesalers it was not a question of price; the problem was to get the flowers.

Carnations and Roses brought big prices: Carnations from 10c. to 12½c.; Roses from 8c. to 20c.; Russells from 10c. to 35c.; pompons from 50c. to $2 a bunch; Violets $1.50 to $2; Sweet Peas $2.50; Valley $8; 'Mums $15 to $60. Ferns brought $4 a 1000. Greens of all kinds, including Box. Leucothoe and Smilax were all in demand, at good prices.

The wholesalers report good shipping trade. The retailers in general report heavy business, a few had complaints about the high prices. On Saturday, Nov. 30, there was a great scarcity of stock and the retailers were hustling around to get flowers.

Influenza has increased and the ban is partially on again. Funeral work is sufficiently plentiful to use up all flowers. The weather is cool and bright; the outlook for Christmas will depend greatly on the weather. The plantsmen are busy getting their stock ready and advance orders are numerous. There will of course be a scarcity of green and Holly is not to be counted on.

Club Meeting

The Retail Ass'n met at the Palms Garden on Monday evening, Nov. 25. Secretary Charles Young was absent, being ill. It was resolved to get all florists interested in the association and to endeavor to get the work of the organization on a basis which would interest every florist, giving opportunities for discussing matters in relation to the interests of the retail trade in general.

A meeting of the officers of the Florists' Club, Retail Ass'n, and the Growers' Ass'n was held on Tuesday, Nov. 26, at the store room of the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., in the interests of publicity. It was proposed to give a banquet to which all florists would be invited and blanks laid at their places, requesting them to subscribe to the publicity movement.

Fred Foster, the Olive st. florist, had a splendid window display for Thanksgiving Day, including fine Cyclamen and other blooming plants, as well as choice blooms in cut flowers.

Otto Sander, proprietor of the Nursery Flower Shop, on Seventh st., was a busy man; artificial flower decorations as well as natural flowers occupied all hands. Grimm & Gorly seemed to have been cleaned out of almost everything salable.

Mullanphy florists showed grouping of 'Mums blooms in great variety, arranged in excellent taste.

Tom Carr, the Union Market florist, was well satisfied with Thanksgiving trade; he expects good business throughout the Winter season.

J. F. Windt found business satisfactory, but complained about the high prices which many of his customers termed a holdup.

The trade is sorry to learn of the illness of Charles Young of C. Young & Sons, who has been confined to his bed. His speedy recovery is hoped for. His brother Walter, a member of the Marine Corps, has returned to Paris Island, having been on a furlough to attend the funeral of his father, the late James Young.

Oscar Ruf of the Bergstermann Floral Co., is at the hospital with the flu.

Alexander Johnson, whose greenhouses are situated within a mile of the city limits, on the St. Charles Rock Road, will have a fine crop of Poinsettias for Christmas. He makes a specialty of bedding stock.

A. Jablonsky of Olivette, Mo., was in with his red Carnations Merry Christmas. His cut is considerably shorter than last year owing to dry weather.

W. Rowe of Kirkwood caught a 'possum, which had been eating up his Carnations and brought it down to Windler's wholesale house to the colored man for a present. Now he can expect a good crop of Carnations. W.

Denver, Col.

Good Thanksgiving Day Business

Thanksgiving Day business was excellent and every store could have done more had cut flowers not been so scarce. Prices were double those of last year but that did not keep the public from buying flowers.

In Nov., 1917, an article appeared in one of our local papers, stating that in spite of war conditions, high price of coal, etc., the Denver florists had practically not increased prices of flowers at all, compared with the prices asked in other cities. At that time Carnations sold for 75c. per doz.; Russell Roses for $3 per doz.; and American Beauty Roses $6. But the prices today are quite different owing to the unexpected demand, which has proved much greater than the supply. American Beauty Roses are $12 and $15 per doz.; Scott Keys and Russells $6 per doz.; and other Roses $2 to $3 per doz. Carnations bring $1.50 per doz; orchids $1.50 each, and 'Mms $6 to $12 per doz.

Denver is in the grasp of a second and more severe epidemic of Spanish influenza. People visiting theaters, movie shows or department stores and those riding in street cars are requested to wear masks. The flower stores also have been ordered to have their salespeople and delivery men wear masks.

Jottings

Fred C. Schumann was one of the last to supply the stores with pompons. His crop held out until Thanksgiving Day.

The Mauff Floral Co. is the first to put Stevia on the market; their stock is fine.

The Elitch Gardens had a few choice 'Mums for their trade. This was a surprise as we understood they were cut out of 'Mums several weeks ago.

The trade was sorry to hear that Robert Shilling's wife was taken to the hospital very sick.

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., is shipping excellent Boxwood here.

Ben Boldt entertained a few of his friends with a card party and smoker. All the trade is glad to know that Mr. Boldt and his family have fully recovered from the flu.

Frank Myers, of Fargo, N. D., has taken a position as grower for Fred Hall.

The Park Floral Co. have fine Cinerarias in bloom. These sold well for Thanksgiving Day.

Boldt-Lundy's House of Flowers had exceptional cut Snapdragons and Sweet Peas for the trade. This firm always manages to have enough greens on hand, even though this stock is scarce. Mr. Lundy has a standing order for two large shipments of greens, weekly, which helps out.

The Alpha Floral Co. received a funeral order for a number of pieces to be delivered 8 a.m. the day after Thanksgiving Day, so the force was back on the job again Thanksgiving night.

The America Flower Shop did a good business for the holiday.

Frank Fraiser was well pleased with Thanksgiving Day business; he said he could have sold more cut flowers but could not get them, as he had his regular growers make a cut on Thanksgiving morning to fill orders.

The Bargain Flower Shop sold up clean on Roses and other cut flowers. Mr. Benson reports also a good demand for blooming plants. C. F. E.

Cincinnati, O.

The Market

Roses are in rather weak supply; all that come into the market are cleaning up quickly. Carnations are not plentiful; they, too, sell well. A fair cut of Easter Lilies is proving a great help in taking care of the strong demand for flowers that the market is having at this time. Callas sell readily. A few late Chrysanthemums may be had. Stevia finds a good market. Other offerings are a few Snapdragons, single and double Violets, Sweet Peas, Lily of the Valley, orchids, Wallflowers, Baby Primroses and Forgetmenots. New Boxwood is meeting with a big demand.

Trade News

Florist boys of this city and vicinity whose names have heretofore been omitted from the list of those from the trade in this vicinity who are serving our country are Edgar Jackson, Walter Eck and Ray Eck.

Jens Christian Peterson, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, of this city, and a member of Company H, 35th Infantry, died at Camp McArthur, Tex., last week. His parents went to see him, but unfortunately arrived too late.

Miss Helen K. Walke, aged 19, beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto H. Walke, of this city, died last week.

E. G. Gillett has been cleaning up nicely with Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri from C. J. Ohmer's place at West Palm Beach, Fla.

Frank J. Farney, although no longer in the trade, renewed acquaintances while in this city on business during the past week.

Recent visitors were:: S. F. Purllant, of Poole & Purllant, Winchester, Ky.; G. A. Beckman and Mr. Burns, Middletown, Ohio; G. Reiniger and J. W. Rodgers, Dayton, Ohio; Joseph Marks, representing A. Notice to Growers Using Our Advertising Columns

It is vital, to ensure the good will of your customers, that you faithfully observe

THE FOLLOWING RULES

1. Stop your ad as soon as sold out.
2. Acknowlege orders same day as received.
3. Answer all questions by return mail.
4. Pack carefully, securely, yet lightly.
5. Ship same day as order is received or send postal notifying day you will ship.
6. Ship by least expensive route.

Following these directions will make you friends and keep your business enlarging.

☞ When convincing proof reaches us that an advertiser is not doing squarely by his customers, these columns will be absolutely closed against him for good.

NOTE:—Advertisers will do well to ask for a business reference before shipping when order from unknown party is not accompanied by cash.

Stock Short for Thanksgiving Day

In some ways Thanksgiving Day was one of the most unusual holidays, from a florist's standpoint, ever experienced here, because of the great shortage of stock. Advance orders were heavy and on some days there was not enough stock on hand or even in view to take care of the day's orders. Out of town retailers were clamoring for flowers, and the wholesalers were at their wits' end to suppply even part of the needs. The shortage reached such a point that, as the wholesalers received shipment from wherever they could get them, the goods were distributed as evenly as possible among the trade, each being taken care of to whatever extent the supply made possible. No dealer in Kansas City or anywhere nearby could say that he had all the flowers he wanted. Everything was cleaned up before the holiday was half over.

The cause of the unusual shortage of stock was the heavy demand for flowers all through October as a result of which most of the growers forced their 'Mum crops. The weather, too, brought the 'Mums to perfection a week or two sooner than usual and instead of Thanksgiving Day bringing a profusion of these blooms they were rare. One or two retailers, who are also growers, managed to have a small supply for their own orders, but more than one greenhouse owner had sadly to answer queries with: "We haven't a Chrysanthemum left."

The 'Mums available sold at from $6 to $15 per doz. retail.

Roses were higher in price than they had been in weeks and were none too plentiful; they retailed from $4 to $16, and those who wanted flowers seemed glad enough to pay the prices asked. Carnations were also lacking, only a couple of growers having any. The lack of sunshine in November set back this crop. One greenhouse forced a fine lot of Stevia and this helped out to a great degree; another had a good supply of Calendulas and this, too, was welcome.

The general opinion was that flowers were scarce, but prices good, and, considering the heavy season extending over the past two months, there was no just cause for complaint.

F. F. Farnham, of Carrollton, Mo., was a visitor.

Deer Breaks Window.

A three year old buck deer, frightened and at large, recently mistook the floral display in the show window of the Peterson Floral Company, Linwood Boulevard and Gillham Road, for a forest. The deer crashed through the plate glass, scattered jardinieres and vases in all directions, tore madly about the store and then made his escape the way he had entered. Continung his flight down Gillham Road the deer jumped a 10ft. fence and disappeared. Persons in the store at the time of the occurrence noticed that the animal was badly cut about the neck and shoulders by the glass. The deer is one of a herd of six which William Tanner maintains at his residence, 3500 Prospect ave. All of them are wild and unapproachable and this one was frightened after he had jumped the fence surrounding the grounds and taken flight down the street. In addition to destroying the show window the damage in the Peterson shop was estimated at $150. B. S. B.

Supporting Sweet Peas

Referring to the query of H. V. K. under the heading, "Question for Sweet Pea Specialist," in THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 17, page 538, as to the object of advantage of pinching Sweet Peas or allowing them to lie until the break appears, Corp. T. A. Weston of Northants England, writes: "It largely hinges upon whether early or late varieties are grown, and whether the seed has been sown where it is to flower or not. Early types do not need pinching as they have not the bushing out tendency; moreover it would delay flowering. Later sorts sown where to flower are best supported early, because the wind knocks them about. Actually allowing them to lie does encourage breaking, but the better policy is to pinch out the points as soon as the plants have four leaves, say when 3in. or 4in. tall. When working on the seed farm we always support the plants early, as the young plants get away quicker than if allowed to lie. Personally I should plump for pinching. It hastens the breaks and it is these breaks that make the best plants. For exhibition work we always sow early in boxes or pots and pinch at the third leaf. Pinching means a gain of weeks over the natural break. I may say that the general run of late Sweet Peas have no break tendency. Indeed, the leader, if it does go at all, is invariably thin and yields poor flowers. The bottom breaks are essential for good flowers so by stopping one gets them all at one time which is not the case if allowed to fall over will. Apart from this, plants allowed to lie are handy for prowling slugs, etc."

Rose Grower Changes Position

Eber Holmes, well known to EXCHANGE readers, for his articles on Rose culture and until recently with W. H. Elliott, Rose grower of Madbury, N. H., has taken charge of the greenhouses of Mrs. Aitken, retail florist of Springfield, Mass. Mr. Holmes will grow there Roses, Carnations and a general line of stock.

What Flowers Will Do

(The following was sent us by A. Brouton, floral designs, who has it printed on the back of his business cards.)

If you love flowers and enjoy giving them that wholehearted attention that their existence and health demand, they will in turn express their gratitude by imparting to you:

"Peace of mind,
"Spiritual contentment,
"Physical comfort,
"Soothing companionship,
"Love and sympathy,
"Restoration of spirit,
"Inspiration,
"Mental Relaxation,
"Food for the soul,
"Joy for the heart,
"Health-giving exercise,
"A pleasant disposition."

CITRONIA, PA. — The private range built by the King Construction Co. for Gen. H. C. Trexler, was partly destroyed by fire on Nov. 27. A telegram was sent to Mr. Nolan, the King Co.'s energetic representative, who promptly took the matter in hand. The houses are being reglazed, and by the time this goes to press will probably be O. K. again, so that no damage will result.

Attractive porch plantings of G. H. Walter, florist, of Butler, Pa.

Mr. Walter writes that he takes great pains with his porch every year and that it attracts more attention than any garden in town. This we can well believe; even as an advertisement, the porch is doubtless well worth while

Save Coal on Greenhouse Boilers

May we send you on a month's trial, prepaid, a Coggeshall Air Tube Cleaner to clean your boiler tubes? It creates its own air pressure with the use of low pressure steam.

Specially Adapted for Greenhouse Boilers

It cleans your boiler perfectly in four minutes, while running. It does away with the hand method. It saves its cost before the trial is ended. It can be returned, express collect, if you do not find it to your interest to purchase the cleaner. It lasts a lifetime. There are thousands in use. The price is $12.00.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

Repair that Leaky or Cracked Boiler Without Shutting Off the Heat

EVERY greenhouse man who has ever had a leaky or cracked boiler knows what a lot of time, trouble and money that means.

Yet all the fuss and worry attendant upon the old-fashioned method of repairing is now entirely unnecessary.

"X"—the wonderful Boiler Liquid—will do $200 worth of repair work for $10: and do it in about half an hour.

"X" is a Scientific Process of Repairing Without Dismantling or Welding

"X" is an absolute Liquid. It is simply poured into the boiler and instantly combines itself with the water. In sizzling out through the leak or crack the "X" is changed by the atmospheric oxygen into a metal-like solid, making a permanent repair. This repair is gradually hardened by the heat in the boiler, so that it stands a pressure of over one-quarter of a ton.

The surplus "X" that remains in the water automatically stops all new leaks due to expansion or other causes. In this way "X" Liquid makes the boiler (and in a hot water system, the entire system) absolutely LEAKPROOF.

Makes Boilers Rustproof and Scaleproof

The chemical composition of "X" Liquid is such that it absorbs all free oxygen in the water. This prevents the metal from Rusting. "X" also prevents the lime and other scale-forming elements in the water from depositing layers of Scale on the walls. "X" keeps the boiler RUSTPROOF and SCALEPROOF.

"X" does not evaporate or lose its strength with age. When new water is added it combines itself with this water and performs its functions again and again.

"X" contains no cement, powder or other injurious ingredients. It cannot clog the air valves; in fact it makes frequent repacking of valves unnecessary.

A Strong Guarantee

You take no chance in using "X" Liquid. It is unconditionally guaranteed to make good. If it fails you get a new can—or your money back.

But your greatest guarantee of the value of "X" is the fact that it is used, sold and recommended by 99 per cent of the manufacturers of boilers and radiators.

If your boiler cracks or leaks this Winter don't worry about your greenery. Just get a can of "X" and do the repair job yourself.

Get "X" Liquid from your steam fitter, or we will ship, charges prepaid, on receipt of price.

In Answer to Your Question Can We Furnish Without Delay Any Greenhouse or Materials You May Want?

YES!

Most assuredly yes!

Right now we have sufficient materials in our factories to build the normal number of greenhouses of former years.

Further than that, war working on Government work, has taught us many things; some of which we are applying directly to solving the building problems of you florists.

We don't for a minute attempt to prophesy, but if what has happened following other wars holds true, the cost of building materials will hold up for some time to come.

While you are waiting for lower prices, the other fellow has built and will be making some of the money you will be losing.

It's a losing game for us both, if you don't build.

When ready to talk it over, say when and where and we will be there.

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES

Z-I-N-C-O

WHAT IT IS

Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft.

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

Highly colored DRACAENAS, CROTONS, PANDANUS VEITCHII, etc. BIRD'S NEST FERNS, MYRTLE, RUBBERS and ADIANTUM CROWEANUM in all sizes

ADIANTUM Gloriosa Lemkesii
THE NEW GLORY FERN

We have ready for shipment an excellent stock of this new variety of Farleyense, which is as hardy and will stand up in homes and stores as well as Adiantum Croweanum. It is of good form and beautiful color, the new fronds being tinted with pink. We shall send this out this season in place of the old type of Farleyense, and we believe it can be used more extensively than that variety—especially on account of its keeping qualities.

Christmas Suggestions to the Retail Grower

Fritz Bahr tells florists to look for record holiday trade; to prepare to handle it; to arrange for ample supplies of cut flowers, plants, baskets, ribbon and accessories; to cater to all classes of trade; to have plenty of make up material; to carry artificial flowers; to make wreaths in advance and to advertise

THERE never has been a time any of us can remember when the outlook for the largest business ever has been more certain than this year. As the past Thanksgiving with most of us was the best ever experienced, so will the coming Christmas eclipse anything known before. Christmas this year will be celebrated in the United States as never before and flowers should and will be more used than in bygone years. It isn't cut flowers alone, we depend upon flowering and foliage plants. Holly, Boxwood and other greens and other side lines can be made profitable. Indications are that in many localities there will be a shortage of cut flowers as well as flowering plants. There won't be enough to go around. In order to overcome this condition we have to think of other things to use instead.

For the florist without glass an excuse may be found, but not for the man with greenhouses in connection with his store. Just what you grow yourself for the holidays matters little. The thing is to stock up and be prepared to meet an extraordinary demand. If you have greenhouses at your disposal being prepared does not only mean to get ready a certain amount of stock and be satisfied when it is all sold out and let the late comers go away disappointed. That would be poor management indeed. With an abundance of decorative plants in the country there is absolutely no excuse for not having a large enough stock on hand so that the very last customer may be satisfied and the establishment after that still look presentable.

You need flowering plants and cut flowers to be sure, but you can by proper preparations and a little pushing please your patrons with other stock in connection with them; in fact, a great many of us will be obliged to do it this year. Suppose you have left on your hands unsold after Christmas a nice lot of palms, ferns and other foliage plants. What chance will there be to this? It is likely that you will sell far more than you have any idea of at this writing. Just how much business you will do will depend on how you are prepared and how you push things. If you are unable to obtain flowering plants, such as you want, keep on thinking to find a way out. It can be done as long as other stock can be had.

High and Low Priced Stock

To ask $3 for a Cyclamen you used to be in the habit of selling for $1.50 or $2 takes some time to get used to, but we have to do it in order to come out all right. By this time most people take it for granted they must pay for flowers and plants in proportion as they do for other things. Those who do not will come to it. There isn't any chance for anything to come down as far as I can see. After all what difference does it really make as long as everybody is busy? For instance, a year ago around Christmas we paid seven cents for cut Trumpet Major Narcissi and had no trouble in selling them at $1.50 per dozen. In other years we paid $4 per 100 and retailed them at 75 cents per dozen. So with other things. The day when wages will begin to tumble and everything with it let's hope may never come, but for all of that you should not overlook preparing for those who want a few posies or sprays of fern and haven't much to spend for it. Men or women who have only 50 or 75 cents to purchase something for Christmas are deserving of as much attention as the large purchaser. So don't greet them with, "We haven't anything less than a dollar." If your margin of profit on a 50 or 75 cent plant is cut down to just a few pennies if you satisfy a customer by doing it there may be dollars in it for you some day. That's the only right way to look at it. There are instances where 100 per cent. profit can be made, but the most successful men in our business find that volume of business and small profits rather than large ones are more satisfactory. A few selected customers but enormous profits on what is sold doesn't spell expansion; but to get the greatest number of the people in your town into the habit of making use of flowers and plants does. Christmas shouldn't be a holdup day. So it is for us to have stock on hand to suit every pocketbook. If you carry only $3 Cyclamen and a customer comes prepared to pay $1.50 for one somebody will be disappointed and so with other things. You must carry low priced stock along with the expensive even at Christmas when everything is at its highest.

Useful Christmas Stock and Displaying It

There is no use of mentioning once more all the flowering plants we have for Christmas. So few sorts that everyone can remember them! Anything in flower can be disposed of. The trouble will be this year to obtain a sufficient number for what the average man wants. There is a shortage and particularly in expressive flowering stock, but very few people object to paying $1.50 to $2 for a plant. When this is the case a small basket with an assortment of plants is often preferred to a single Begonia or Cyclamen; in fact, almost any plant no matter how well grown can be shown to much better advantage when displayed in a basket with a handle on. It will make a $3 Cyclamen sell for $5, or a 75c. plant in an expensive basket with a few ferns and a ribbon on the handle of the basket will sell for $3.00.

Not nearly enough attention is being paid by the out of town florist in properly displaying his stock or showing it to the best advantage. Years ago only the retail store in the large city was expected to make use of pot covers, hampers, baskets and ribbons. But these are demanded today of every progressive man, no matter where located. There is no end to the assortment of beautiful yet inexpensive baskets. These come in all shapes and colors and chiffon ribbon to match. On each of these items a fair profit may be made. No one expects to have them thrown into the bargain. A good supply of baskets if not all used up for Christmas, will come handy later on. So with the ribbon; hardly ever do we get an order for a plant to be sent as a gift without the trimmings. Therefore, to carry a stock of all that goes with making plants more attractive is every bit as necessary as the plants themselves. The better they are displayed the more will be sold.

Simple Plant Arrangement

Hardly an establishment but carries small flowering Cyclamens, Begonias, Primulas and Peppers. These in 4in. or 5in. pots will retail around fifty cents. That in the smaller towns may be a little more or less for some; however the 4in. Chatelaine Begonia planted in a light pink basket costing 35 cents with a few Asparagus plumosus or Pteris and a pink chiffon robbon will easily bring $1.75 to $2. So with the Primulas or small Cyclamens. If short on ferns or in connection with them Boxwood may be used. When in moist soil this green will remain fresh almost as long as the average flowers. Nothing has been introduced since the Cincinnati Begonia of greater value to the smaller florist for Christmas than the Jerusalem Cherry, "Cleveland." You can't beat it for an inexpensive plant, while as a plant by itself specimens in 5in. or 6in. pots are showy and need little to make them more attractive. Small 3in. or 4in. plants full of berries are ideal for basket work even if the fruit is not an ideal Christmas red. While it is hard to obtain more than 35c. for a 3in. pot plant add 25 more cents to the plant in the way of a pot cover or simple basket and a few small table ferns and you have a $1 plant. Small Poinsettias in 4in. pots can with very little be displayed to good advantage in little red baskets. Asparagus plumosus, A. Sprengeri or ferns will give the flower or plant the proper setting; whereas a plant by itself with perhaps one-half of its leaves either yellow or fallen off wouldn't attract any attention. Even with small Primula obconica or Baby Primroses a pleasing basket may be arranged.

Artificial Flowers

Why not? I don't see any good reason why in times when flowers are scarce and hard to obtain the florist shouldn't make use of artificial ones when there is a chance to do so. It isn't a matter to do away with American Beauty Roses and substitute cloth ones for them, or use mixed paper colors for the real ones, but there are Lily of the Valley, Ruscus, Small Poinsettias, Poppies and other artificial flowers which can be used to the best advantage around Christmas. In many localities there is a shortage of the red or Winter berries this year which means that something will have to be used instead. If you conduct a retail trade and have a chance to dispose of baskets filled with artificial flowers and it doesn't interfere with your other stock, which I don't see how it can, why not do so—even push that line? You can't very well make use of artificial stock in an order calling for a box of fresh cut flowers, but for Christmas more and more such flowers are manufactured and sold and there is a demand for them. Why not help supply it as long as it pays? Why is it any worse making use of an artificial Lily of the Valley than making up a Magnolia wreath? To my mind there is room for artificial flowers which are a godsend to the man located far away from cities and who happens to run short. For Christmas in particular baskets made up of Boxwood, Ruscus and a few artificial flowers are in demand and even if you don't feel like pushing this class of work, be prepared and carry stock on hand so as to be able to fill an order if it should come your way.

Holly and Ferns

Money in Holley no matter what it may cost you! When Holly is sold at a couple of dollars per case and every grocery and fruit stand carries it and offers wreaths for 10c. to 15c. each people don't like to pay the florist 50c. or 75c. for a decent wreath. Not that they want the cheap kind, but they judge the value of Holly by what they see offered elsewhere. This year good Holly is expensive, but more wreaths than ever will be used. People who never before had wreaths in their homes will have them this ear. So you should get ready for this business. Make up good wreaths and charge accordingly. The way to do this is to find out exactly what you can get out of a case in the way of wreaths and selected branches and what it costs to make the wreaths up. Don't guess at it. It doesn't take much longer to make a one dollar wreath than to make a 50 cent one. Why not cater to the dollar kind especially now when help is scarce. There is always good and bad Holly in almost every case as well as long and short stuff. Use the short stuff for your wreaths and the long for loose Holly. If you make them up into 50c. or $1 bunches before hand you save valuable time in the last minute when the rush is on. So also with other greens and Mistletoe. A lot can be done a few days previous to Christmas to help run things smoothly when the deliveries start.

Advertising

You can't do business without advertising even if you are located in a small town and happen to be the only florist there. You must keep on pushing. You can't afford to wait for your customers to make up their minds to come to see you. A reminder neatly put up a week or so before Christmas and sent by mail often does more good than a month ahead. In too many instances your customers are so busy with other things around the first part of December that they overlook their Christmas orders for flowers and greens, but they are ready a week or so before the 25th so it isn't too late now to get after them. Have a mailing list and keep on adding new names. Cut out dead ones. If you want to stay in the ring you must keep doing more business. You must keep on growing. There has never been a better chance than right now to do it, never mind what may come in time or what you think will come. Make your hay now and put a little aside for later. The market is here and Christmas will be a record breaker, so let's go after it.

Pruning Ornamental and Fruit Plants*

Principles involved. Good practices emphasized. Street and lawn tree training. How to make wounds that will heal. Wound dressing to favor healing. Outdoor Roses and other shrubs. Tree and bush fruits. Grapes.

When pruning is improperly done it may be devitalizing and injurious to plant growth as well as detrimental to beauty; but when correctly done, both as to season and method, it is a legitimate procedure, advantageous, and in fact indispensable, to successful growth.

The essentials of pruning, says the Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin for November, consist in the removal of dead and excessive or undesirable living branches and roots for the benefit of the parts that remain. In intelligent hands the process is of vital importance, but as often practiced by tree "butchers" and other "experts" who aimlessly lop and shear trees and shrubs, the only result is to endanger their growth and to despoil them of their natural beauty. The principles of pruning will be considered under the following heads: 1, street and lawn trees; 2, ornamental shrubs and vines, and 3, fruit trees, bush fruits and grapes.

Pruning Street and Lawn Trees

The need for pruning trees first arises at the time of transplanting. Since even with the greatest precautions it is impossible to dig up all the roots, it is necessary to cut back the top to maintain a balance. The amount of cutting depends upon the nature of the roots, the less fibrous requiring greater reduction of the top. Usually the removal of four-fifths of the previous years growth is sufficient, a smooth cut being made just above an outward pointing bud.

The amount of top pruning also depends upon the ease with which the various species are transplanted. A more severe pruning is required for trees difficult to move, such as Magnolias, Sweet Gums, and Tulip trees, then for Maples, Sycamores, Elms, Poplars, Ashes, etc. In general, however, it is better to prune too much rather than not enough, for the more severe the pruning the more compact is the top with an abundance of shoots close to the stem. The roots require no pruning except where bruised or broken.

In this first operation there is no difference in treatment between the lawn and the street tree. In later treatment the lawn tree is allowed to grow at will and to assume its natural form, requiring but little attention except the careful removal of dying limbs. On the other hand, the street tree must be straight and symmetrical, with branches beginning at a height sufficient to permit free passage underneath. These essentials are secured through the medium of pruning. The lower branches should be allowed to remain until the trunk thickens enough to support the top, their removal then being accomplished in yearly intervals until a height of 10ft. to 12ft. is reached.

How to Trim the Top

The training of the crown consists of the suppression of some branches and the encouragement of others to produce a compact and symmetrical outline. A single leader is desirable in order to eliminate the danger of the formation of crotches with their tendency to split. Strength may be thrown into the central stem either by the removal or shortening of co-leaders. In cases where tops bend over and droop the leader may be tied with raffia to poles and thus forced to remain upright until strong enough to need no support.

Young Trees Pruned

One at the left pruned properly, the head started low and branches well distributed. One at right ahead too high, branches form a crotch and tree is not balanced.

The loss of a leader may be replaced by training a lateral twig to take its place. All dead and imperfect limbs should be removed. If the top becomes so dense as to exclude the sun from the sidewalk or nearby buildings it should be thinned by removing the third or fourth division of branching, but not the main laterals.

In eliminating the lower branches the main laterals need not be removed to any great height, the subdivision being cut so as to produce a graceful upward sweep.

Always Preserve Natural Form

It is essential to bear in mind that the natural shape and habit of the tree should be preserved and all artificial shaping avoided. The retaining of the natural form involves considerable skill which is often obviously lacking in the treatment of many street trees. Trees should not, however, be permitted to grow beyond certain bounds, their spread being restricted when too much shade is cast upon the roadway or adjoining houses. Shortening of branches is necessary to produce compactness of form.

Since the root system usually has (at least) the same diameter as the top, and as the poor street soil generally restricts the growth of the roots, the spread of the top should be limited in proportion. The necessity for cutting back is manifested by the branches becoming ragged toward the top and the foliage thin. Severe cutting back is sometimes necessitated when regular pruning has been neglected, the degree of severity depending upon the power of the tree to send out adventitious buds. Sycamores, soft Maples, Elms, and Poplars lend themselves well to heading back.

Begin Cutting High Up in the Tops

The operation of pruning should begin at the top, as by doing so it is easier to shape the tree, besides saving time in clearing off the cut limbs. All cuts should be made close to the base of the limb (removed) and parallel to the axis of the trunk (or limb from which the branch is removed). Stubs should never be left, as decay would soon ensue, penetrating to the heart and eventually destroying the tree.

To avoid splitting and tearing the bark, the limb should be sawed half way through on the under side about 10in. from the base, and the final cut made (so as to leave no projection) at the shoulder. The weight of the limb will cause it to split off at the upper cut without injuring the bark. If the limb is so large as not to split horizontally to the upper cut, the cut at the shoulder is made half way through and then another cut opposite will cause the limb to drop off. The stub left is then easily sawed of without damage.

No matter how small the scar, a protective and disinfectant dressing should be applied immediately to prevent decay until the callus grows over the wound. Paint made of linseed oil and white lead makes a good dressing provided it is applied again after checking of the wood has taken place. Coal tar and various asphalt preparations also make desirable dressings. (G. H. Howe, in Bulletin 396 of the N. Y. State Exp. Sta. reports on experiments with many dressings that "in all cases undressed wounds healed more rapidly than those whose surfaces were protected." M. G. Kains, author of Principles and Practice of Pruning, says: "Fruit growers rarely protect wounds smaller than 2in. in diameter because healing is so rapid that no damage results").

Heavy pruning should be done in the Fall or Winter while the trees are in a dormant condition (when increased growth is desired). Shaping should be done during August or September when it is easier to discover the weak, imperfect or dead branches. Early Spring or Summer pruning is not advisable unless flowers or fruits are desired the following season, as the rapid flow of sap may lead to bleeding, stripping of the bark, and a check to the root system by removal of elaborated food material.

The tools required for pruning are: pruning saws of various sizes, but always single edged, as a double-edged saw is harmful to the tree; a ladder, and possibly an ax, a pole pruner and pruning shears.

Ornamental Shrubs, Roses and Vines

The pruning of shrubs at the time of transplanting is similar in principle to that suggested for trees. A balance should be maintained between the root system and the top by cutting back the individual branches at least one-fourth, the severity depending upon the root system and the species planted. The general purpose of pruning shrubs is to aid the plant to assume its natural form and characteristic beauty. Therefore only diseased, interfering, or misshapen growths should be removed.

Occasionally the dictates of formal gardening require shaping into artificial forms, but ordinarily such shearing results in mutilation and disfigurement.

Trimming of shrubs is justified when increased vigor is sought, this being accomplished by gradual thinning of the old wood and, in exceptional cases, cutting back to the ground plants that lose their Winter attractiveness as the stems grow old (Cornus, Kerria, etc.)

Before any pruning of flowering ornamentals is attempted it is essential to recognize the blossoming habits. The Spring and early Summer-blooming kinds produce flowers upon wood which is formed during the previous year, thus necessitating pruning shortly after the flowering season so that the new growths may develop buds for the next season. The late Summer and Fall blooming plants produce flowers on the same season's wood and require pruning in the Fall (or at any time before growth starts in Spring). In either case, the work should be done after flowering.

The following table indicates the more common shrubs and the groups to which they belong. Those marked with an asterisk are improved by annual pruning.

Hedge Pruning Practises

The matter of pruning hedges is of vital importance. The prime requisite of a hedge is a thick bottom, which is secured in most cases by a severe cutting back, sometimes to within 6in. of the ground, at the time of planting. Most hedges require trimming several times a year, the last cutting being given early enough in the Fall to allow thorough ripening of the wood and avoidance of Winter killing. The best form for a hedge is rounded at top, permitting a more natural development. The Privets, however, readily adapt themselves to the flat-top pruning.

Pruning of Roses

Garden Roses represent many species, differing in habit and requiring different treatments. Before pruning the hybrid teas one must decide what kind of a crop is wanted. If the largest and finest flowers are sought the plants must be thinned and pruned severely, but where abundance is of prime importance for effect more shoots are left. Pruning of hybrid teas consists of two operations—thinning of dead or weak canes and cutting back the remainder, being performed in the order given. In general the weak-growing varieties may be pruned more heavily than those of strong growth. By hard, moderately hard, medium and sparing pruning the following is meant:

Hard—Thin out all but three to five canes and cut these to three eyes each; moderately hard, thin out all but three to five canes and cut back five to ten eyes; medium, thin out to five to seven shoots and cut back one-half; sparing, thin out to five to seven shoots and trim the tips.

Hybrid perpetuals do not require severe pruning, being usually thinned out but a trifle and the canes cut to two to three feet from the ground unless Winter

Christmas Notes

The Storing of Holly and Greens

Holly and other greens we make use of for Christmas have gone up in price the same as everything else, which means the end of the 10c. or 15c. wreath offered by the corner grocer and will give the florist a chance to dispose of a superior class of stock and make as large, if not larger, margin of profit, but the elimination of waste should go with it. When Holly is cheap a lot of it is wasted, but when you pay $7 or $8 a case for it one is very apt not only to make use of the small pieces but pay more attention to the way it is taken care of. There is no better place for the storing of Holly, Boxwood, Pine, Leucothœ sprays or Ground Pine than a deep coldframe. Spread some heavy paper over the bottom, put the greens on it, give them a sprinkling of water, cover with burlap or paper, place the sashes on the frame, darken and properly protect to keep the frost out. In such a frame you can keep any of the above mentioned stock for many weeks in perfect condition. If you haven't already done this, do it now, and provide proper facilities for the storing of the Christmas greens; nothing dries up quicker in a warm place than Holly and makes it worthless. To make money out of a case of it you must have a proper place to store it. Use every bit to the best advantage; get away from specializing in cheap wreaths; turn out a superior article and charge accordingly. When a patron is willing to pay a good price it is your place to see to it that none but first class stock goes out.

Important Notes on Bulb Stock

Treatment of Late Arrivals

Bulbs in a dry soil can't make the headway which those can that have been kept watered properly; often we consider a nice rain as being sufficient for the bulb stock stored away outdoors, but if we take the trouble to ascertain the condition of the soil in the flats we frequently find that it is not even moist. Before Winter sets in and freezes things up solid, it will pay anyone with money invested in bulbs thoroughly to examine the soil they are in; not only that but stock which has been planted late should be especially well protected. It doesn't hurt a well rooted flat of Hyacinths or Tulips to freeze solid; if properly handled afterward the plants will come out all right, but if you freeze a lot of Hyacinths only partly rooted or not rooted at all, they will either be ruined altogether or they will not pay for the handling afterward. The later you plant bulbs such as we class under Dutch stock the more careful you must be in handling them. A place too warm will start them into growth before they are rooted which makes them unfit for forcing afterward, while freezing before they are well rooted will be every bit as bad. If the bulbs are to be stored outdoors it will be cold enough for them in most localities in the East and all through the great Middle West if they are kept so that frost does not actually reach the flats or pans they are in; therefore, see to it that they are properly covered. Tulips can stand more than Hyacinths or the large flowering Narcissi, but for best results don't expose any of them to freezing if the bulbs had a poor chance to form a root mat, nor permit them to struggle along in a dry soil; it all means money out of your pocket.

Pansies

Frames the Best Protection

There are localities where well established Pansies will overwinter outdoors without the least protection. When, however, the thermometer is apt to go much below zero and stay there, maybe without the least protection of snow, it is best to properly protect Pansies and not run any chances. When the Pansies are in frames, glass sashes over them make the best protection, keeping out excess moisture and preventing melted snow from standing several inches deep on top of the frozen soil with no outlet. As soon as the ground in the frames is frozen solid place the sashes on and protect the glass with boards for the remainder of the Winter; then your Pansies will come out finely next March

Paperwhite Narcissi

The only reason we consider $25 per 1000 for Paperwhites an awfully high price is because they were so cheap before the war that no one wanted them and found fault with the odor. It will pay any retail grower still to plant more bulbs right now; at least a few thousand to come along during February and March. Bulb stock will not be overplentiful, and it doesn't look as if at any time during the present Winter season even Paperwhites would fail to bring a good price. I predict that if you don't plant more Paperwhites than you really need you will make more money on them than ever before and so with other bulbs; don't stop planting because the price appears high. It is high, but won't come down; don't wait for that, rather get ready to ask a price in proportion to the flowers when offering them to your patrons. They won't expect Paperwhites for 50c. per doz.; they will pay $1, even more, and at such prices the blooms are bound to pay you better, in spite of the so called high priced bulbs.

Mignonette

You can sow Mignonette for the next two months coming and grow it into paying crops. Any florist retailing the stock he grows will find Mignonette a paying crop, even if he doesn't turn out extra large flowered spikes. If you are after quantity rather than quality sow the seed out on the bench in rows, say about 1ft. apart and thin the plants out to 6in. or so. From now on you will be bothered but little with caterpillars, and green fly you can easily keep away by fumigation. The plants should be pinched back when 5in. or 6in. high and the supports put up long before the plants are in need of them. A house of 48 deg. is plenty warm enough.

Calendulas

Sow Them Now

A sowing made now of Calendulas and the seedlings planted out on a solid bed in a cool house will start to flower in early March and be at their best for Easter week, remaining good for May; that is if you give the plants plenty of space, take care of them and not let them go to seed. For Midwinter flowering bench culture is all right but if you want those extra long flower stems and big flower heads solid beds are the thing. Plenty of well decomposed manure will also help them along. Don't grow more than you can make use of yourself; it doesn't pay. People get tired also of the ordinary, short stemmed, small flowering stock, but fancy stock will always find a purchaser and will bring a good price. However, you can't grow such in a poor, shallow soil or a warm house.

Propagating

Good Time to Root Cuttings

Almost every retail grower at this time of the year has plenty of material on hand to fill up the propagating bench. Whether you wish to increase your stock of Carnations, Geraniums, Marguerites or anything else in the bedding line the present is a good time to root cuttings. The fact that you have bottom heat, makes the work easy and cuttings put into the sand now will, by early part or the middle of January be ready for potting up. Young bedding stock at this time of the year does not appeal to us; Christmas plants and flowers look far better, but as soon as New Year's is over we begin to look around and notice things again, and to my mind it is as important now, before you get busy, not only to empty the cutting or propagating bench but to refill it at once. Let the stock plants, relieved of a lot of cuttings, get ready for another crop in a few weeks from now; let the cuttings in the sand root while you are busy with the Holly; you will appreciate the value of this when the rush is over, after the holidays.

Outdoor Hints

Protecting the Perennials

Around the middle of December almost anything in the way of biennials or perennials can be covered up for the Winter; light freezing doesn't hurt a Foxglove or a Canterbury Bell nearly as much as being covered up for the Winter when still in a growing condition A great deal of harm is done by covering up things too early. Usually it isn't duing the early part of the Winter that the stock suffers for the want of protection; January, February and March are the months when the damage is done. Dry leaves or straw make the best covering for most plants. Avoid heavy, wet manure or similar material. A layer of dry leaves followed by enough manure to hold the leaves in place is the thing, and for small transplanted seedlings a little brush placed between the plants or laid over the top of them before the leaves go on is still better. The object is to avoid anything heavy or solid on the top of the plants; the lighter the covering the better; it will prevent decay during a mild Winter. With stock like Peonies, Phlox or Columbines one doesn't have to be so careful; they have no growth above the soil to be injured. Any of these are benefited by a heavy layer of well decomposed manure, to be worked in among the rows next Spring. Others, like Iris, Coreopsis, Shasta Daisies, Pinks, Campanulas or Primulas, however, can't stand such treatment. Considerable loss can be prevented by being careful, even in sections where there is no danger of severe cold. Light protection is of benefit to most plants but there is every bit as much danger of too much covering as not enough and the work shouldn't be left to a careless man.

The Cutting Bench

Pot Up the Rooted Stock

In just a few days you will be awfully busy with your Christmas rush and with a lack of help there will hardly be a chance to do anything else in the houses besides routine work. Therefore, it might be well to pay a little extra attention to the cutting bench now and get things in shape. Even with the best of attention we are apt to let a lot of cuttings nicely rooted remain in the sand longer than they ought to. That is bad all around and if you should happen to have any rooted now if not removed at once they are very likely to remain until after New Year's, whereas if potted up they would have a chance between now and the first week in January to develop into nice young plants. Get that work out of the way by all means.

Ornamentals Special Winter Care

Due to the warm Fall, Lilacs have been blooming in Cleveland, Spiræa and Weigela in Columbus and other points in Central Ohio. A few Blackberries have been bearing. Owing to this development of the tenderer parts of the plants fear is expressed that they will not be hardy enough to stand the Winter.

In the case of shrubs like Lilac, Weigela and Spiræa nothing can be done. The blooms next season may be cut short, says Professor A. C. Hottes, floriculturist of the College of Agriculture, and author of Commercial Plant Propagation.

As Blackberries are ordinarily pruned in the Spring, no harm has been done to them. A mound of earth about the roots of Roses will help protect them from Winter injury. Roses may be saved from further injury by wrapping paper or burlap over the tenderer part to keep out the sunlight rather than to protect them from cold. The sunlight, which helps develop the tenderer parts, makes them easily susceptible to injury. It may be desirable to tie the bush to a stake. The tops of all the climbers and finer sorts of Roses may be tied together and buried. Any unusually long growths may be cut back one-third.

Incidentally, the portion cut off may be utilized to produce slips if they are cut into 6in. to 8in. lengths. Take as the base of the slip one of the eyes or buds through which the cut was made. Be sure to cut the top just above another eye. The slips may be completely buried in sand in the cellar or on a well drained knoll, and be planted in the Spring. Slips of Grapes may be made in a similar way. Strawberries should be protected immediately by a covering of 4in. of straw, being careful not to smother the plants. The ground for bulbs should always be frozen before a mulch is applied.

Growing Gladioli in Florida

Can outdoor Gladioli be grown in Florida from November to April, and do the florists of the Southern cities buy outdoor grown blooms during those months, as the Northern florists do? Is there anything about the climate or the transportation or other conditions which would prevent the success of such an operation? Is there a location in a warm Winter climate better adapted to it?—W. G. N., Pa.

—For several years Gladioli have been grown in the Winter, presumably outdoors, in some parts of Florida, and the flowers shipped to wholesale florists in New York, Philadelphia and other Northern cities. No doubt, retail florists in the South use Gladiolus blooms in the Winter, if they are so situated that they can obtain them. J. H. S.

New Substitute for Gasolene

It is reported from Washington that the War Department has produced an effective substitute for gasolene. This new product, which is called "Liberty Fuel," has for its basis kerosene and is the result of more than five months' experiments by Major O. B. Zimmerman and Capt. E. C. Weisberger of the research and development divisions of the general engineering department.

Exhaustive tests are said to have shown that "Liberty Fuel" may be satisfactorily used in motor vehicles, stationary engines and airplanes. It has the advantage of being without taste or odor, is non-corrosive, leaves less carbon residue than gasolene—requiring less oxygen for its combustion than the latter—and develops greater horse power, since its explosive power is 30 per cent. greater.

One of the outstanding merits of this new gasolene substitute is said to be that its cost is considerably less than that of gasolene. The ingredients are readily obtainable and the process of manufacture is simple. It is stated that production in quantity has been arranged for. The development of this new fuel will be watched with keenest interest by all users of gas. To date there have been many discoveries of substitutes reported, none of which have stood the test; the one under mention, let us hope will prove a real commercial article.

Government to Buy Seed

Saturday, Dec. 21, has been set as the date for the opening of bids by the general supply committee for furnishing, as may be ordered from time to time during the period beginning Jan. 1, 1919, and ending June 30, 1919, seed, as follows for use by the executive departments and other establishments of the Government in Washington and for use by such field services as are included in the specifications. Delivery is to be made direct from contractor's shipping point on Government bill of lading.

Proposals must be accompanied by a certified check, or certificate of deposit, drawn payable to the order of the Secretary of the Treasury, or by cash, in an amount equal to two per cent. of the total estimated amount of the bid, based on the value of the purchases for the fiscal year 1918; but no check shall be less in amount than $10. Where no estimated quantity is stated, $10 will cover.

The Government finds it impossible to determine the quantities of the different kinds of seeds which will be used during the period named, and each bidder whose proposal is accepted will be required to deliver all seeds of the kind which he agrees to furnish which may be ordered of him.

Best quality seed, for planting (only net weight of seed delivered will be paid for), purity and germination to be noted after each item. (In the following list "P" stands for purity, "G" for germination; the number of pounds shows the quantity purchased last year.)

Alfalfa, P 98, G 90; 100 lbs.
Alsike Clover, P 98, G 90; 60 lbs.
Red Clover, P 98, G 90; 160 lbs.
White Clover, P 98, G 90; 1171 lbs.
Kentucky Blue Grass, P 80, G 70; 3905 lbs.
Red Top, P and G 85; 6694 lbs.
Rye, P 99, G 95; 12 lbs.
Timothy, P 98, G 90; last year's purchases not stated.
Orchard Grass, P 90, G 90; 270 lbs.
Perennial Rye Grass, P 95, G 90; none purchased last year.
Italian Rye Grass, P 95, G 90; 1087 lbs.

The following is required for feed purposes and samples are required. (Figures indicate last year's purchases.)

Canary seed, 450 lbs.
Hemp seed, 650 lbs.
Maw, none purchased last year.
Millet, 325 lbs.
Rape seed, 50 lbs.
Thistle, none purchased last year.

Bidders are requested to state discount that will be allowed on purchases of these seeds amounting to 100 lbs. and on purchases of Sunflower seeds in 500 lb. lots; 4600 lbs. of the latter were purchased last year.

In each case bidders are required to state prices on lots of 50 lbs. or less, in lots of from 50 lbs. to 99 lbs., and in lots of 100 lbs. and over. E. A. D.

New York Seed Trade

An unusually attractive and interesting exhibit is noted this week in the store windows of the Stumpp & Walter Co., 30-32 Barclay st. This consists of a large variety of flower receptacles, such as vases, bowls and baskets in china, and in bronze, some of those in the latter material especially being unusually artistic in design.

Christmas goods are now seen in all the seed stores which give any attention to this line of trade. Prices in these goods are higher than usual, for several obvious reasons.

Seed imports during the month of October, 1918, at the district of New York were as follows: Clover; total (Canada 130,592 lbs.) $35,588; grass seeds, England, $1165, 14,852 lbs.; Scotland, $3932; 44,800 lbs.; Ireland, $5276, 67,200 lbs; British South Africa, $7783, 184,590 lbs. Total $18,136. Sugar beet seed: France, $325, 880 lbs.; Russia in Asia, $4121, 64,900 lbs.; total $4446. All other seeds France, $7642; Netherlands, $2989; England, $14,508; British India, $3577; Hong Kong, $195; Japan $9; Morocco, $11,825. Total, $40,795. This shows that even while engaged in a great war Great Britain and her colonies were the largest exporters of seeds.

Roman J. Irwin, 108 West 28th st., reports that since the armistice was signed and the coal restrictions removed the demand on him for commercial sized plants and other stock for private and commercial greenhouses has been unexpectedly heavy.

W. R. Smith has left the employ of Weeber & Don, 114 Chambers st., and is now unattached.

Handlers of Dutch bulbs, selling to florists and seed houses, claim to be receiving from 75 to 80 per cent. more for their stocks than they did for the season of 1917-1918. This indicates a higher price in the Spring of 1919 than ever before for bulbous cut flowers.

Chicago Seed Trade

Fred Lempke, of the W. W. Barnard Co., has been confined to his room in the Galt Hotel, on W. Madison st., for the past week with a severe cold. C. D. Coventry of the same company has also been unable to attend his duties at the office for a few days, on account of illness.

Vaughan's Seed Store had a comprehensive exhibit of its poultry department at the Poultry and Pet Stock Exhibition held in the Coliseum last week.

Winterson's Seed Store expects to clean up on all bulb stock this week and will then stock up with decorative evergreens for Christmas trade. Mr. Degnan says that the scarcity of plants has induced the live wires in the florist trade to plant, for next Spring's sales, all the bulbs they could secure. The increased cost of bulbs will be overcome by an active demand, which will cause growers to realize better prices than ever before.

Vaughan's Seed Store is making a specialty of flower seeds for florists and seedsmen, and carries a large stock of all the popular varieties. The wholesale seed department has taken on quite a hum of activity during the past few weeks and one of the best season's business in seed selling is anticipated.

Situation in Christmas Greens

M. K. Smith, of the W. W. Barnard Co., sizes up the situation in Christmas decorative evergreens as follows: Red Winterberries are so scarce as to be practically out of the market this season. Boxwood is also extremely scarce and is selling at 25c. a pound in case lots and will go to 30c. before the holidays are over. The present indications are that Christmas trees will be in only limited supply. The stock this season will be confined to Northern Michigan and Wisconsin, and reports from there indicate that very few are being cut. The embargo against the transportation of evergreens from New England will cut off the supply from that source, and with delayed freights the situation is not promising. Holly is also scarce and price unusually high; some cases were sold last week as high as $8 to $10 per case. Mistletoe will be in limited supply; the lack of help in the South for gathering, the uncertainty of freight shipments, and the increased rate on express charges will make it not only scarce but more expensive than in former seasons. Bouquet Green will be more plentiful than the other items of Christmas greens, although no great supply is anticipated. Pickers in the North woods that have been holding it for higher prices than usual are now beginning to put it on the market at prevailing prices. The present market price is $10 per case of 100 lbs., but there are instances where small lots have brought higher figures.

California Seed Notes

President Hoglund, of the United Growers' Association, Turlock, Cal., reports having purchased 1800 lbs. of Cantaloupe seed for the members of the association, on his recent trip to Rockyford, Col.

C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, state that their seed acreage in Yolo County for the coming season is about double that of last year; last year's acreage being about 600 acres. J. R. W.

A Proposed "Business Tax"

Congress is about to enact in the pending revenue bill a "business tax" provision, as an aid to raising funds to meet the heavy debts contracted in prosecuting the war. The Senate proposes that every domestic corporation shall pay annually, beginning with July 1, 1918, a special tax, equivalent to $1 for each $1000 of the excess over $5000, of the amount of its net assets shown by its books at the close of the preceding annual period used by the corporation in making its income tax return. If the corporation made no such return the tax is to be $1 for each $1000 of the excess over $5000 of the amount of its net assets shown by its books on the preceding June 30.

Every foreign corporation is to pay a special excise tax equivalent to $1 for each $1000 of the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States during the preceding year ending June 30.

These taxes will not be imposed upon any corporation which was not engaged in business in the United States during the preceding year ending June 30. Any corporation engaging in business without paying this special tax will, besides being liable for the payment thereof, be subject to a penalty of not more than $1000 or to imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. E. A. D.

May Import Rattans and Reeds

The ban has been lifted from the importation of Rattans and Reeds, according to an announcement just made by the War Trade Board, which states that its ruling of July 26 has been revoked and hereafter applications for licenses to import these materials will be considered by the board for shipment from any country. A Few Seeds Given Away

During the fiscal year 1918 there were distributed on congressional and miscellaneous requests 11,165,709 packages of vegetable seed and 2,188,818 packages of flower seed, or a total of 13,354,527 packages, each containing five packets of different kinds of seed. There were also distributed 12,473 packages of lawn Grass seed and 11,110 packages of improved Narcissus and Tulip bulbs. The seeds and bulbs were purchased on competitive bids, as heretofore. Each lot of seed purchased was thoroughly tested for purity and viability before acceptance by the department, and tests of each lot were conducted on the department's trial grounds to determine trueness to type.—From Report of the Acting Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

New War Savings Stamps

It is announced that the Secretary of the Treasury has determined upon the issuance of a new series of War Savings Certificates and Stamps to be placed on sale early in 1919 and to be known as the Series of 1919. The new series will have a maturity date of Jan. 1, 1924, and in practically all respects will be issued on the same terms and in the same manner as the present series of 1918.

A new $5 War Savings Stamp, blue in color, bearing the head of Benjamin Franklin, the apostle of saving, and a former postmaster general, is in preparation. The new stamps will be placed on sale early in 1919.

The same Thrift Stamps and Thrift Cards now in use will be continued in 1919 and will be exchangeable into new series of 1919 War Savings Stamps, payable Jan. 1, 1924, in the same way as the exchange has been made during this year into the series of 1918 War Savings Stamps.

Bureau of Plant Industry

The report of the Acting Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, just come to hand, is interesting in that it indicates the varied activities of the bureau, which touch horticulture and floriculture at many points. For instance, an effort is being made to increase the seed supply of the variety of Sweet Corn resistant to the Corn earworm. Good progress has been made in the improvement of fruits through bud selection, especially in citrus fruits. Disease resistant strains of Asparagus have been produced.

Much work was done in examination of samples of seed, including Clover and other Grass seed, the enforcement of the seed importation act keeping out of the country large quantities of forage plant seed of poor quality. Studies have been made of improved Wheat varieties and seed of such has been collected. Seed Potato improvement work has also been carried on and efforts are being made to re-establish the Rhode Island Bent Grass seed industry in New England. A seed stocks committee has been organized and has cooperated with the Food Administration. The cultivation of the Castor Bean, the oil from which is used for airplanes, has been encouraged.

Useful investigations have been carried on in plant pathology, covering Barberry plants and black stem smut of Wheat, recently discovered diseases of Corn, and rots and spoilage of small fruits. Various Apple diseases, Chestnut blight and citrus canker have also been studied. Progress has been made in controlling Fusarium wilt and Septoria leaf spot of Tomatoes, a new resin fish oil soap Bordeaux misture having shown excellent results when used for this leaf spot disease.

The bureau has distributed 218,918 packages of new and rare field seeds, as well as about 11,000,000 packets of ordinary vegetable seeds and about 2,000,000 of flower seed.

Fertilizer Studies

The enormous fertilizer consumption in the United States, amounting to upward of $100,000,000 prior to the war, has in the course of the last few years undergone a decided change, not so much in volume of fertilizer consumed as in the composition of the fertilizing materials. This has forced a careful study of ratios of essential plant food constituents on prominent and essential crops. Accordingly, small field plats for the study of fertilizers have been established at many points on different soils and under different agricultural conditions. The test fields now in operation are at Presque Isle, Me.; State College, Pa.; Norfolk, Va.; Florence, S. C.; Pecan City, Ga.; Putney, Ga.; Thomasville, Ga.; Monticello, Fla.; Orlando, Fla.; Ashland, Wis.; and Scottsburg, Ind.

Special field tests have been conducted to determine the smallest quantities of potash as a fertilizer which will meet the requirements of the Tobacco plant. Marked responses have been obtained with only 24 lbs. and even as low as 12 lbs. of potash per acre. It has been possible also to establish an appreciable difference between the sulphate and the muriate of potash in their action on the plant.—From 1918 Report of Bureau of Plant Industry, Dept. of Agri.

Houston, Texas

If all the florists in other sections of the country are as live to their problems and interests as the florists of Houston, the industry is bound to make great strides in the next six months. The Houston Horticultural Society, an organization composed of florists, nurserymen, landscape gardeners, park employees, and others interested in these lines, is doing more today to further the various interests in Houston than has ever been done before.

At a meeting held Monday night in the offices of The Brazos Greenhouses, questions of the hour were discussed, and two interesting papers read, one being furnished by A. J. Koehle, manager of the R. C. Kerr Co., Inc., on floricultural and horticultural prospects for Houston, the other being furnished by R. C. Kerr on handling the holiday business.

There is no question but Houston is bound to be the Crape Myrtle City, for 1000 plants have been received, 10,000 more are on the way, and with the advanced orders now booked there will be need of thousands more.

One important question that has developed out of these meetings has been the establishment of a large arboretum for Houston. With the cooperation of the City Park Department, it is about to become a reality. A place has been set aside for that purpose and many specimens are now on hand. Houston being so near the Gulf of Mexico (30 miles) it is always 10 to 15 degrees warmer than even 100 miles inland, therefore Houston is particularly well adapted for the growing of subtropical plants out of doors.

The Houston Arboretum desires exchange with other like institutions and with individuals and will be pleased to send in exchange native specimens.

Business continues good here. With the holiday rush coming on the retail stores are breaking in new help to handle the rush which is bound to come as the final days draw near. The R. C. Kerr Co., Inc., had on exhibition at the meeting of the Horticultural Society fine Roses in variety also a vase of Chrysanthemums known as Mistletoe.

With the ending of the war, business is beginning to pick up among the landscapers. Edward Teas, J. M. Laughlin and others report plenty to do. Outside planting is going ahead now, Pansies, Phlox, English Daisies, Calendulas and Sweet Alyssum being most planted.

Stock at Lower Cost

Mild weather throughout the entire Fall has enabled growers in this section to produce excellent stock at a much lower cost than had been expected. Last year intensive firing was necessary in December, and in part of October and November, whereas no notably cold weather has been experienced this season.

Stock, however, is somewhat scarce owing to the recent heavy demand. The growers have had an excellent season, and the retailers have handled the largest and most profitable business of several years. Collections, too, have been somewhat better than usual.

Milton C. Reimers, of the firm of E. G. Reimers & Son Co., is back at business again, having been discharged from the Officers' Central Training School at Camp Taylor.

F. Walker & Co. have been featuring Mushroom culture recently, using clever advertising to bring out the profits that can be made. O. V. N. S.

Washington, D. C.

Made a Lieutenant

Word has just come from France that Clifford H. Jenkins has been commissioned a second lieutenant. Lieut. Jenkins was formerly associated with his brothers and father in the florist business in Suitland, D. C. With his brother, Harry T. Jenkins, he was called to the colors in the draft and was sent to Camp Meade for preliminary training. Both boys soon became sergeants, Harry Jenkins receiving his promotions at Camp Gordon, Ala. Shortly after arriving in France they were sent to the training school. Both went to the same place and there met for the first time in nine months. After completing their courses they went back to the front lines. A letter from Clifford told of his becoming a second lieutenant on Nov. 1, but the last heard from Harry was a letter dated Oct. 16, stating that he was "too busy to write, fighting and advancing for 10 days without a stop, driving the Hun out of France." He said that a great many of his comrades had been killed. Clifford Jenkins is a member of the Florists' Club of Washington, of which his brother, R. Lloyd Jenkins, is past president. Both are well known in this section and have many friends.

The sympathy of the florists is extended to Zack Carrick, of the Louise Flower Shop, who last week lost his three year old daughter Regina, death being due to Spanish influenza. Mr. Carrick himself has been seriously ill with influenza for two weeks.

Fire last week caused a loss to David G. Grillbortzer, Alexandria, Va., approximating $3500. The cause of the fire, which broke out at noon time, in the boiler house, is unknown. The fire also attacked the office and workshop, and badly damaged five of the greenhouses. Mr. Grillbortzer controls the Loose houses across the street from where the fire started, and had pipes run to the houses from which heat had been cut off by the fire. Further damage is possible because of the cold weather now prevailing. There was no insurance on the damaged place.

Tom Shawyer, formerly with C. T. Eldridge, of Danville, Va., has joined the Louise Flower Shop on Connecticut ave.

Elmer C. Mayberry has been confined to his home with a severe cold. During his absence the Dupont Flower Shop, in Dupont Circle, is being looked after by Sam Everett, a former employee, who is now a sergeant in the Quartermaster Corps of the Army.

The Flower Shop, operated by Harry T. Payne, formerly manager for Freeman's, has been removed from 1303 F st. to more desirable quarters at 1224 F st.

The Leo Niessen Co. is offering exceptionally fine Valley to the trade. Valley had almost become a curiosity because of its scarcity, and now the retailers hesitate handling it because of the price. It is now bringing $12 per 100, a price heretofore unheard of, for in former years it dragged when it reached top price of $5 and $6, and could be had at times as low as $2. The Niessen Co. is also showing attractive Holly and Boxwood wreaths.

Club Meeting

The Florists' Club at its December meeting, held at the store of Gude Bros. Co., adopted resolutions on the death of the late J. Henry Small. The secretary was instructed to draw up a suitable memorial. Mr. Small, although not a member of the club, was highly respected, and the club desired to show its appreciation of his sterling qualities. It was further resolved to send a suitable floral offering, and Edward S. Schmid was appointed chairman of a committee to attend the funeral. Speaking of Mr. Small, William F. Gude characterized him as a man who was always above little things; he was a "square competitor" and one with whom it was really a pleasure to do business. He word was a promise with him as binding as a contract.

President Blackistone, in the absence of Chairman Shaffer, made a report of the activities of the florists in connection with the United War Work campaign. Mr. Blackistone stated that between $1000 and $1200 was collected by the florists trade committee, added to which was $1200 more from the sale of flowers donated by the trade. The application of Walter F. Bottger was received and referred to the membership committee for consideration.

Club Meeting

Wm. G. Lehr, of Brooklyn, Md., was the speaker at the meeting of the club, held last Monday, and gave an interesting narrative of his recent tour among the Rose growers near Philadelphia. He spoke of the labor and coal situation in particular and the effects on greenhouse establishments where, in some cases, only one quarter of the labor considered necessary before war is available. Many growers are keeping up the good appearance of their greenhouses showing that growers are men upon whom a good sized block of trouble must be dumped before they are put out of the running. It was interesting to note the different manner in which the same varieties of Roses were treated by different growers and all apparently getting good results. Mr. Lehr also recounted the varieties grown at the various ranges. While some few specialize, others grow many varieties well.

Following his talk a discussion arose regarding the method of handling the accounts of members who may be in arrears for dues. It was decided that the financial secretary notify all such members whose arrears extend for six months or more that unless the amount due is paid before next meeting, Jan. 13, the names of delinquent members on that date will be read out in open club meeting and summary action taken.

Wm. J. Johnston, president of the Maryland Horticultural Society extended an invitation to all club members to attend the annual meetings of the society to be held in the Hotel Emerson, Baltimore, on Dec. 10 and 11. They will be held in the hotel this year because the society has been unable to obtain the Fifth Regiment Armory to hold the annual Maryland Week Exhibition. It is hoped next year to hold its annual exhibition as heretofore. W. F E.

Middle Atlantic States

Pittsburgh, Pa.

A good steady market still continues and high prices are in order. A scarcity of stock and a heavy demand keep prices away above normal. This applies not only to Pittsburgh but every market is short of flowers. Some retailers have been buying out of town but are now back looking for their regular supply.

American Beauty Roses have taken a slight advance during the latter part of the week; specials sold at $9 per doz. Carnations are very scarce, and a heavy cut is not looked for until after Christmas. They are now selling at $8 per 100. There are only a few Roses offered, which bring high prices. Some good Ophelia, Russell, Killarney and Columbia are seen on the market. Short Roses are mostly in demand on account of the large amount of funeral work. The last of the 'Mums came in this week. They are only what was left and are very small. Good Stevia is selling well. Lilies are now arriving in larger numbers and sell at $25 per 100, which is the highest price known in this market for many years. Paperwhites are seen in limited quantities at 6c.; Valley, orchids, Violets, yellow Daisies and Calendulas are also offered.

The outlook for Christmas is excellent except that there will not be enough stock for all. Roses may be in heavy crop but Carnations will be extremely scarce. Christmas material of all kinds is moving rapidly. There seems to be a scarcity of Boxwood. The first Holly and trees reached the produce yards this week. Holly seems to be scarce and high priced. Most all the plant growers are sold up on all their Christmas plants and unable to fill late orders. N. McC.

Lancaster, Pa.

With the flower shop windows all containing an appeal for trade and with the Christmas colors in them the business can not very well be poor, but there is no use trying to hide the fact that it might be better. I believe that like some of the other industries it will take a little time to get adjusted.

P. K. Murphy of the B. F. Barr Co. never forgets the store around holiday times but always gets a good batch of business from the Lancaster boys in his company. The fact that he is in France has not interfered with his loyalty to the home store. The result is many orders to be delivered to wives, sweethearts and mothers back home.

Harry Haverstick says the B. F. Barr Co. never has had such a season in the nursery. The company is yet planting evergreens and has been continuously on this job since the middle of August, the work being scattered all over Lancaster and York Counties.

The Rosery, which, perhaps, has the best collection of plants in the city, finds a fair market for them, although there is not as yet any particular danger of a shortage.

Walter Hammond and Mrs. Goldfish continue to use a liberal lot of plants in their window decorations and just enough color to make people stop, look and buy.

At Schroyers' the store has a Christmas air. Good taste is expected both in plants and cut flowers. Being the oldest store in the city it has some of the old time customers who use flowers only on special occasions, such as the holidays.

To get acquainted with the Geranium situation the writer made a call on Peter Brown whom he found just recovering from an illness. The help at the place all have had their turn in being laid up so this has interefered with the getting out of stock. The sand beds are now being fast filled with cuttings. Panama here are a twin line with Geraniums and are sold by the 100,000, the last going out now from glass protected frames.

Fred Ritchy has also had sickness among his help. He has been the only one on the job; but things are better now and his propagating beds are also being filled with cuttings. He has recovered without any special cost estimates that we must have more money for our stock or get out of the business. As he has made a success along other lines he knows what he is talking about when he starts on costs and selling prices.

At the writer's the sick bugaboo passed by without stopping. While the propagating beds are being well utilized all the time, the preparation to get along with 50 per cent. of the fuel, cut out the house of stock. This loss is seriously felt with the demand ahead of supply all the time. I am framing up a cost estimate and am curious to see just where present prices will land us. The greenhouse establishment idea does not appeal to me in this particular industry as I have yet to see the very large establishment that makes a paying use of its full ground surface.

That the social element is again cropping up among the florists is shown by the turkey dinner served by Mr. and Mrs. J. Wade Galey of Strasburg to Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Barr, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Landis and Miss Sarah Linville, Chas. B. Herr and Mrs. J. Lewis Dyer.

In my club notes the other week the ladies' auxiliary meeting at the home of Mrs. Albert M. Herr should have been mentioned. The keeping of house plants was the topic of discussion. Very light refreshments were served.

American Rose Society

The American Rose Society, through its secretary, E. A. White, has sent out an appeal to members of the society to make 1919—"the first year of peace—the greatest Rose year in the history of the continent." All members are urged to get their friends to join, remembering that with membership goes the privilege of receiving a copy of The American Rose Annual, a publication which will be highly valued by all Rose lovers.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

Information supplied by John Young, Secretary, 1170 Broadway, New York

National Publicity Campaign

A little over two weeks remains in which to complete the drive for $50,000, the amount required by our publicity committees to finance the liabilities they have assumed in carrying out the publicity campaign for 1918. As will be noticed by the financial report appended hereto, we are short about $4665.

Can we make good? Can we raise this small sum among the very large number of florists who have not yet subscribed to the fund? It should not be difficult if the disposition to "let the other fellow do it" were eliminated. The "other fellow" has been doing it all along, in many cases duplicating his subscription or materially increasing it.

The "other fellow" has had an eye to the results forthcoming from the campaign, a very wide open eye. He realized that we should have to pass through a critical time in the florists' business, a time when the ordinary demand for flowers would of necessity be greatly reduced. He further realized that something should be done to create a new demand which should fill in the gap, and he believed that this was possible through our campaign. He made the campaign possible through his subscriptions, and he has now the satisfaction of knowing that his views were correct, for he has enjoyed the benefits accruing from the greater demand which has been created. Yes! the "other fellow" has done his bit, and is wondering why so many of his trade brethren do not look at the situation in the same way.

Surely there can be no adverse criticism of our methods. We have pounded into the public mind the great usefulness of flowers in the conveyance of sentiments on birthdays, memorial days, such as Mother's Day, festivals, such as St. Valentine's Day, Easter, Memorial Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas. We have induced the public to look upon flowers even as desirable wedding gifts. We have succeeded in getting our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," firmly established, and it is up to us to see that it remains so. Look at the front cover of the December issue of the Garden Magazine, displayed on every first class newsstand in the country, and ponder upon our message as there presented. This is only a small part of our publicity work. Wherever we see a chance to put our slogan forward, we take advantage of it, so that flowers will come to mind as beautiful vehicles for the conveyance of sentiment, mediums within the reach of all but until now not properly considered as faithful carriers of messages of love, sympathy, regard or congratulation.

Help us to get together this small amount of money that our plans and work may not be retarded. Send in your check for whatever you feel you can afford, and make your contribution an annual one for the remaining years of the campaign. Make request of the secretary's office for the official forms if preferred, but let us have the required subscriptions without delay.

Florists who advertise in their local papers should send us a dollar for our Christmas electrotype. This electrotype will connect any establishment with our display advertisement in eight national magazines. For a description of other aids, drop a line for our list.

The following additional subscriptions are recorded:

1170 Broadway, New York City. JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

The committee appointed by President Totty to represent the S. A. F. and O. H. at the War Emergency and Reconstruction Congress of War Service Committees of American Industries, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America held at Atlantic City, N. J., December 3 to 6, comprised President C. H. Totty, Secretary John Young, Washington Representative Wm. F. Gude and George Asmus of Chicago. These gentlemen were in attendance throughout the Congress. The committee was admitted to the Congress under credentials which relegated it to voting power in Group No. 32. In accordance with the program, they took part in the discussion of the problem of reconstruction, as it affects the florists' trade. The committee for its section, presented the following resolution which was carried:

"The committee representing the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists and the allied trades, an organization working under a charter passed by Congress and signed by the late President McKinley, hereby submits the following:

"RESOLVED, That we recommend the continuance of the War Industries Board for a limited period. We further recommend the creation of a central committee composed of representatives of the major business interests of the country to take up the work of the War Industries Board during the period of readjustment; also that official recognition shall be given the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, as this body would be of valuable assistance in economic liquidation of left-over war properties; further, the florist industries ask that all restrictions that have been imposed on them as war measures be removed, such as fuel restriction, and the importation and exportation of its products. These recommendations are of vital importance to the florists' industry."

COMMITTEE,

(Signed) CHAS. H. TOTTY, President.
JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.
WM. F. GUDE, Washington Representative, S. A. F. and O. H.
GEO. ASMUS, Chairman Finance Committee.

The florists' trade generally was represented fully and solely by the committee, the Society of American Florists being recognized as a trade organization exerting influence in its principal field. The attendance at the Congress was very large, including nearly 5000 delegates, representing practically every industry. The prevailing idea of the Congress was that industry should be allowed in great part to settle the various problems of reconstruction outlined in the Congress without restrictions by the National Congress which might be derogatory to the homogeneous reconstruction.

1170 Broadway, New York City. JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

Floriculture at Cornell

With the signing of the armistice the work of the department of floriculture is rapidly coming back to its former status. When war was declared, many men students specializing in floriculture joined the colors and the classes in 1918 have been composed almost entirely of women students. The staff of instructors was also very much depleted, practically all having been engaged in some form of war service.

Early in January, 1918, E. C. Volz, instructor, resigned to become Director of School and Home Garden Work in Michigan. In February E. A. White was relieved of his duties at the college to take up the organization and supervision of school and home garden work in Western New York. This work was continued until July 1, 1918. On July 1 M. E. Farnham, instructor, was called for service and was stationed at Camp Sevier, S. C. At the same time Miss L. A. Minns was given leave of absence that she might supervise the greenhouse and garden work at the Carnegie Institute for Experimental Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., thus relieving a man for war service. In September, C. L. Thayer, instructor, was called for service and is now stationed at Fort Adams, R. I. During the Fall Professor David Lumsden has been teaching the S. A. T. C. in meteorology. Dr. A. C. Beal was granted a sabbatic leave of absence for the year 1918-1919 which he is spending at Los Angeles, Cal.

During the last four weeks many of the former students have expressed a desire to return to their work in floriculture and plans are being made to begin all the courses on Dec. 30. The college curriculum has been put on a four-term basis, and the work will continue throughout the Summer. Thus a student who had completed the work of his junior year may return and take up his studies Dec. 30 and graduate in Oct., 1919. Practically all the teaching force will be available for the beginning of the new term.

During the war the educational work in floriculture has been retarded fully as much as has the work of commercial florists. The members of the department have accepted the conditions in the same loyal spirit of devotion to the country's best interests as have the commercial men. When the ruling of the Fuel Administrator regarding the 50 per cent coal supply for greenhouses became effective, half the glass area of the College of Agriculture was closed. In the department of floriculture the Rose and Carnation houses and a third house for miscellaneous plants were closed, the palm houses and the cooler houses for Sweet Peas and other plants being continued in operation. The feeling of those in charge of the administration of the work of the college was that it should adjust its work to meet the requirement of the Fuel Administrator in the same spirit as did the commercial florists.

It is the belief of all those in the department that with the coming of peace the educational work in floriculture in all American institutions will rapidly resume the important position it occupied before the war. Our young men are coming back with a greater realization of the advantages offered by American schools and colleges, and there is no question that the floricultural industry will immediately feel the effects of the ending of the war and that a period of prosperity is before it.

E. A. WHITE,
Dept. of Floriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

New England States

Worcester, Mass.

Cloudy and stormy weather the past week has shortened the flower market considerably, although there have been flowers enough to fill the demand, business having slowed up a little since Thanksgiving Day. Local growers are practically cleaned up on 'Mums, especially colored, there being a limited amount of Christmas white which will hardly be in for the Christmas trade unless good weather prevails. Although customers are still calling for large 'Mums retailers are unable to get them at any price in this locality. Violets although rather plentiful at Thanksgiving Day are now at a premium. Roses of the better grades are in fair supply but work Roses up to 14in. stems are scarce.

A trip finds some of the greenhouses well stocked with potted plants for Christmas. Poinsettias, Cyclamen and Cherries seem to predominate this year and are of fine quality. Wreaths, roping, Boxwood balls and Christmas novelties are now being shown extensively in the flower shops and everything is rounding into shape for the biggest and best trade ever.

Market prices the past week were as follows: Carnations $3 to $5; Roses $6 to $18 per 100; Sweet Peas 75c. to $1.25; 'Mums (small flowers) $1 to $2 per doz.; pompons and singles 75c. per bunch; Stevia, very good quality, 50c. per bunch; Asparagus Sprengeri and A. plumosus 50c. per bunch. F. L. M.

Hartford, Conn.

We are all looking forward to a good Christmas trade. It is true that stock will be scarce, but there will be some available. Carnations will be hard to get and will come into their own, the latest price quoted being 6c. to 8c.; red and scarlet 12c., wholesale, meaning that the retailers will have to get correspondingly high prices.

The Cedar Hill Greenhouses have been leased by A. F. Lindner for the season. E. S. Drake, who established the place will take a much needed rest. Mr. Lindner will carry the same line of goods as Mr. Drake had. Mr Lindner has had several years' experience

Charles Mackey, the plant man at A. N. Piersons, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., will be found at the Flower Shop in Pittsfield, Mass., after Dec. 14.

John P. Quinn, well known to the trade here, died at his late residence on Saturday, Dec. 7, age 40, after a short illness. He was employed by John Coombs for ten years and also by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., for five years. The late James Young was a brother-in-law of Mr. Quinn and it was under the former that Mr. Quinn learned his trade. He is survived by his wife and three children, John F., Thomas E., and Miss Genevieve; his mother and two brothers. He was liked and respected by all who knew him. The funeral was held at St. Joseph's Cathedral on Monday morning. There were flowers from all the trade.

Buys Reuter Range

Chas. Munroe, florist, of 974 Chapel st., has purchased the large range of greenhouses at Westerly, R. I., formerly the property of S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., wholesale growers. After the death of S. J. Reuter the property went into the hands of The Washington Bank and Trust Co., and has now been transferred to Mr. Munroe, together with all the equipment. In an interview Mr. Munroe said that he was not prepared to give out a detailed statement of his plans just yet but, in a general way, he expects to start the houses up to full capacity next year, as a wholesale grower. The houses have been closed since April and it is too late to get them in shape for this season, but he is already putting in a lot of Sweet Peas in some of them.

Mr. Munroe expects to make a specialty of Roses, Carnations, 'Mums, Lilies and bulb stock. The houses will immediately be put in order and stock planted in its season. Mr. Johnson, of New Haven, superintendent for Mr. Munroe's local houses has moved to Westerly and taken charge of the new range. Mr. Munroe will keep the New Haven houses for growing stock for his retail store only, for the present.

The Westerly range consists of about 20 houses, four of them being 500ft. long. In addition there are about 10 other buildings, making a total of 30 structures in all. WM. J. RATHGEBER.

Stamford (Conn.) Hort. Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Stamford Horticultural Society was held on Friday evening Dec. 6. New officers for the ensuing year were elected. A report of the committee for the Fall show proved that the society is able to donate to the Red Cross quite a substantial sum. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the entertainment for members and their families.

The following displays were awarded prizes: Seedling Carnation, cert. of merit and Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward cult. certif. gdr., M. J. Quick. Cypripedium insigne, vote of thanks Chrysanthemum No. 244, cert. of merit, gdr. James Foster. Others were highly commended.

G. C. BOON, Cor. Sec'y.

Victory

He hath put down the mighty from power,
He hath humbled the proud in the dust,
He hath made the oppressor to cower,
And exalted the lowly and just.

He hath smitten the king from his throne,
And the princes are scattered afield;
The hand of the Lord hath been shown,
And the wounds of His people are healed.

The Lord, who is righteous and great,
In His wrath hath laid tyranny low;
Henceforth let the cohorts of Hate
Come not forth from the hell pits below.

We thank Thee, Omnipotent Will,
That the great guns are silent again;
May their voices forever be still,
And Thine be the glory. Amen.

Plants for the Holidays

Prepare now for Christmas. There is going to be a big demand for plants this year. The war is over and there is joy in every home; your customers will want fine plants to decorate their festive boards and to make presents. There has been a scarcity of help the past year and many growers had to close some of their houses; a great many places closed up for good which, no doubt, will make good stock scarce. We have a very fine stock of plants and will give you good value for your money. We recommend the placing and shipping of orders early, as there is no telling what the weather or railroad conditions will be later on.

FERNS. Our ferns are very fine this year, and we will give you good stock.

Cones as Articles of Commerce

In the place of typical ornamental fruited plants suitable for Christmas use, we are showing the cones of Abies Nordmanniana and Pinus rigida, in the endeavor to draw attention to the fact that the best of these cones already have a financial value, with possibilities of a largely increased market if they are properly handled and advertised. They are now in use by many florists at Christmas for decorative purposes and are used in their natural state or colored. In the endeavor to make a market for cones, their nature must be fully understood so that none will be collected which fall apart at maturity. The marks on the cones of the Abies Nordmanniana consist of resinous substance, and will not be objectionable when the cones are varnished or colored.

Cone of Pinus rigida

The cones of this, the Pitch Pine, a native of the United States, are very beautiful, armed with bristles or spines. These cones are practically sessile and when matured are of a light brown or tawny color. They are about 3in. long, often clustered, but the size of the cones seems to depend upon the nature of the soil, ranging from 1in. to 3in. In shape they are ovate or somewhat pyramidal, while each scale is terminated with a sharp hooked prickle or spine. The seeds are of a dark brown color attached to wings from two to three times their length. J. F. J.

Cones of Abies Nordmanniana

Abies Nordmanniana, the familiar Nordmann's Fir, and a native of the Caucasus, has truly majestic cones. They stand erect upon the branches and are usually placed near the apex of the tree. Unlike the cones of the Spruce family, whose scales are persistent, those of the Fir are deciduous, falling asunder at maturity. What a great pity this is as these cones would thus form pretty ornaments when collected. [Probably the fir cones could be preserved if picked and processed just before maturity.—Ed.] These cones are oblong cylindrical in shape, and usually from 4in. to 6in. long. Their color is a dark chocolate brown. The bracts are generally, but not always, longer than their scales. Those which protrude are elongated to a point in a manner somewhat similar to those of the Douglas Fir. The light colored marking on the scales noticeable in the illustration is resinous matter. J. Ornamental Fruiting Plants—Their Decorative Value in Winter

In this article Edwin Matthews draws attention to the many fruiting plants available for decorative purposes at Xmastide, some greenhouse grown but many obtainable from outdoors. Some, unfortunately, are among those proscribed after next June 1

Not all plants are endowed with gorgeous flowers or have the subtle charm of fragrance which brings them wide popularity and into the line of favorites. But it is distinctly noticeable that where Nature has withheld these attributes she has invariably been most generous in other directions. And so it is with many of our best ornamental fruiting plants. Nature has, so to speak, equalized their attainments by crowning them with beauty at some time during the cycle of the year.

Singularly and fortunately the fruit display of the majority of them comes at a time when, by reason of the dearth in flowering plants, they are most valued and appreciated. Nurserymen, florists and landscape gardeners, alike, realize the ornamental value of these fruiting plants and each in his own sphere makes good use of them.

For interior decoration, florists will naturally include in their list of berried plants some which require a greenhouse treatment to bring them to perfection. In this relation we have in mind such things as: Ardisia crenulata, Solanum Pseudo-capsicum (Jerusalem Cherry). Citrus taitensis japonica (Otaheite Orange), and others, the fruits of which are not only handsome, but also persistent—a trait which makes them doubly valuable.

The florist need not, however, nor does he, confine himself to plants whose constitution forbids of exposure to a low temperature, for in the realm of hardy and half hardy plants he will find a number of good things which he may appropriate to himself for decorative purposes. The Christmas season, above all others, finds a good demand for anything whatsoever in flower or fruit of a cheerful color.

Cones of Abies Nordmanniana

The kinds which have the more persistent fruits are of course the most desirable. In this respect, there is nothing better perhaps than the well known "English Holly." This plant's association with Christmas is inseparable, especially to an Englishman, whose regard for it is equal to the cannie Scot's love for the wee Heather.

Of late years the importation of the Holly from Europe has dropped considerably and, unless the present ruling forbidding the importation of plants with a ball of earth is rescinded we may no longer be favored with its familiar presence at Christmas time unless, indeed, some enterprising individual makes a specialty of growing it for the Eastern trade in the more favored sections of the States of Oregon, Washington, or some point in British Columbia where a moist climatic condition and an equitable temperature throughout the year favors the growth of the English Holly quite as well as in its native home.

Fortunately we are not without some good native representatives of the Holly family which though not equal in beauty to Ilex aquifolium (English Holly) are nevertheless handsome in fruit display. Ilex opaca is our best evergreen species and furnishes more decorative material in the form of wreaths and sprays for Christmas than any other. The deciduous kinds, too, like Ilex verticillata, Ilex monticola, and Ilex lævigata are in demand on account of their bright red and orange colored berries, made more conspicuous at this time because of the fall of the leaf.

How well these Hollies illustrate the thought of Nature's provision which decides that the plant with inconspicuous flowers should be brought into prominence when those that outshone them in floral display earlier in the year are now negative items!

This equally applies to many of the wild Roses, the flowers of which in the Spring are but segments compared with the wealth of bloom afforded by others of the same genus which now, however, have nothing to offer like their wonderful color in fruit as given by Rosa carolina, Rosa setigera, Rosa multiflora and Rosa rugosa. The latter fruit, while not so persistent as the others, makes up for it in size and is liberally used for Autumn and Winter effects in landscape plantings. The fruits of Rosa carolina and the wild Japan Rose (multiflora) are very persistent, lasting well into March with color and firmness of berry.

Apart from the Roses proper, there are a number of other plants included in the order Rosaceæ which are noted for beauty of fruit in Winter. Chief among them are the Hawthorns (Cratægus), Crabs (Pyrus), and the Cotoneasters. Much might be said of these three important groups, but a brief reference to the best among them which afford a berry display in mid-Winter is sufficient.

To our native Hawthorns must be given first place when we call to mind such kinds as Cratægus cordata

BOSTON—Robert Cameron, Harvard Botanic Gardens, Cambridge, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA—Wm. H. Engler, 4651 Lancaster Ave.

Greenhouse construction is beginning to pick up in the West and a number of firms in this line are preparing to meet the expected demand. See Chicago newsletter.

At the annual meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, held on Dec. 5, details of which will be found elsewhere in this issue, the paper read by Otto H. Amling at the last meeting of the club was read again, by request. The reason for this re-reading was that the paper in question contains much valuable facts and suggestions in connection with the production of florists' stock. Mr. Amling's paper will be found in full on p. 769 of THE EXCHANGE of Nov. 16.

Misinformation

A New Jersey newspaper publishes an article under date of Dec. 1 on Easter plants, and bulbs generally, in which a florist is quoted as saying: "The lack of bulbs is universal throughout the United States and Mr. ——— said that he did not believe a basketful had been imported into the country this season." We do not believe that the florist really made this statement attributed to him; it is very likely that he was misquoted and that his statement as given the reporter, referred to some other subject. It would be well for the trade to be on the alert to note and contradict such statements, which may do considerable harm if they are not corrected.

Arboretum for Houston, Texas

Houston is to have an arboretum of rare plants, shrubs and trees, specimens named botanically that will grow in its climate. At a meeting of the Houston Horticultural Society, a committee was appointed to confer with the city park administration to carry out plans. A space of six acres adjoining one of the parks is known to be available for the purpose and when properly prepared under the park management, arboretum stock will be collected and planted during the winter.

The Government is expected to send a considerable number of trees and shrubs to supply the garden. Also some are expected from the French Government, but anything interesting or rare that can be grown in the Houston climate will be given space, no matter where it comes from. The committee will report at the January meeting of the society and steps will be taken to commence planting shortly after.

Eight Weeks' Winter Course at Columbus

For those who are not fitted with the proper preparatory work for the four year course in college, or those who have attended college, but have always wished for a little more education, Ohio State University at Columbus, O., offers an eight weeks' course which starts Jan. 6. The course continues through farmers' week, which is a week filled with talks and demonstrations by leaders. Special courses are offered for the sons and daughters of florists in gardening, commercial floriculture, fruit growing, soils and various other allied subjects.

The tuition amounts to merely the payment of several small fees for laboratories. It is estimated that the course should not cost a provident student more than $60. Write for information to B. G. Watson, Secretary of College of Agriculture, Ohio State University, Columbus, O.

The GREATEST MOTHER in the WORLD

She's warming thousands, feeding thousands, healing thousands from her store; the Greatest Mother in the World—the RED CROSS.

The national campaign for the Red Cross which starts Dec. 16 next is a campaign for membership only. Every man, woman and child is expected to become a member. The cost is One Dollar. With it you get a button with red cross, white ground, blue border. That will be your receipt. Wear it. You then become a full member for 1919, and will suffer no further solicitation.

Flowers vs. Diamonds, or Meat, or Cigars

If a charitably disposed lady was to step into the jeweler's Monday and ask him for a very small diamond for a church fair, and if the same lady called on the same man on the Tuesday or Wednesday with the same request, and likely again on the Friday or the Saturday, and if she persisted in calling on the same man, or even on different jewelers, with the same request, week in and week out——

And if another charitably disposed person called on the butcher to the same effect——

And if another equally well disposed party called on the cigar dealer with a similar request to give, give——

And if, instead of its being just one well disposed person calling on each business to give out of its stock, there were a score or a hundred in each city of size constantly at it——

Just how long could those business men, perhaps all alike charitably disposed—more so, because they give while the others only do the asking—continue to give? And how would they feel about it?

In the big cities this sort of thing—asking, asking—goes on steadily week in and week out.

And some lines are called upon to give more—and more often—than others; the florists, for instance.

Can any one explain why these men should be expected to give freely and continuously of their stock in trade, the goods on the sale of which they rely for their livelihood and for which they have to pay, even though grown by themselves?

As is weekly attested by our columns the florists, although in a nonessential business and beset by obstacles in every direction, have been giving steadily and profusely—these past two years particularly—for all sorts of purposes of that which otherwise they could readily have turned into good hard cash—giving more freely, pro rata, we venture to assert, than any other class of business man.

And they are continuing to give—and this article is not intended to dissuade them from giving wherever they can help in a worthy cause—far be it from us to preach against giving when the giver is able and the cause just—God bless all their generous hearts.

But the line should be drawn somewhere. Is it not possible for many of those who are now asking direct of the florists to ask direct of their friends for the funds wherewith to come to the florist and at least pay cost for the flowers? We think so.

In the past flowers have been held all too cheaply—and to this fact must be attributed one of the principa reasons—if not the sole reason why the florists hav come to be looked upon as men who could well afford t give because the flowers "didn't cost them anything."

It would thus appear to be up to the florists to regulat their business so that even in the extreme case of a sur plus, their stock would have a dollar and cents value jus as have all other forms of merchantable stock.

This can only be brought about by cooperation, a metho or system of doing business which, just now, is bein introduced largely into the activities of many lines o business, both retail and wholesale.

As to the form of cooperation which shall protect th florist and still leave it open for him to practice charit for sweet charity's sake? This can be best arrived a through discussion participated in by all concerned, th endeavor being to give collectively for designated pur poses up to a certain point—perhaps to work out a definit appropriation for the year's charities just as is now com mon among many of our best business houses. All othe flowers asked for charity to be paid for by those intereste in the charity.

Origin of the Present Tree Planting Idea

So that credit may be placed where credit belongs, th origination and first publicity of the idea of plantin trees in honor of our soldiers and sailors must be ac corded to J. Edward Moon of Morrisville, Pa., wh while en route to Chicago to attend the Nurserymen Convention held there last June, discussing variou matters with other nurserymen at that time, conceive the idea of the Service Tree, which was later taken b fore the Convention, duly noted in the Chicago pape and afterward taken up and mentioned in some 4(different newspapers throughout the United States.

Mr. Moon's original idea was that the grounds su rounding the home whence a soldier had gone fort should have a Service Tree to commemorate his en trance into the military service, just as a Service St is displayed in a window. He also had the idea th many unplanted boulevards and city thoroughfar could be planted with trees dedicated to the boys wh had left the municipality, such avenues of trees to l designated as Liberty Trees, or some other cognome equally appealing.

Since then the American Forestry Association h developed the idea of planting trees in memory our fallen heroes and has already done considerab missionary work in promulgating this good work wi every prospect of the custom being largely adopte This latter propaganda, however, need not, in an way, interfere with Mr. Moon's original idea of plan ing a tree in the home grounds, in honor of the en trance into service of one of the household. Especial appealing would it be to do this where the home owned and not rented. If a suitable ornamental tre were planted, the one in whose honor it had been s out, could in later years show it to his children an his grandchildren and its significance would sink dee into the hearts of these children.

As illustrating the significance of a tree planted commemorate some great occasion, the writer recollec well meeting out in Queens, N. Y., one day years ag an old nurseryman, Nicholas Hallock by name, ju as I happened to be passing by and admiring a gran old form of weeping tree on the lawn of that nursery man's former residence. I said to "Uncle Nick," as I was affectionately called, "What a wonderful old tree what a glorious form it has taken, and note the shelte it gives!" "Yes, my boy," replied Uncle Nick. "I re member that tree well; I dug it out of the woods, haule it on my back and planted it here the day Abraha Lincoln was assassinated, and the tree has grown an prospered and has stood all these years as my mont ment to the martyred President."

So, those who plant good selected trees, truly and wel will be rearing monuments to future generations, an every tree will have its story to tell of the days o the Great War.

New York Florists' Club

The New York Florists' Club held its regular monthl meeting and annual election on Monday evening, De 9, at the Grand Opera House building, 23d st. and 8t ave., President Schenck presiding. The usual good a tendance on election night was well maintained, ov 175 members being present.

After the reading of the minutes of the previou meeting, which were adopted, Charles H. Totty reporte having attended, with Secretary J. Young, the meetin of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce at Atlantic Ci last week. Mr. Totty was greatly impressed by th large interests represented at the meeting and a repo will be found elsewhere in this issue.

A. L. Miller of the Flower Show Committee reporte that the project of holding the Spring Flower Show

Philip F. Kessler
President-elect N. Y. Florists' Club

1919 was abandoned by the committee for the reason that no suitable building could be obtained, and also that the prospect of exhibits from private greenhouses were very small.

Resolutions of sympathy with the families of Ralph M. Ward, Walter R. Siebrecht, Carl Giessler, William Vescelius and William Weber, prepared by the various committees appointed for the purpose, were duly passed and copies ordered to be sent to the families.

Clarence R. Ankers, Rockville Center, N. Y., was elected to membership.

Isadore Landsman, Simon Schneirow, Bornatt Klugman, all of Brooklyn; O. J. Van Bourgondien, Arlington, N. J., F. G. Sealey, New York City, and R. H. Bard of Syracuse, N. Y., were nominated for election for next meeting.

A report from the Board of Trustees, covering a meeting held Dec. 9 was presented. The Board recommended that the general checking account carried with the Harriman National Bank be transferred to the Corn Exchange Bank, 28th st. Branch and that the Liberty Loan Bonds taken up by the Club be turned in and exchanged for the new issue of the series. The Board also recommended that an appropriation of $30 per month be made to cover the rental of suitable office quarters for the club. All these recommendations were adopted and it was further arranged that the secretary should be reimbursed for office rent for the year, 1918.

After Prof. Andrews had demonstrated the possibility of reversing the laws of nature in many startling ways, through the use of liquid air, the election of officers for the coming year took place.

Letters declining office were read from Chas. Schenck and John Canning for president, Emil Schloss for vice pres., J. H. Pepper and J. G. Esler for secretary, Thomas B. De Forest and A. T. Bunyard for treasurer, P. J. Smith and W. R. Pierson for trustees. Philip F. Kessler, John Young (re-elected), W. C. Rickards (re-elected), being unopposed for the offices of president, secretary and treasurer, respectively, were declared duly elected.

The result of the ballot for the other officers was as follows: For vice pres., P. W. Popp (re-elected); for trustees, E. C. Vick, Percy B. Rigby and A. T. DeLaMare.

Secretary John Young, in accepting office, paid special tribute to the outgoing president who, by a close application to the duties of the office, had served the club well during his term. Secretary Young also laid special emphasis on the large membership of the Club, now over 500, and all in good standing. The New York Florists' Club, because of this satisfactory state of affairs, Mr. Young said, ranked high in the lists of the leading clubs of America.

A letter of resignation from James Bell was read and accepted. The secretary also read a letter of thanks from overseas, for a gift of smokes, from Regimental Sgt. E. A. Manda.

The committee on Plant Exclusion was discharged with the thanks of the club, after the reading of a letter from Winfred Rolker, chairman of that committee.

A letter from T. A. Havemeyer, requesting action by the club in connection with the distribution of flowers on the arrival of Uncle Sam's forces from overseas, brought forth lively discussion. Pres. Schenck believed that a halt must be called in this direction. He reiterated the fact that the florists had been called upon to give, give and give again, and that they had responded at all times. Flowers cost money to produce and this constant drain could not be maintained. Furthermore, it was generally agreed that no other industry had been called upon to give as often as that of the hurst, L. I., vase of Chrysanthemum Bright View, prepointed out by E. C. Vick, that the constant giving away of flowers would tend to cheapen that commodity in the eyes of the public.

Exhibition Awards

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., vases of Chrysanthemums, Golden Mistletoe and Christmas Gold, awarded preliminary certificates. Teaneck Greenhouses, Teaneck, N. J., two vases of Antirrhinum, vote of thanks. Charles Smith & Son, Corona, L. I., two vases of single 'Mums, vote of thanks. R. E. Sealey, Cedarhurst, L. I., case of Chrysanthemum Bright View, preliminary certificate; also vase of seedling single 'Mums, vote of thanks.

Philip F. Kessler

Philip F. Kessler, Pres.-elect of the New York Florists' Club, who recently celebrated his birthday with a turkey dinner to the Club, was born 45 years ago in New York city. His home is in Woodside, L. I., where he has a wife, three daughters and two sons. Mr. Kessler served his apprenticeship with T. B. Hyatt of Winfield, L. I., and John Reck of Bridgeport, Conn. Later he became manager of the Cut Flower Exchange, New York. He engaged in business for himself in 1905 at 55 West 26th st., as a wholesale commission florist, and has continued uninterruptedly and successfully in this business at that location up to the present time. Mr. Kessler is a life member of the S. A. F. and the New York Florists' Club, and has served effectively on the Club's outing committee three years, and on its house committee four years, and has been a trustee for two terms.

Mr. Kessler is noted as one of the hard workers in the flower business being on the job from 5 a.m. until 6 p.m. each day, except in the month of August, when it is his custom to close his place of business, go to his bungalow in the Adirondacks, forget business cares, and take a rest. As a result of his untiring attention to business we understand that Mr. Kessler has been able to acquire extensive real estate holdings in his home town.

P. W. Popp

P. W. Popp, re-elected vice-president of the N. Y. F. C., is known as one of the brightest men in gardening circles in the East. He was superintendent of "Seven Oaks," Mamaroneck, N. Y., the country home of Mrs. Harry Darlington of Pittsburgh, Pa., until the death of that lady recently.

Mr. Popp was born at Wappinger Falls, N. Y., Sept. 16, 1874. At the age of 14 he entered the employ of Irving Grinnell, Esq., at the latter's home "Netherwood," New Hamburg, N. Y., one of the finest of the then popular Hudson River Valley estates. After ten years of service there he left that estate and successively held various other situations, his aim being to broaden his knowledge of landscape work, decorating, and other branches of the craft.

Mr. Popp has always been identified with the growing and exhibiting of horticultural novelties. He is a graduate of the school of practical experience and has identified himself with all progressive movements for the good of the profession. He went to "Seven Oaks" in 1906, as greenhouse foreman.

He is a life member of the New York Florists' Club; the Westchester (N. Y.) Fairfield (Conn.) Hort. Society, and National Ass'n of Gardeners, and also holds membership in the S. A. F. and O. H., the Hort. Society of New York, and the American Dahlia Society.

Plant Exclusion Protest

There was a meeting on Friday, Dec. 6, at the office of John Young, Sec'y of the S. A. F., to devise means to bring about a modification of the Plant Exclusion Ordinance of the Federal Horticultural Board before this ordinance goes into effect June 1, 1919.

There were present at this meeting J. D. Eisele, Riverton, N. J.; John Watson, Princeton, N. J.; Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.. James McHutchison and C. B. Knickman, New York. A provisional plan was agreed upon in the endeavor to bring about this desired modification and will be at once carried out. It was felt by those present that the nurserymen and florists of the United States are not awake to the scope and gravity and general injurious effect upon their business of this exclusion order, one in which, in the opinion of some, the Federal Horticultural Board may have exceeded its authority.

P. W. Popp
Re-elected Dec. 9, 1918, vice-president of the New York Florists' Club

Chicago Florists' Club

President Lautenschlager called the annual meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club to order at 8:15 p.m. Thursday evening, Dec. 5, at the Randolph Hotel. All the officers were present except one. Three new members, whose petitions had been presented at the last meeting.were elected. There were also three applications for membership: George J. Walther, Geo. Gobel and L. R. Bohannon; their applications will be acted on at the next regular meeting.

O. J. Friedman, chairman of the garden committee of the club, gave a report of what was done during the year and suggested that more should be done next year by the club in forwarding the garden movement, which had done so much for the betterment of conditions during the war..

It was moved and carried that the club have a "victory banquet" at the next meeting of the club which will be held on Jan. 9. This will be installation night and the banquet is planned to be held immediately after the installation ceremonies. It was decided to have this a "ladies' night" also but all other details for the evening's entertainment are left with the committee, of which T. E. Waters is chairman, Mr. Waters having power to add to his committee as many assistants as he may desire.

Important Business Topics Discussed

By request the paper read by Otto H. Amling at the last meeting was read for the second time. As this paper deals especially with the cost of production it was thought that a further discussion on the paper would be of benefit to all. It was published in full in The Florists' Exchange, issue of Nov. 16, p. 769. The paper brought up a lively discussion between Mr. Amling and Phil Foley, as the estimated cost of heating given by the latter was much less than that of Mr. Amling. Mr. Foley was therefore asked to read a paper at a future meeting on the cost of heating, per square foot of surface.

L. R. Bohannon, in discussing the paper from a retailer's standpoint, said that while it was excellent the plans suggested would not help the trade unless the growers, wholesalers and retailers cooperated for the general good of the trade. There should be a growers' organization, a wholesalers' and a retailers'. Prominent men from each of these organizations should meet weekly to discuss the situation as it presented itself to them from week to week. The speaker said there was no cooperation among the florists and until they got together as a body for mutual protection the business would suffer. He spoke strongly against department store sales, as well as opposing the sale of flowers on the streets by fakirs; when Violets and Carnations were sold on the streets it lowered them to the gutter. It was no compliment for a lady to wear them when they were exhibited in this way. This was a matter that was up to the growers and commission men to remedy.

The officers of the newly organized Chicago Retail Florists' Ass'n were present and the club gave them a rising vote of thanks for attending.

I. R. Craig, at the request of the club, again read his paper giving suggestions as to the bringing about of better relations between the wholesaler and retailer. The paper covers a number of important points and is so full of good business ideas that it was decided that it would be premature to take immediate action on it. It was therefore suggested that a copy of tthe paper be sent to the trade papers, with request for publication, so that all might read it and be better able to discuss its merits at a future meeting.

Hodgson Jolly of the Hodgson Jolly organization, public accountants, was present and gave a talk on the proper methods of conducting business. He showed by charts the various costs and the expense of doing business from the producer to the consumer.

Election of Officers

In the election of officers, next taken up, there was only one contest, that for president, there being two nominees. George C. Weiland, one of the nominees, sent a letter to the secretary declining the nomination on account of business reasons, which left A. J. Zech the only candidate. A motion was made that all the nominees be elected without ballot. This was unanimously carried. The following officers were therefore declared duly elected for the coming year:

Pres., A. J. Zech; Vice-Pres., Walter Amling; Sec'y, A. T. Pyfer; Treas., Otto H. Amling; Trustee, Fred Lautenschlager.

Pruning Ornamental and Fruit Trees

killed. The shoots should be shortened after blooming, so that strong new canes may be secured for the next season. The Polyanthas and Baby ramblers usually require the removal of fruits, while the rugosas and moss Roses need only the old and scraggly shoots cut out. The climbing Roses need little attention except to keep them within bounds, allowing relatively few canes to grow, which should be well spaced on the trellis, and removing the old ones from time to time. The Wichuraiana and rambler types produce flowers on the wood of the previous year and thus should be pruned after flowering and in the Spring.

Vine Pruning

Vine pruning consists merely of removing the old shoots and cutting back straggling growths, bearing the same principle in mind as that for shrubs in so far as the blooming period is concerned—namely, pruning after blooming. Vines which are grown for their ornamental fruit should be cut hard in early Spring, as they fruit on the new wood.

Fruit Trees, Bush Fruits and Grapes

Fruit trees are pruned to enable them to produce a superior quality of fruit, the fundamental conception being to reduce the struggle for existence among branches so the remainder may yield larger and finer products. Heavy pruning of the top during dormancy produces vigorous growth, due to the same amount of root energy being concentrated into a smaller top. Conversely, heavy pruning of roots reduces wood growth, the top receiving less water supply from the diminished roots. Too vigorous a growth reduces fruitfulness and should be avoided.

It is essential to know the fruiting habits of various fruits for intelligent pruning. The Apple and the Pear bear upon spurs, while the Peach bears upon shoots of previous season's growth, indicating that similar methods cannot be employed in the two cases. The entire operation usually resolves itself into a systematic, yearly thinning out of weak, interfering branches, thereby deflecting energy into the sound limbs and at the same time promoting healthfulness by admitting the sun to the innermost parts and permitting convenient spraying and picking.

Training the Young Trees

In order to lay the fundamentals of a desirable head, young trees are pruned so as to leave four or five of the best side branches which are headed back to a few buds each. The leader is removed to make an open-headed tree, except in the case of Peach and Plum, where it is left, and the side branches pruned to spurs of one bud each. Old, weak, and neglected trees may be considerably revived and renewed by severe pruning known as "dehorning," (but this practise demands special training and good judgment or it may be ineffective or even result disastrously). The severity of heading-in depends largely upon the vigor of the tree, each branch being cut back several feet.

The Bearing Habits of Bush Fruits

The bearing habits of bush fruits differ widely, the various kinds requiring individual treatment. Blackberries, Raspberries, and Dewberries bear on canes of the preceding year (except in the case of "everbearing" or Fall bearing varieties, which bear fruit on canes of the same season's development). Their pruning consists in (1) removing superfluous shoots from the base of the plant, leaving five to six canes; (2) heading back the shoots when they are 2½ft. to 3ft. high, causing them to become stocky and throw out laterals; (3) heading back these laterals to 12in. to 20in. in length early in the Spring before growth starts; (4) cutting out the canes soon after harvesting the fruit.

The canes of Currants and Gooseberries bear several times, but the first two or three crops are the best. It is therefore desirable each year after the plants have come into bearing to cut one or more of the oldest canes and to encourage new ones. Neglecting the removal of old canes leads to production of small fruit, induces taller growth, and encourages the ravages of the Currant borer. Too vigorous a growth may be headed back.

Grape Vine Pruning Essentials

To understand Grape pruning it is essential to know that: 1, the fruit is borne on wood of the present (growing) season; 2, a vine should bear only a limited number of clusters—30—80, depending upon the variety 3, the bearing wood should be kept near the original trunk or head of the vine, otherwise the fruit will be borne farther and farther from the main trunk.

The current systems of pruning renew to a head or main trunk each year. The trunk is carried up to the top of the trellis and two canes are taken from the top each year, their length varying from six to twelve nodes depending upon the variety. A renewal cane is grown each year near the head, so the old canes may be cut out yearly, thus keeping the fruit always near the trunk. Grape pruning should be done during the Winter or early Spring, before the flow of sap so as to prevent "bleeding." (Commercial Grape growers in the North generally finish pruning before March. C. C. Newman of the South Carolina Exp. station, Bulletin 132, has proved that pruning Muscadine varieties in November gave far better results than those pruned in February.)

Our illustration shows soldiers (and the fruits of their labors) disabled in the service of their country who have been working under the instruction of Captain Frank A. Waugh, Chief Educational Officer at U. S. Army General Hospital No. 16 New Haven, Conn. On page 908 of last week, we gave particulars of this rehabilitation work.

Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich. had on exhibition some new 'Mums, one being December Queen, lemon yellow, a novelty of 1916. The blooms, which were cut Nov. 28, displayed splendid keeping qualities. Victory, a white, a 1917 novelty, cut also on Nov. 28, showed up well. Loyalty, a new variety to be introduced during the coming season, was also exhibited and was highly admired. Geo. D. Ball, Glen Ellyn, showed a vase of Calendulas of wonderful size and form. This is a novelty of Mr. Ball's and is known as Ball's Giant Calendula. The same grower exhibited some vases of late pompon 'Mums that were very attractive on account of their late blooming qualities and excellent form and finish for so late in the season.

American Carnation Society

Meeting and Show in Cleveland

The annual meeting and show of the American Carnation Society will be held in Cleveland, O., with headquarters at the Hollenden, on January 29 and 30, 1919. From present indications, Carnations should be in prime shape for exhibition at that time. The usual medals will be offered by the society and invitations will be extended to other trade organizations to take part, with a view of making the event one of general jubilation following the virtual close of the war. The committee of local florists, of which Carl Hagenberger is chairman, is looking forward to a large attendance and is already formulating plans for handling the big exhibition. J. McL.

Memorial Tree Plan Pleases Public

From all parts of the country comes the word that the idea of planting trees in memory of the soldiers and sailors who fell in the Great War has touched the public heart as the finest of tributes. Already hundreds of letters have been received at Washington by the American Forestry Association, which is fostering the plan. It is suggested from many quarters that national and state highways be planted from end to end. The Jefferson Highway, which starts in Winnipeg and extends to Louisiana and whose slogan is "From Pine to Palm," in Louisiana at least, will plant trees every 40 feet.

Churches in many states have already decided to plant memorial trees for their hero members; some have already done so. City parks, schools, village and town councils and other civic and semi-official organizations are falling in line.

Among prominent people who have endorsed the plan are ex-President Taft, Governors Arthur C. Capper of Kansas, Frederick D. Gardner of Missouri, P. G. Pleasant of Louisiana, Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, H. M. Dorsey of Georgia, James Withycombe of Oregon Simon Bamberger of Utah, Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, Tom C. Rye of Tennessee, J. A. A. Burnquist of Minnesota. Besides these are many state forestry officials, notably C. R. Pettis of New York, Robert S. Conklin of Pennsylvania, J. B. Mowry of Rhode Island, M. B. Pratt of California, Frank William Rane of Massachusetts, F. W. Besley of Maryland, J. E. Barton of Kentucky, and Forrest H. Colby of Maine.

Other prominent people interested are T. Gilbert Pearson, executive head of the National Association of Audubon Societies; Mrs. Ida Evans Arnold, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Chicago; George Coupland, vice-chairman, Nebraska State Council of Defense; Richard Lieber, Secretary Indiana Board of Forests; George E. Kunz, American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, and many others.

Nurserymen and florists should, by virtue of their knowledge of tree life, head this movement in their local spheres.

A new squadron was formed in camp and one of the more experienced men wishing to show his interest asked a rookie how he had enjoyed the calisthenics that morning. "Aw, they didn't give us none of that," said the rookie. "All we had was oatmeal and eggs."—N. Y. Globe.

Nursery Salesman Hero

Bobbink & Atkins, nurserymen of Rutherford, N. J., write us that John C. Latham, who had been for many years one of their traveling salesmen, left their employ when the United States declared war on Germany and joined the New York Seventh Regiment. They also enclose a clipping from the New York Evening World from which the following notes are condensed:

Sergt. John C. Latham and Corporal Alan L. Eggers, of Summit, N. J., were on the front near Venduille making a stand against the Germans in a wood on the opposite side of a field. The Germans had both machine guns and heavy artillery. One of their big shells landed on an American tank and disabled it as it was advancing toward the German lines. The Germans continued to drop shells on and around it so the crew seeing they were sure, sooner or later to be blown to pieces signalled for help.

Latham and Eggers, leaving their comrades to work their machine guns, crawled over the field to the tank, much of the time in full view of the German sharpshooters and machine gunners, who dropped a curtain of bullets to prevent their advance. Arrived safely at the tank they found an officer and two privates wounded and helpless. These they carried to a nearby shell hole, returned to the tank, dismounted a Hotchkiss machine gun which they dragged to the hole, returned again for ammunition, then mounting the gun at the edge of the hole kept the Germans off until darkness fell when they carried the wounded men back to the American lines. Finally they removed the gun and the remaining ammunition. For this deed of heroism General Pershing has awarded them Distinguished Service Crosses, the citation referring to the feat as one of "extraordinary heroism in action."

Clifford H. Jenkins, formerly in the florist business at Suitland, D. C., has been commissioned a lieutenant in the A. E. F. in France. His brother Sergeant Harry Jenkins is also in France. Further details will be found in the Washington, D. C., newsletter.

[The following are extracts from an interesting letter sent by Carl Grant Wilson to his mother, Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, Cleveland, Ohio, well known to EXCHANGE *readers. Mrs. Wilson says that her son, who is a member of the 112th Engineers, Co. D., was in the Argonne drive and in the last drive in Belgium previous to the signing of the armistice; also that she understands that his division will be part of the army of occupation and hence he may not return home for some time. His letter bears the date of Nov. 7.—ED.]*

We have been up against some real action and some stiff living. Today we were relieved and have fallen back to the fringe of civilization, for we certainly have been on and through the frontier of civilization. . . . There are going to be many things that we will appreciate when we get back to the States that we passed over without a thought before. . . . It was a grand old fight for the first three days. Our doughboys of the 37th Division led the drive "over the top." And oh! but they sure do deserve the credit!

We worked under shell fire and followed up behind, repairing roads, filling shell holes and making it possible for ammunition and supplies to pass up and over "No man's land" to our new front line, which was ever going forward.

In some places the Huns would not fight, but retreated, throwing their guns away and breaking pell mell, until we struck the Prussian Guard. They were more obstinate, but still not nearly what they were reputed to be. German prisoners were constantly coming back in groups of 25's, 50's and 100's. . . . Our regiment didn't fight the Germans direct, but we did fight mud and ooze and rain and cold and hunger and weariness beyond description and the Germans on the (censored) are 18 to 20 kilometers farther back than they were 10 days ago. . . . Thanks for the dollar bill. It brought me three cakes of chocolate and some cookies when I was hungry for something sweet. . . .

Who for his country falls."

We greatly regret to learn of the death of Corporal Howard R. Vatow, formerly with the fertilizer department of Darling & Co., Chicago, Ill., who was killed in action on the Argonne field, on Oct 3. He was a member of the Marine Corps.

Why Fruit Area Became Jungle

As an instance of what the war has done to our industries the accompanying picture is of special interest. It was snapped during the Strawberry picking season of 1917, by M. G. Kains, who had charge of fruit growing on a Long Island truck and fruit farm and who used several of the photos taken on this place in his book, the Home Fruit Grower, published this year by the A. T. De La Mare Co., Inc.

Russell H. Young, the man at the left, is a skilled tree surgeon, formerly with the Davey people, but now in the Signal Service in France. Of the other four, the one in the center was a junior in the Pennsylvania State College, the other three graduates of that institution, two in 1916, one in 1917, all of them students of horticulture, and splendid fellows. W. L. W. Hintz, the second man, is now an ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserve forces; Charles Cook, the center man, when last heard from was in a military camp; Wayne B. Gohl, the fourth, joined the aviation forces but died of pneumonia, following influenza, in a Kentucky camp; and Homer D. Zimmerman, who joined the Engineers Corps, died and was buried at sea en route to France.

More than a dozen other young men, including one of Mr. Kains' own sons, who constituted the working forces at this farm, also joined the Colors. The result is that the fruit plantation has become a jungle of weeds and brambles, whereas it produced splendid fruit up to the close of 1917.

Certain Tendencies of the Time?

Abstract from a letter distributed by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York.

Exclusiveness Gone.—Selfishness has not gone out of the world. Progress will continue to be made in the future, as in the past, by individuals or groups of individuals asserting their interests in opposition to the interests of others. But unless present tendencies are being grossly misinterpreted there is going to be a very much changed theory of what those interests are. It must inevitably be so in the circumstance of a keener appreciation of the interdependence of all classes and all nations. The war has broken down every distinction among men except the distinction of ability. As of old common danger has been a great leveler, and the leveling has not been all on one side. If the powerful and self-satisfied have been shaken down so also have the weak and the disgruntled been shaken up. They have approached to a better understanding of viewpoints and many errors of judgment and feeling have been corrected. This is not less true of nations than of individuals or groups, and some of the earlier plans made in hot blood for economic independence after the war are now being slipped into the waste basket as gracefully as possible. Exclusiveness does not set well, either with the present temper of mankind or with the growing spirit of service in which progressive nations are preparing themselves for the future.

Cooperation among all classes and nations there must be if we are to escape the absolute ruin of civilization. * * * Goods will be bought and sold upon fair terms and with equal opportunities to all, but service rather than profits will be the compelling motive behind every enlightened enterprise.

Despite the efforts of a very few persons, who are unable to grasp anything except the advantage of the moment, to arrest it, the same tendency is to be seen in the economy of the individual nation. Interests long hostile through want of understanding are drawing toward arrangements by which their divergent lines of thought will be brought together. That there is a necessary hostility between government and business, for example, or between capital and labor, is a misconception that is gradually breaking down before the idea of cooperation.

These tendencies—the desire for information, the promotion of education, the wish to serve, the willingness to cooperate—are at the foundation of such progress as the world will make during the long time it is at the task of rehabilitating itself and attaining a solid footing again. They are running with the currents of constructive thought in every country. No plan or no part of a plant into which a just estimate of their importance does not enter will make much headway during these coming years.

Nursery Dept.—Ornamental Fruiting Plants

(Washington Thorn), Cratægus Crus-galli (Cockspur Thorn) and Cratægus Carrieri, the fruits of which, if unmolested by the birds, persist well into the month of February.

The "Evergreen" or "Fire" Thorn (Cratægus pyracantha) is a splendid decorative plant at this time, its clusters of orange red berries standing out well against the dense foliage. Florist growers might well add this to their list as a real Christmas plant. It would not be a hard matter to grow a number of medium sized plants of it in pots or tubs so that they might be more available for general use for the Thanksgiving and Christmas trade.

The beauty of the many forms of Pyrus (Crab Apple) at this season of the year is apparent when we view the fruit display of Pyrus Sargenti, Pyrus Toringo, Pyrus aucuparia and other species and hybrids. The highest value of them lies in their use for mass plantings and solitaires where as a Spring, Fall and Winter attractions they call forth much admiration.

In the Cotoneaster group we have rare beauty in foliage and fruit which ought to bring them into more prominence. Perhaps, because they are rather difficult to transplant, is the reason for their rarity. The trailing and low growing kinds, like Cotoneaster prostrata, horizontalis, buxifolia and microphylla are exceedingly pretty in early Winter with the deep red berries nestling thickly amongst the box like leaves of the plants. The rock garden in Winter would be incomplete without them. Of the more high and upright growing kinds, Cotoneaster Simonsi frigida and divaricata are handsome for bold groups in plantings—the cut sprays, too, make good decorative material for interior use.

Two plants that force attention on us at this time of the year are the American and Japanese Bittersweet—Celastrus scandens and Celastrus articulatus. No one seeing them in Summer would suppose they could clothe themselves as they do with such beauty. The yellow capsule or outside covering of the fruits combine well with the red coated seeds revealed within. Even after the seeds fall out, the bright color of the capsule makes it highly useful for Winter decoration.

While dealing with capsular fruited plants, we should not forget to mention Euonymus atropurpureus, Bungeanus and vegetus or Carrieri. Being a variety of Euonymous radicans, the latter is evergreen even in the North and the clusters of orange colored fruits are quite persistent. Small, well berried plants of this would, we believe, find a ready sale for interior use as well as for planting out.

The old fashioned "Snowberries" (Symphoricarpos racemosus and S. vulgaris) are both showy at this time; the white fruits of the former contrasting well with the red color of vulgaris, which maintains its display practically the whole Winter through and shows up especially well against the white of Winter snows.

For persistency of berry none can excel the Barberries. The extremely spiny character of the branches is a decided setback to a general use of them in florist work, perhaps, but in the wider field of usefulness for Winter effects in the landscape they will surely hold their place. Plants of B. Thunbergii grown as specimens in the full sunlight (for this is really the best way to see their full worth) are now aglow with coral red fruits which invariably remain on the plants till after they have again clothed themselves with leaf in the Spring. Other highly ornamental ones in the group are Berberis vulgaris, Sieboldii and Sinensis, all of which bear a profusion of red, scarlet or crimson fruits.

Several of the Viburnums are valued for their berry display in the Fall. There are only a few, however, which retain the fruit well into the Winter. These are Viburnum opulus (High bush Cranberry). V. Wrightii and V. dilitatum. Of the three, the former keeps its fruits longest, the blood red berries retaining the color even after severe freezings have somewhat shriveled them.

There are two unique berry bearing vines which should not be overlooked in these notes. One, the "Matrimony Vine" (Lycium chinensis) with scarlet fruits; the other, Vitis heterophylla, with clusters of pale blue berries, the long sprays of which would be just the thing for the "Blue Room." The usual preponderant crop of berries borne by the Matrimony Vine is (until the end of November) almost concealed by its leafage which, after the frost has caused to fall or shrivel, reveals the long, slender canes laden with the red fruits. The berry is just a little too soft and yielding for florist decoration; hence, it must serve its original purpose to brighten porch, arbor and embankments.

One of the best berry bearing plants for indoor use in winter is Aucuba japonica. We say this because it seems to stand the variable temperature and other hard usages of a dwelling better than most plants we know. It must be remembered that the Aucubas are diœcious, there being fruit bearing and non-fruit bearing ones; this is easily determined when the plants are in flower. Like the English Holly, the ban on imports will also affect this plant coming to us from Europe where, in the past, the growers selected and prepared by hand fertilization the berry bearing kinds for the American trade.

Mr. Wanamaker says:

"A large number of people have been taken out of the big stores. The men have enlisted. The women have gone into Red Cross work and nursing.

"We are able to fill some of their places with improved cash registers. This frees very many persons for war work."

Mr. Wanamaker's statement that cash registers save labor, is based upon critical investigation and upon experience with N. C. R. Equipment extending over many years.

His recognition of the labor-saving qualities of modern National Cash Registers is plainly shown by a contract he has just placed for nearly $100,000.00 worth of machines. This order calls for 100 of our latest model clerk-wrap registers. It is the largest single order ever placed with us for one store.

The high character of Mr. Wanamaker's stores, the careful tests made by his executives, and the size of his orders, combine to make his personal endorsement extremely important to other merchants struggling with the present-day shortage of help.

Henry Penn's Xmas Message

WE are going to have the biggest Christmas business the floral world has ever seen, for two reasons: Optimism and Condition of mind. Everybody will want to "Say It With Flowers" as never before, and the new flower-buyers have learnt the lesson of sentiment plus beauty, a combination hard to beat and which can only be expressed with flowers and plants.

Yours for bigger business, Penn The Florist

A VERITABLE crystal palace of flowers is the Penn salesroom, the daily scene of the greatest activity in the Boston retail flower trade, the tiled floor in soft buff-colored stone and walls of Ivory Caen stone. In the rear is the crowning scenic feature of all—"The Fountain Court." In the center spurts a wonderful Italian fountain, the work of a Boston sculptor. The Court is surrounded by eight marble pillars and each top with an ornamental frieze, while above is a steel and leaded glass ceiling which lights the Court day and night, for at night there are electric fixtures sculptured and modeled by a famous Italian artist in the purest of alabaster marble above the ground glass to take the place of the sun.

Merry Christmas

"There's a Reason for It"

On Christmas Advertising

THE great outstanding feature of this Christmas is Peace—the peace with victory that we have looked forward to with eager eyes and which seemed so wonderful when it came that we hardly dared to believe that our hopes had been realized. Peace—and "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Never has the world seemed nearer to the possibility of getting started on that road.

This, then, will be the keynote of our Christmas message; this and the welcome to our soldiers and sailors, who have made this peace possible, for we may hope to have the privilege of welcoming at least quite a few thousands of them.

But to come down to the practical application of these thoughts: It may be said that perhaps never before at Christmas time was there more need for the florist to advertise. Under the stress of war work people's minds have become diverted from their accustomed channels; now that the pressure as relieved they are beginning to readjust themselves. Christmas is here and people are in a gift-giving mood; one may almost predict that the giving of gifts will be more widely practiced than it has been for many years, for "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

However, many things that were available as gifts in former years will be difficult to obtain this year, or will be prohibitive in price to the average man. Why not then call his attention to the availability of flowers and plants, in which selections may be made that will meet all purses and tastes, from the few simple flowers or the humble plant to the most elaborate basket or the rarest and most expensive cut blooms on the market?

To many people flowers and plants do not suggest themselves as suitable gifts. It is up to the florist, in his advertising, vividly and appealingly to bring out their appropriateness to the season, an appropriateness which lies not only in their delicacy and beauty, but also in the fact that they are the symbols of peace, and are associated with nearly all the pleasant and most tender memories of life. Thus, if your customer is not an habitual flower buyer and you have induced him or her to buy flowers or plants for Christmas gifts, you will, if you give him or her satisfactory service, have made another permanent customer, whose patronage will be welcome in "leaner" times. In this your Christmas advertising will not only bring you immediate returns, but it will be building for the future. Having present conditions in mind, therefore, it is well in your advertising to appeal to that class, which, before now, had little money to spend for so-called luxuries; referring, of course, to the wage earners. Show them the desirability of flowers and plants for Christmas and they will want them all the year around.

It is obvious that the same principles that underlie all effective advertising are also applicable to Christmas advertising. The florist business, almost more than any other, is based on sentiment; sentiment should therefore be the basis for all effective advertisement of flowers. This means, of course, that the advertisement must be warm and human, attracting attention, compelling and holding interest and creating desire, which culminates in the decision to buy.

A feature that it would be well to emphasize is the value of flowers for decorating the Christmas table and the home generally. There is an immense field here for the florist which is not sufficiently cultivated. There are, undoubtedly, thousands and thousands of homes which are never brightened from one year's end to the next by a flower or plant or sprig of green. Introduce flowers into homes like these at Christmas, by arousing the desire to make the Christmas table more attractive, and you are building for future business as well. "Say It with Flowers," and the outward expression will produce the inward grace; the greater contentment, the readier sympathy and understanding, the keener appreciation of all the fine things of life.

And think of the vast possibilities that lie in F. T. D. business! With thousands of our soldiers and sailors in camps and overseas, with great numbers of people in distant cities away from home, or with friends widely separated, what better way can be found than "To say a Merry Christmas with flowers?"

The question of just how far the matter of price should be emphasized in advertisements is a much discussed one. A correct decision on this point would seem to rest on a knowledge of the conditions surrounding each particular case. People who buy flowers or plants for Christmas do so because flowers or plants for them fittingly express the Christmas spirit; such customers are not hunting for bargains.

Do not hesitate to charge a fair (not an exorbitant) price for your goods, as people expect the price of flowers to be higher perhaps than ever before and "the laborer is worthy of his hire." If customers complain of high prices it is not necessary that you should apologize. Say frankly but tactfully and courteously that you believe the customer has faith in your reliability, otherwise he would not patronize you, and that you are selling the goods at the lowest price consistent with a fair return to you. It is not frequently that people object to paying what appears a high price, if the stock is first class; it is rather that they object to a high price for inferior or deteriorating stock, which really is dear at any price. It is hardly necessary to add, of course, that advertising must be not only sales compelling but honest as well and that it must be backed up by courteous, prompt and efficient service and honest values.

Local and Cooperative Advertising

Of advertising there are many kinds: from the "pennywise to pound foolish." The florist who will put the same line of talk into his ad that he would make to the customer in person cannot go far wrong; advertise naturally as you would talk naturally. Use your local papers; pay for both a reading notice and a display ad. In the smaller towns and cities a judicious and occasional gift of a few cut flowers to the editor will seldom prove a poor investment. In an experience of nearly forty years the writer has rarely put out advertising effort which did not bring in a paying return. We are speaking of local advertising. When it comes to obtaining publicity in the larger cities and where competition is more keen the proposition then assumes complexity and calls for more thought, more attention and even expert advice.

Cooperative advertising, wherein all the florists of the community join in one large display ad. is, without doubt, one of the most effective ways in which to obtain publicity, provided you tell the public just what is obtainable. In this case we believe it would be the correct thing to quote definite prices, the advertisers agreeing on a definite scale. It will strengthen the ad. if in a sentence or two, comparison is made between the cost and value of flowers as a Christmas gift as against many articles which do not carry the sentiment that flowers do. Also perhaps a quotation or two as to the approximate cost of furnishing the cut flowers and plants for the Christmas dinner table, a room decoration, or a family dance would be in order.

Cones from our evergreens are being placed to many good uses by enterprising retailers. Cones of Pseudo-Larix Kæmpferi

The subject of our illus. (p. 955) shows a group of cones of Pseudo-Larix Kæmpferi, the false but often called Chinese or Golden Larch, the name being derived from the beautiful golden yellow coloring assumed by the leaves in the Fall. It is distinguishable from the European Larches by the staminate flowers which are stalked and clustered; also by the cones, with their deciduous scales. When young, cones are green, turning to a light reddish brown at maturity. They are inclined to be conical, or ovate in shape, from 2in. to 3in. long, and about 1½in. broad, with scales arranged somewhat in rosette fashion. The deciduous character of the scales calls to mind an analogy and characteristic of the Fir family. The scales of the cones of Pseudo-Larix Kaempferi are cordate, or heart-shaped at the base and slightly emarginate at the apex. Within the scales are the considerably smaller bracts and twin seeds. J. F. J.

Some F. T. D. Business

In the past month of October, Max Schling, Inc., of New York transmitted 148 orders, amounting to $1179, to F. T. D. members in other cities. For the three days ending Dec. 9, the same firm mailed out 77 orders for Christmas delivery to F. T. D. members.

For the general benefit of the Association, we will be glad to place on record F. T. D. transmittals by other retailers, whether in small or large numbers.

Last week, Friday to Sunday, in particularly elaborate orders, Max Schling, Inc., reports utilizing over 5000 orchids, 480 sprays of the different varieties of Oncidium, 600 American Beauty Roses, 8000 Violets, 11,000 Roses, 3000 Lily of the Valley, 2500 white Carnations and 122 dozen Chrysanthemums.

Advertising for 1919 to be the Greatest in Our History

America, the pivot of the world today, will enjoy the greatest prosperity in her history. All lines will soon be reorganized to meet current demands after our boys are demobilized and also during the transaction. Advertising men in all branches of industry are preparing campaigns which will involve greater outlays than at any time in the history of the business world.

Some will wonder what it's all about. Why spend money for that which people demand? Well, because of competition for this new business which will be occasioned by this new state of affairs caused by the war and its needs. And the men of affairs understand what it means to create and hold good will with product that will merit it, and the need of expending money for a good live campaign to create this new business they are going after.

Next time you peruse your magazine or paper take notice of this particular condition and then see whether or not it would be good business for our Florists' Publicity Campaign to go on to a still greater scope. If we could accomplish the results we did in a war year, what may we expect in the year 1919, the greatest year we will have for some time to come. It is up to us to take advantage of the past year by interesting all connected with flowers to participate in the campaign for 1919.

Nothing we can do to help future prospects will yield as much good as this part of our work and eventually it will prove itself.

So when the call for funds arises, do your part and you will be well repaid for your efforts.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

The Manual of Floral Designing

By W. Cleaver Harry — Ready for Delivery January 1st, 1918

TO those who have been looking for a practical textbook on the art of floral designing we offer the first one ever published on this subject. As trained help is scarce, every retailer who is now passing through difficulties in instructing new help can transfer this burden of instruction by providing his beginners with a copy of The Manual of Floral Designing.

This textbook has been compiled by an authority —one who has spent many years at the retailers' make-up table and who understands thoroughly the principles which underlie the art of arrangement.

CONTENTS

Chapter I. Wire Frames and Mossing.—Text Book and Practical Experience both Necessary—Wire Frames—Mossing Pillow Frame.

Chapter II. Pillows.—The Pillow—The Right Beginning—How to Stem Hardy Ferns; to Cover Frames; Prepare Stock—Stemming Flowers for Design—Outlining; the Steps from the Beginning to the Finished Design Explained—The Garland Pillow.

Chapter III. Wreaths.—Several Kinds Available—The Decorated Wreath—The Solid Wreath—The Shower Wreath—Use the Album of Designs to make a Better Sale.

Chapter IV. Emblems.—Emblems—Choice of Methods—Amusing Designs Wanted by Customers—Keep your Poise—Don't Take the Fault-finder Too Seriously.

Chapter V. Baskets.—Baskets as Funeral Designs—Only Three Representative Designs in Making Up—Advantages of Baskets—Filling Various Receptacles.

Chapter VI. Funeral Sprays.—The Funeral Spray—The Secret of Artistic Results—Faults to be Avoided—Getting the Material Ready—Constructing the Spray—The Final Touches—A Correct Ribbon Bow.

Chapter VII. Casket Covers and Palls.—Casket Cover—Pall.

Chapter VIII. Table Decorations.—Table Decorations—The Influence of the Prevailing Mode is Shown in Milady's Selection of Flowers for the Dinner Table. A forecast of Catchy Combinations that Conform with the Season.

Chapter IX. Wedding Bouquets.—Wedding Bouquets—Characteristics of a Good Wedding Bouquet—Learning How to Produce it—The Forearm Shower—Always Deliver Ahead of Time—Taking the Order.

Chapter X. Corsage Bouquets and Boutonnieres.—Corsage Bouquets—A Review of Best, Easiest and Quickest Methods Used by the Store Artist. Showing the Importance of Every Detail—How to Make a Correct Boutonniere.

Chapter XI. Wedding Decorations.—Materials in General Use and How to Use Them—Decorative Properties—The Prie-dieu, the Gates and Canopy—Objective Points to Cover in Both Church and Home.

Chapter XII. Miscellaneous Decorations in Hotel and Private Home.—The Modern Interior Calls for Relief Decoration, Except Where a Transformation is Required—A Lesson on Table Decorating, Defining the Three Kinds, and Explaining the Method of Doing the Work.

THE VERY SMALL COST OF AN ANNUAL ADVERTISEMENT IN THESE COLUMNS IS MORE THAN LIKELY TO BE MANY TIMES REPAID YOU.

What is Your Delivery Cost?

J. A. Neal, florist, of Toronto, is quoted in the current newsletter as saying that his cost of delivery per parcel is from 20c. to 25c. This seems large and especially on small orders might easily cover most of the profit. Mr. Neal's statement again brings up strikingly the necessity of keeping accurate cost records. We should be glad to hear from other retailers on this subject, through the columns of THE EXCHANGE.

A Good Idea: Have You Adopted It?

A telephone booth recently put in at the florist store of Fred Haupt, Louisville, Ky., has proved a great convenience in handling telephone orders when there are customers in the store. It is often advisable to quote a certain price to a person who can afford to pay, such a price to cover the best quality of stock; whereas in the case of a person with more modest income, a lower price may be given, with of course, a difference in quality. To discuss the matter so that the casual customer cannot hear what you are saying avoids a misinterpretation of the facts. The quiet of the booth also aids concentration and saves time and energy in helping you to hear what is being said. O. V. N. S.

Application Form for Open Account

We show a blank form which has been kindly sent us by Henry Penn of Boston, which he has gotten up to be filled out by those desiring to open accounts with him. Mr. Penn says he finds this form most simple and right to the point and he will be very glad to have any florist who so desires make use of it. We have reproduced the form in life size, it having been designed evidently to fit in the ordinary commercial envelope without folding. These forms when filled in should be carefully filed in a space by themselves and when the account goes on the ledger there might be inserted with it a key reference to show the bookkeeper at a glance the standing of the applicant and the amount of credit to be extended.

In all business which is conducted right up to date, it is customary to obtain the standing of any person desirous of opening a credit account and, if reference to the mercantile agencies, as Dun's or Bradstreet's, is not available or perhaps not sufficiently satisfactory, this form, or something similar to it, should be used. If you are asked to give credit it is right and proper you should know all about the party asking the accommodation. If the latter shows indignation at being requested to furnish credit reference you will be easily rid of a patronage which otherwise might cost you dearly. Much of the old feeling persists, especially among men new in business, that it is bad form to ask for credit reference, but modern business has no sympathy with any but business principles.

Messages of Flowers
—OR—
THEIR FLORAL CODE AND DICTIONARY
By GEORGE H. O'NEILL

Lovers of flowers and their lore will find a treasure house in this interesting and comprehensive little manual. A dictionary of flowers covers more than thirty pages, giving the common names, in alphabetical order, of hundreds of flowers; each followed by the meaning of the flower and its botanical name. In the section "Messages of Flowers," the idea of the message to be conveyed by a flower is condensed into a single word, and the list of these words is arranged alphabetically. Opposite each word is placed the name of the proper flower and beneath appears the expanded message. A "Floral Calendar" gives the name of the flower appropriate for each month of the year, with its meaning, its botanical name, and a bit of verse about it. The mythology of flowers, with many interesting facts about them in modern life, fills nearly twenty pages, taking in alphabetical order thirty or more of the best known blooms. An explanation of the arranging of bouquets to make them carry messages fills another section, and advice about caring for cut flowers and a score of poems and quotations from famous poets about flowers complete the pages of this handy little manual of flower language. Of invaluable assistance to florists as a ready reference guide and as an instructive manual to amateur gardeners and lovers of flowers.

Can be sold by retailers, a 25c copy for the customer's own use and a $1.00 copy for the lady who is to receive the flowers.

Cloth, cover embossed in gold, 144 pages, $1.00

The Rose supply is somewhat short and is snapped up quickly as soon as it reaches the market. The same is true of Carnations. They, together with everything else in the market, are bringing top prices. Poinsettias are beginning to come into the wholesale houses and are proving a welcome addition. Easter Lilies bring good prices. Callas sell well. Snapdragons are cleaning up as fast as they come in. Violets, both single and double, find a ready sale. Both orchids and Valley now meet with a good demand and clean up readily. Stevia is proving good property. The few large and the few medium Mums that come into the market meet with a good demand and at high prices, too. Other offerings are Sweet Peas, baby Primrose, Forgetmenot and Wallflower.

Notes

L. K. Kresken has been elected a director of the Young Men's Blaine Club, winning over several politicians who were rival candidates.

C. E. Critchell is confined to his home, under his physician's orders, because of a mild touch of influenza.

George Berner, of C. E. Critchell's force, is at home taking care of his wife and two children, all of whom have the influenza.

H. W. Sheppard has purchased the Hill Floral Co.'s store and will operate it under his name for the present. He is a live wire and will make good in his venture.

Mike Hanks, who had been with Julius Baer for years, and Harry O. Roth have opened the Paradise Floral Shop, at 5 W. Seventh st. Their choice of location is a good one and with their experience and ability they will undoubtedly make good.

Ed. Ellison, an old time florist of this city, died on the first of this month. His only surviving relatives are Mary Ellison, a sister, living in England, and nephews and nieces living in this city and Kingston, N. Y. In his day he had quite a reputation for growing La France Roses.

Recent visitors were Jos. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Eric Buchholz, proprietor of the Miller Greenhouses, Muncie, Ind.; and Sam Seligman. TEDDY.

Cleveland, O.

Stock is extremely scarce, many retailers reporting the continued refusal of orders on that account. Continued dark weather has seriously retarded Roses and Carnations but with the coming of favorable growing conditions, larger quantities of these flowers will be forced into the market. Easter Lilies continue scarce, few Callas are being sent in. Excellent Stevia is being offered and helps out substantially, now that the supply of greens is short. American Beauty is of excellent quality but rather weak in supply. Violets are moving with more freedom; likewise miniature Roses and orchids, due to the returning popularity of corsage bouquets.

During the week ending Dec. 7, business was materially curtailed by the absence of sufficient stock to fill orders, the wholesale market clearing up very early each day. Many orders, those from out of town particularly, have had to be refused. There is no lack of business; it is a question of stock. Liberal quantities of Boxwood, Mexican Ivy and Galax are being used to relieve the situation.

With favorable growing conditions there will be a normal supply of Roses, Carnations, Poinsettias and Stevias in this market. Owing to the fact that many retailers who formerly produced part of their stock have closed their greenhouses for the Winter and are operating their stores only, the demand will be much in excess of the supply and prices consequently will be advanced. This condition will undoubtedly prevail throughout the entire Winter.

Mainly Personal

The trade here is looking forward to the Carnation convention, which will take place Jan. 29 and 30, 1919, and further details of which will be found in our wide measure columns, this issue.

William M. Humm, of Oberlin, Ohio, was in Cleveland on Dec. 6, disposing of his surplus stock of Primroses, which are of unusually good quality.

C. A. Ringler, of Wellington, Ohio, paid a recent visit to the market, purchasing supplies for his increasing holiday trade.

Albert Hart, formerly a member of the firm of Hart Bros., which was dissolved upon the death of the senior member, has opened a beautifully appointed store in Lakewood, Cleveland's thriving west side suburb.

L. A. Matthews, formerly with Wieland & Risch, Chicago, has taken a position at the J. M. Gasser Co.'s retail store.

Don. L. Johnston, who recently purchased the business of the late A. T. Pollard, Canton, Ohio, called at the market on Dec. 6, forming the acquaintance of the wholesalers and purchasing necessary supplies.

Fred G. Geltz, of Canton, Ohio, made a brief call at the market on Dec. 7, on his return from Mentor, Ohio, where he had gone to secure his supply of plants for Christmas.

Other trade visitors were: H. A. Cook, Oberlin, Ohio; C. C. Beingesser, Lorain, Ohio; Frank Adgate, Warren, Ohio, and R. E. Blackshaw, of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind. J. McL.

St. Paul, Minn.

With the continued dull weather all classes of cut stock are scarce, the supply being far below the demand, and shipped in stock only arriving in small lots. Prices are still ruling high; in fact, Christmas prices are already given for most of the stock. Roses in St. Paul are extremely scarce, and growers are asking from 12c. to 20c. Carnations range from 5c. to 8c. 'Mums are about finished; taking the season in general they have been a profitable crop, realizing prices never before known in the trade. Pompons that in previous years sold for 35c. have gone as high as 75c. a bunch; similar high figures were asked for the regular large 'Mums.

Everyone is looking ahead to the holiday season and is trying to snap up stock in advance; the outlook is that stock will be scarce. Quantities of Cyclamen have been grown, but many of the growers are already oversold. Primulas are also extremely scarce.

Apparently there will be a considerable bulb shortage in January, as many growers received only part of the bulbs ordered, and at such a late date that it will be impossible to have them much earlier than February.

O. R. Eckhardt is spending the week end visiting the Chicago and Iowa growers. Out of town orders with this firm are heavy.

Gus Colberg, recently employed in war work at Stillwater, is now connected with L. L. May, florist. The greenhouses of this firm are closed for the Winter. E. C. T.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

The market last week showed little change from those of November. Business since Thanksgiving has been snappy, with a fine demand, and barely enough flowers to go around. Funeral work has moved the bulk of the stock. There has been an excellent counter trade, and miscellaneous demand including flowers for the sick, and entertainments for prenuptials, etc. The advance demand for Christmas artificial goods, such as wreaths of Immortelles, Ruscus and Heather, has been more than gratifying, and even orders for cut flowers are coming into the local flower shops weeks ahead of schedule. Florists thus have an idea of how the trade will go this year, so can get their orders placed with wholesalers without so much guess work. F. T. D. orders from out of town are numerous for Christmas delivery, and local florists are sending many orders for this holiday to different parts of the country.

Stock of all kinds is scarce. Carnations are at a premium, and the price has advanced over those of Thanksgiving from $1.25 to $1.50 per doz. Sunburst, Ophelia, Shawyer and Russell are the most obtainable Roses but are none too plentiful. Other varieties are short, especially those in red. A few Easter Lilies are to be had at $3.50 per doz. Other offerings are a few Snapdragons, Sweet Peas, Single Violets, Lily of the Valley and Stevia, the last helping out the scarcity of greens of all kinds. Orchids, in all seasonable varieties are plentiful, but these help out only in the higher class of trade. Blooming plants are meeting the demand better than cut stock. Some handsome Azaleas arrived last week. Cincinnati and Lorraine Begonias, extra fine Cyclamen, Primroses and a few Christmas Peppers and Poinsettias are being offered. There are a few Easter Lily plants also. It is generally believed there will be a satisfactory supply of blooming plants for Christmas. Reports are circulated that no Holly will be available and that Mistletoe, and other Christmas greens will be scarce.

The influenza epidemic has again put the closing ban in partial force. Schools are closed and persons visiting theatres, movies, churches and stores are obliged to wear masks. Persons employed in flower stores are also ordered to wear masks, but so far, this order has not injured business. Few deaths are reported thus far.

November Business

November receipts were larger than for any previous November. Through the whole month business was more than brisk. Prices advanced in keeping with the cost of production, so both retailer and wholesaler had a chance to make a fair profit. During the latter part of the month it was impossible to secure enough flowers with which to meet this demand. Had it not been for the scarcity of cut flowers receipts for the month would have been much greater. Especially was this tree of the Thanksgiving holiday. However, with conditions daily improving, war restrictions being removed and labor becoming more plentiful, it is hoped production will increase, and prices kept within the reach of everyone to the benefit of both the public, and the trade.

News Jottings

Window decorations in the various flower shops foretell the nearness of the Christmas holidays. The Flick Floral Co. has an attractive window of wreaths and basket novelties for which it reports an excellent demand.

The first Azaleas of the season were displayed in Lanternier and Co.'s window last week—full flowered and in excellent condition.

The New Haven Floral Co. will have an exceptionally good line of blooming plants for Christmas, judging by the quality of plants coming to their retail store. Fine Cincinnati Begonias attract attention and buyers.

The range of W. J. and M. S. Vesey suggests an impossibility for a scarcity of Christmas stock. The six houses of orchids are in prime condition. Most of the varieties are flowering now, so an excellent crop is expected for the holidays. Their Rose crop is in splendid condition. D. B.

St. Louis, Mo.

The amount of funeral work has been unprecedented, causing an extraordinary demand for flowers. It is simply a matter of paying the price demanded. "Do you want them" is asked by the wholesaler. If you do not then the flowers are laid on someone else's pile and that ends it.

Some of the growers have not grown the amount of stock they did last year, owing to the fuel shortage. Carnations at the time of writing are quoted at $15 per 100; short stemmed Roses $8 to $10; Russells from $2 to $6 per doz.; Violets at $2 per 100; and Sweet Peas $3 per 100. Ferns bring $4 per 1000, and will shortly go to $5; and greens of all kinds have advanced in price. Lycopodium is advertised at $12 per crate, and Holly at $6 per case, but it is impossible to get a date as to the certainty of delivery as congestion on the road is liable to take place any time. The plant men have virtually everything sold and have to refuse orders. The growers report that in about 10 days quite a little bulbous stock will arrive and somewhat relieve the situation.

The prospects for Christmas are not causing any worry to the wholesaler, but the retailer is naturally asking: "If Carnations are $15 a hundred on Dec. 5, what will they be by Dec. 23." As for the growers, they are happy; they don't care how long these prices keep up, but there will be a change; when, time only can tell.

About Town

Miss M. Marguerite Eggling, one of the pioneer women florists of St. Louis and as a designer having few equals, has been very busy, she and her five women being engaged in turning out considerable funeral work. She complained of the scarcity of flowers and the fact that high prices caused complaint from her customers.

C. C. May will build two houses in the Spring, 32ft. x 25ft. These will be planted in Carnations.

Werner Bros. have started cutting Carnations; also some really good Roses. This stock is handled by the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co.'s counters are emptied shortly after the stock arrives. Frank Windler and A. Gurny, his assistant, are kept busy listening to complaints of high prices. They are now wearing ear muffs; these, of course, are only used at the telephone.

The St. Louis Seed Co. is now fully supplied with its Christmas novelties. This firm handles some of the finest Holly and Mistletoe brought to this city.

The F. C. Weber store, on Olive st. is always tastefully decorated, and the show windows are much admired by people traveling on the passing surface cars. F. C. Weber, Jr., is an active member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and the Retailers' Association.

The County Growers' Association met on Wednesday evening, Dec. 4, at the Ten Mile House. There was only a small attendance. Conditions at the market were discussed.

On Thursday, Dec. 12, the meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was to have been held, but was postponed because of the influenza ban, which has prohibited all gatherings. The schools are also to be closed until after the New Year.

L. Baumann, landscape architect, believes that now that the war is over, construction will soon begin, and business in his line will be greatly extended.

The Bourdet Floral Co., which has over 50,000ft. of glass devoted to the saving of decorative and blooming plants has almost entirely sold out for the holiday trade. Among other interesting things were noted entire benches devoted to Jerusalem Cherries, which were in full bloom.

A visit to the Blossom Shop found Mrs. W. C. McClure in full charge, with everything moving briskly. W.

Denver, Col.

Cut flowers of all kinds are still scarce on this market and the retail stores clean up everything in sight by noon each day. On Friday, Dec. 6, the retail men advanced the price of Carnations to $2 per doz. Some of the stores are selling Christmas wreaths and plant baskets ready for funerals.

The Central Floral Co. will be the name of a new flower store to open on 15th. Jacob Boxer, the manager, who has been with the New York Floral Co., for a number of years and has made a number of friends among the flower buyers of this city, is sure to make his new venture a success.

Mr. Page has sold his store and greenhouses, The Bright Spot, to Mr. Smith. This is a new line of business for the latter, but with the assistance of Mr. Damforth, who is in charge of the store, everything is expected to go along as usual.

Mrs. D. S. Grimes is getting along nicely after being sick for several weeks with the flu.

The trade was sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Shilling, wife of R. Shilling, of the Park Floral Co. Sympathy is also extended to Mr. Bush of D. & C., the funeral of whose wife took place on Dec. 2.

Mr. Lengenfelder and Mr. Harlow went gunning at Orchard, Col., where they spend the week end. They returned with 10 rabbits.

Graul Bros. are cutting good stock of the new Rose Columbia. C. F. E.

Foreign Trade Opportunities

The Dept. of Commerce, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington, D. C., reports as follows:

27734.—Supplementing foreign trade opportunity No. 26774, a Belgian, temporarily in the Netherlands, desires an agency for the sale of fertilizers in Belgium, Holland, and northern France.

There have been a number of social functions and some of the florists have been exceedingly busy with decorations. It is evident that with the increase in social activities the florists will see the return of the decorating work, which has been a minus quantity since the beginning of the war. With the resumption of this business, however, comes the announcement from the Fuel Controller that the country clubs must close on Dec. 14, and this may act as a setback.

There will be a good stock of Roses for Christmas, as well as Cyclamen, Primulas, Poinsettias, etc. At present the Cyclamen look a little backward but it is expected that the next few days will make a big difference.

The sales of potted plants for Christmas are on the increase. One florist stated that this branch has grown to such an extent that it now made up 75 per cent. of his Christmas business.

Retail prices are as follows: Roses (except American Beauty) run from $3.50 to $10; the pink are $7 and $7.55; the red $5 to $10. Carnations run at $2, $3 and $4. Violets are $1.50 per bunch of 25. Orchids are $7, $9 and $12. American Beauty Roses bring $8 to $24. Potted plants are more reasonable and florists are going in strong for them this Winter. Cyclamen is in great demand. Put up in baskets, it sells at from $3 to $7.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Neal have closed up their Summer house at their farm and have moved back to the city. Before returning they spent a week in Buffalo, making the trip by motor car.

When THE EXCHANGE correspondent informed George Geraghty of Dunlop's that the restriction on basket importation had been removed, he immediately arranged to make a buying trip to Chicago. J. J. Higgins will accompany him and they will visit the important houses in that city. It is not expected that supplies of baskets will be delivered in time for Christmas trade; hence many of the florists are improvising baskets. A pail on a stand, or a toy tub, etc., mounted on a stand and covered with cretonne, make a satisfactory substitute.

Mrs. Hogg is in charge of the Fernery during the enforced absence of Miss Cotterill.

J. A. Hart, of the King Construction Co., greenhouse manufacturers, will succeed R. W. King as manager.

John Slichter & Sons, 162 Simpson ave., have built a front on their greenhouse to take care of the retail trade.

Toronto florists are looking into the question of cost of doing business, delivery of flowers, etc. J. A. Neal keeps an accurate record of his motor trucks and states that the cost of delivery per parcel is from 20c. to 25c.

H. G. Dillemuth is showing particularly fine Poinsettias grown in his own greenhouses.

Restrictions have been removed on the use of power for window lighting and the florists are taking advantage of the order to prepare attractive displays.

Wholesale Market and News of the City

The Market

Dec. 10.—A short supply, a fair demand and continued high and firm prices are the pronounced features of the wholesale cut flower market this week up to this writing.

The arrivals of American Beauty Roses are a little larger and the demand fair. Special grade blooms are selling at from 25c. to 75c. each and the other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses are in short suply. The demand is sufficient to easily absorb these at from 8c. to 50c. each for top grade blooms, and 4c. to 6c. each for No. 2 grade blooms.

Carnations are in small supply, and they are moving well at from 6c. to 8c. each, with an occasional sale at 10c. for extra choice blooms.

The arrivals of Cattleya orchids are moderate and the demand not over active at from about 30c. to 75c. each. Lily of the Valley is in medium supply and moving fairly well at about $8 per 100 for the best blooms. White Lilies are in large supply but of the pink very few are seen; the former are selling rather slowly at from $15 to $20 per 100, and the latter at $4 to $10.

The supply both of large flowered and of bunch 'Mums is very meagre and is easily disposed of at quoted prices. The arrivals of Violets, both single and double, are comparatively trifling, and the demand absorbs all of those of good quality at quoted prices, the lower prices being mostly for those which are held over. Few Sweet Peas, Pansies, Mignonette, Calendulas or Antirrhinums are arriving, and what is of good quality is quickly absorbed. There is very little Wallflower.

Of the tender greens Smilax is in short supply, and the arrivals of the others are quite sufficient to go with the small supply of flowers.

Club Election

The December meeting of the Florists' Club was held at its rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and Eighth ave., on Monday evening of this week. This was election night and the results as well as a full report of the meeting will be found in this issue.

Pres. Chas. H. Totty, of the S. A. F. and O. H., and Secretary John Young, are very enthusiastic over the recent meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce at Atlantic City, N. J, which they attended in the interests of the florist trade.

Many florists, it is reported, are now beginning to wake up to the importance of the plant exclusion order, just signed by Secretary Houston, as they realize that among the long list of plants and bulbs which will be excluded by this regulation are orchid plants.

The Muller-Sealey Co., 47 W. 42d st., recently organized, announces the retaining of selling connections for the Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., with whom both partners were formerly associated as representatives.

In "Our Florist Soldiers" column this week there will be found an interesting note about Sergt. John C. Latham of the Machine Gun Company of the 107th New York Infantry, to whom has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross by Gen. Pershing. Sergt. Latham was formerly a traveling salesman, for many years, for Bobbink & Atkins of Rutherford, N. J.

There arrived on Monday morning of this week, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Sampson, of Woodcliffe, N. J., Matthew Richard Sampson, Jr., weighing 7½ lbs. Matthew Jr. was a welcome addition to the family, previously consisting of a 13 year old daughter and one of seven. Matthew Sampson, Sr., is a member of the well known firm of Noe & Sampson, 55-57 W. 26th st.

Some wonderfully beautiful blooms of the new 'Mum Golden Mistletoe and White Mistletoe were noted on Dec. 10, at the store of the Henshaw Floral Co., 127 W. 28th st.

There have been many callers in town recently, among whom were J. D. Eisele, Riverton, N. J.; John Watson, Princeton, N. J.; B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.; Z. D. Blackistone, president of Florists' Club, Washington, D. C., and Mr. Marche, of the Marche Floral Co., Washington, D. C.; Frank J. Dolansky and G. Frank MacDonald, Boston, Mass.

Boston

On Dec. 4, Wilfred Wheeler, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, invited representatives of the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston, Fruit Growers' Ass'n, Nurserymen's Ass'n, Dairymen's Ass'n, Corn Growers' Ass'n, Tobacco Growers' Ass'n, Market Gardeners' Ass'n, Onion Growers' Ass'n, Sheep Breeders' Ass'n, Poultrymen's Ass'n, to meet at the State house to arrange for a series of lectures and discussions to be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, the week of Feb. 9, 1919. The representatives were made a working committee with Mr. Munson as chairman and Mr. Thompson as secretary. It is planned to hold exhibitions of the products of the various associations. Schedules and other information will be sent out later. Mr. Wheeler stated that his reason for calling the meeting is that there is such a shortage of labor and everyone busy that by meeting in the same building the various associations could accomplish more than by holding meetings in different parts of the State. The Gardeners and Florists' Club will hold an exhibition of florists' products, and will have lectures on interesting subjects pertaining to floriculture and horticulture, during the week of the meetings.

The best Poinsettias I have seen this season are those of John McFarland of North Boston, Mass.

The demand for plants this year is unusually large. Most of the large growers have orders enough now to exhaust all their supply. Thomas Roland has at Nahant more plants than usual but the Christmas plants are practically all sold now.

William E. Day, of Syracuse, N. Y., is spending a few days in town on business.

Welch Bros. Co. reports good business but flowers are exceedingly scarce and high in price. Shipping trade is good and Christmas orders are coming in well in advance of time.

The Budlong Rose Co. handles more varieties of Roses both new and old kinds than any other wholesale house in the city. Some of the varieties are being cut in quantity now—Maryland, Double White Killarney, Columbia, Scott Key, Stanley, Cleveland and Shawyer.

Edwin Welch, son of Patrick Welch, has returned to work after a successful operation for appendicitis. He does not look as stout as formerly, but with care he will soon be all right again.

With so many greenhouses closing for want of coal and the excessive price of fuel, there is a shortage of flowers already in the flower markets. This has caused an increase in the price and it was told at the retail stores today that the public already is protesting against the high prices asked. On account of th

Cut Flowers for Christmas

The volume of our business, compared with last year, makes a very satisfactory showing. Business conditions with us, and we feel sure with the trade in general, have been much better than during the same period of last year. If that is an indication of what we may expect for Christmas, we have every reason to look for a big business.

We are ready now to quote our prices on price of flowers there is a much heavier demand for plants.

The William W. Edgar Co. is operating every greenhouse on the place to its full extent. The variety of plants offered this year is much larger than in years past. It is true there are not so many Holland or Belgian plants but instead there are quantities of well grown home products. The Horticultural Club of Boston held its monthly meeting at the Parker House on December 4. Fred E. Wilson read an excellent paper on fertilizers.

C. S. Andem, of Putnam, Conn., is fortunate at this time in having a good cut of Carnations. The varieties Matchless, Pink Delight, Alice, Benora and Aviator are especially noteworthy.

For some time I haven't seen them as busy at Henry M. Robinson & Co.'s as they are now. The Christmas rush is on. There is a heavy call for Christmas greenery and all other supplies.

At the seed stores, although the Dutch bulbs came in late, they are practically all cleaned up. The call for them was larger than expected. R. C.

Chicago

Stock Continues Scarce

Dec. 10.—Immediately after the close of the Thanksgiving Day demand, which moved all available stock, the market assumed a more stringent condition than has ever been previously known here. The supply of all stock fell off to a minimum; the demand continued strong and still continues so at this writing. There was never a time, even during holiday periods, when the demand was as good as it is now and the supply so inadequate to meet it as it is at present. The passing of the 'Mum supply left the market with only a moderate supply of Roses and Carnations to fill the great number of orders. These soon advanced to as good prices as have ever been paid before on holiday occasions, and even at the high figures orders were only partially filled and some not at all. Business is being turned down daily for the want of more stock. Growers are hoping for bright weather to hasten along their crops to relieve the situation temporarily, but no one hopes that under the conditions that have confronted the growers during the Summer there will be any material change for some time to come. The outlook for a Christmas supply is not good and there will be no abatement in prices as long as these conditions last.

The supply of all Roses is far behind the demand and prices have reached the maximum of the season. Short stock that usually sold for $2 to $4 per 100 is bringing from $6 to $8 and will go as high as $10 per 100 unless some break should take place in conditions. Fancy Russells and Columbias are selling as high as $40 per 100. The supply of American Beauty is limited and all available stock moves at prices ranging from $7.50 to $10 per doz.

Carnations are extremely scarce; all stock coming in sells at from $6 to $8 and $10 per 100. Retailers are selling Carnations at from $2 to $2.50 per doz. Carnation growers say that they will have good crops for Christmas and while no one expects any large supply it is generally understood that the Carnation growers are relied on to save the market during the next few weeks. That prices will be lower than they are at present no one will admit. Whatever relief comes must be given by the Carnation growers; it is only in Carnations that any even moderate supply is anticipated.

There are still a few belated 'Mums on the market and those that have them are realizing prices far beyond normal figures. The writer was a customer pay $8 on Monday on the wholesale market for a dozen medium grade white blooms that under other conditions would not bring more than $2. It was a case of where the buyer had to have something at any price.

Easter Lilies are selling at from $18 to $20 per 100. Cattleyas are bringing from $8 to $10 per doz. A few Cypripediums are selling at from $2.50 to $3 per doz. Violets are moving at from $1 to $1.50 per 100. Poinsettias have made their appearance on the market but will not be in active demand until the holiday trade opens.

Just how many of the retailers will get through with their Christmas orders is a problem that is confronting them. They have been drawing recently on their plant stock reserved for holiday trade, but which cannot be replaced. Some of them say that the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," will be out of place this Christmas; that it would be easier to say it with something else.

Weather conditions are watched closely, growers knowing that a week of bright weather would help. The present week started badly; there was a continuous downpour all day Monday and on Tuesday it was so dark and cloudy that artificial light was necessary.

There were a number of visitors in the wholesale market the past week, having come here for the purpose of seeing if the market was as tight as it had been represented to them by communication. A visit to the various wholesale houses proved to them that the situation was not overestimated. Paul Palez of Little Rock, Ark., stated that he paid $75 for 500 Carnations in St. Louis the early part of the week. Mr. Palez says that the troops are leaving Little Rock at the rate of 5000 a day but that business is better than it has been, although they cannot get stock to supply it.

Greenhouse Construction Picking Up.

There is a good deal of activity in all the lines of greenhouse construction by the various firms here. Fred Lautenschlager of the Kroeschell Bros. Co. says that his firm's greenhouse heating department is answering many inquiries from florists regarding boilers, which would indicate that the coming season will be active in greenhouse construction.

The John C. Moninger Co., which was fortunate enough to have some Government work during the past year is putting its factories in shape to proceed with the manufacture of greenhouse material. Some cancellations of work caused by the war will be taken up immediately when the necessary preparations are made. The firm reports inquiries for new business and is fortunate enough to have retained its full working forces during the period that business was held down by war conditions.

The American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. has re-established its office in the Masonic Temple with H. B. Nichols in charge. Mr. Nichols was connected with the company until conditions brought about by the war caused him to seek other employment. This company was also fortunate in securing Government work, which kept it busy at the factories at Pana, Ill.

Phil Foley of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., looks forward to a good year in greenhouse construction. He says the high prices which flowers have been bringing this Fall and Winter will be a great incentive to the greenhouse building trade. Mr. Foley says he is the only one in Chicago engaged in greenhouse construction work that did not secure some Government contracts. James P. Foley, who joined the colors, has secured his discharge and will again join his father in business.

The large factory of the Lord & Burnham Co., at Des Plaines, Ill., which has been running 90 per cent. on war work for the past year, is fast finishing up its Government contracts. When these are completed the manufacture of greenhouse material will be pushed with more vigor than ever. The company has a good stock of greenhouse material on hand so that it can handle any greenhouse work from now on and can ship promptly.

Killed in Action

The trade will regret to learn of the death of Corporal R. Vatow, as announced on a card sent out by Darling & Co., with which firm he was formerly employed, being connected with the fertilizer department. Further details will be found in the "Our Florist Soldiers" column.

Allan N. Humason, a former well known traveling representative in the florist supply lines, who has been in the Army Field Service in New Jersey, is in the city on a furlough.

Geo. Asmus has returned from a trip to several of the Eastern cities. He says that the executive board of the S. A. F. is doing all in its power to put the florists' business back on the same basis as it was before the war. Particular stress is being put on all matters relating to importations.

S. Kameyama, a Japanese florist from Boston, is in the city looking for a location at which to open a flower store.

Suggested for Mayor.

The executive committee of the Democratic party of Cook County, at a meeting last week, named eleven potential candidates from whom one is to be selected on that ticket for mayor of Chicago, at the next mayoralty election. Peter Reinberg is the fourth candidate on the list.

Thos. Conlon, until Dec. 1, plant grower for the Poehlmann Bros. Co. at Morton Grove, has retired from commercial life and has taken the position of superintendent of the greenhouses and grounds of J. E. Tilt at Addison ave. and Broadway. Mr. Tilt is a wealthy shoe manufacturer and has possibly the finest conservatory and range of plant and fruit houses within the city limits of Chicago.

Burglars, one night last week, entered the Atlas block in which there are about 25 wholesale florists located and visited several of the florist stores. They made only a light haul. They took from John Kruchten & Co. a shaving outfit, from Wieter Bros. Thrift Stamps and a small sum of money, from Arch Spencer a new grip and some change in the cash drawer, and from C. W. McKellar a small sum of money. The visitors were evidently familiar with the building.

J. M. Cochrane, in one of his greenhouses at West Pullman, has a large bench of pompon Golden Wedding Mums which came in right for Thanksgiving. Mr. Cochrane says this variety is a money maker, as it comes in just when the other varieties have gone.

Business Difficulty

Willis F. Eaton, florist, 666 Main st., Haverhill, Mass., has filed a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities $8076; assets $60.

Tight Market

Dec. 10 The market continues tight, with prices carrying over from the previous week's quotations. The only long stock on the market comprises Cattleya orchids, American Beauty Roses and red Roses. Practically all other receipts are selling up close. Carnations have advanced over last week's figures, going to 10c. on selected sorts, and it is stated that a number of extra selected Wards touched 12c. Short Roses are in active demand, with not enough to fill all calls. The principal demand is on the 8c. and 10c. stock. Easter Lilies and Callas are taking eagerly at $2.50 and $3 per doz. The few late 'Mums are snapped up on arrival. Sweet Peas show a slight increase in receipts. Miscellaneous flowers, other than those mentioned, are now to be had only in limited quantities, and consequently sell up close.

Plants in Heavy Demand

The demand for Christmas plants has exceeded all expectations and practically all blooming plants are sold out by the growers. Buyers are falling back on foliage stock and this is also moving fast. Most of the plantsmen report being sold out of nearly everything salable. The demand for supplies also shows that this Christmas is expected to be an exceptional one. A number of items in this line are reported to be sold up.

Notes

The Robert Craig Co., which had the largest stock of flowering plants it ever had for Christmas, is completely sold out and has nothing left but foliage plants; these, too, are meeting with a heavy demand.

Sydney Bayersdorfer says that the demand for supplies this year is phenomenal. His firm has just added 40 girls to its factory department, working on January orders.

The following committees have been appointed by President E. A. Harvey, of the Florists' Club: Club room—Hugo Niesen, chairman, Fred J. Michell, Jr., A. T. Moore, E. P. Klinger; Essay—J. Otto Thilow, chairman, S. S. Skidelsky, Arthur A. Niessen, E. J. Fancourt, Robert Pyle; Novelties and Exhibits—Carl Corts, chairman, Hilborn Darlington, E. W. Gaehring; Membership—Clarence U. Liggit, chairman, James W. Heacock, John C. Gracey, Robert A. Craig.

Carl Corts, of the Joseph Heacock Co., states the warm weather is bringing in the company's Christmas crop of Richmond Roses two weeks ahead of time. James W. Heacock is enjoying the hunting up in Pike County.

George Burton has a wonderful crop of American Beauty Roses for Christmas. A new Stewart truck has been added to facilitate delivery.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has an unusually attractive window display, featuring wreaths and Christmas greens.

The trade regrets to learn of the death of Mrs. Dunlap, wife of Samuel Dunlap of Pennock Bros.

Joseph G. Neidinger is recuperating at Atlantic City, following a recent operation.

Raymond Brunswick, of the M. Rice Co., says: "We are practically cleaned out of everything, and it is with the florist like the bird and the worm, the early one got the goods."

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

The Pacific Coast

San Francisco, Cal.

Thanksgiving Day trade is reported to have been satisfactory from all directions. Heavy rains a few days previously played havoc with the 'Mum crop, but there was enough stock to go around

Charles F. Shellgrain, for many years manager for J. B. Boland, florist, resigned last week; his future plans have not yet been announced. As Mr. Shellgrain is one of the best liked men in the trade, his many local friends hope that his new plans will not call him away from San Francisco.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its December meeting on Dec. 7 and, according to program, Prof. W. W. Mackie, of the University of California, lectured on "Principles involved in improving plants for increased food production."

The new catalog of the Richard Diener Co., Kentfield, is being printed.

J. R. W.

Portland, Ore.

To outline Thanksgiving Day business in general is rather difficult, as it varied any marked peculiarities, being excellent with everybody. The absence of pickled Carnations and 'Mums was appreciated by the retailers. The demand for funeral flowers previously took all ripe stock; in fact, stock was never given a chance to become mature.

All corsage flowers were much in demand and sold at good prices. 'Mums sold well in both large and pompon sorts with prices that allowed a profit to the grower and retailer. Carnations cleaned up with most stores, but some report that they were not bringing the high prices that they did in former years. Roses shared much the same fate, but in all instances few were left for the day after and at that were indispensable then.

The stores cleaned up generally, although in a few cases too much was expected and some stock remained unsold late Thursday afternoon. Some stores were forced to close at 2 p.m., owing to the stock running out.

Prevailing retail prices were: Carnations $1 and $1.25 to $1.50 per doz.; Roses $1.50 to $5; 'Mums, (bunch) 50c. to $1.50 per bunch, (large) from $3 to $10 per doz.; Violets 50c. per bunch.

Potted stock sold very well. Good Cyclamen, Heathers and Begonias were shown.

Just what result the excellent prices will have on the 'Mum situation another year it is hard to say. It is a safe bet that 'Mums have netted the growers in most cases twice the prices of a year or two ago, so it remains to be seen whether the growers will make the mistake so prevalent in former years of overdoing the 'Mum. This season was different than those that are to come, due to the exceptional demand for funeral work. If the year had been normal 'Mum prices would not have been quite so high.

The help situation is easing up considerably. There are men around looking for greenhouse work; this has not happened in the past two years.

Nurserymen report a much better fall season in Oregon than had been anticipated The demand for ornamental stock has been fair; for fruits, especially small fruits for home gardens, it has been exceedingly heavy. Labor is reported as scarce and the nurseries consequently rushed and working overtime.

Roaches Commit Suicide

Government entomologists, by study of the habits of roaches, have found that these insects frequently cleanse their legs and antennæ when any dirt or powder comes in contact with these appendages. These are at once drawn through the mouth parts of the insects and thus cleaned. As a result, a certain amount of any powdered substance applied directly to a roach or through which it may crawl, is taken into the mouth and presently finds its way into the stomach Therefore it is not necessary to mix a stomach poison in powdered form with an attractive bait.

Effectiveness of various exterminators for roaches are described in Bulletin 707, recently issued by the Department of Agriculture, copies of which may be procured from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., at 5c. a copy.

Brimful of Facts and other Valuable Information

Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Elizabeth Hayden of Murray's is in St. Luke's Hospital, a sufferer from influenza.

Rock's show window contains a service flag with 14 stars. One of silver is for Carl Hansen of the ambulance corps, who was wounded in action and is still in a hospital in France. Ten of the 14 employees are in France and have been in active service. The day the armistice was signed, when the city was wild with excitement and everybody was celebrating, M. E. Carter, manager of Rock's, took every vestige of display out of the window and put in this service flag, topped it with an American flag and the words "They're Coming Home." This bit of sentiment made such a hit that it has remained the central figure of the window displays ever since.

Business is so good and stock so scarce that florists in and all around Kansas City are still desperate. "If we had all the flowers we could sell we could make enough this season to retire," said one of the local growers jokingly. "We have never seen anything like the demand for flowers. Everything sells and there is hardly such a thing as putting a price on anything. We look at the person, guess how much money he has and ask whatever we think he will pay."

While this is, of course, exaggerated, it describes the local condition perfectly. There is not enough stock by half to take care of orders. Roses are scarce and are selling at wholesale from 18c. to 35c. a piece. What Carnations there are—and there are scarcely any—bring 8c. to 10c. wholesale. Wholesalers are buying anything they can get, anywhere they can get it, and are doling out orders to take care of customers to the best of their ability. It is hard for a retail dealer to turn down orders, but one stated only a few days ago that he was turning down $500 worth of business every day. Another dealer, who is also a grower, has nothing in Roses under $4 a doz., which is a big price at this time.

Unless conditions change greatly within the next week or two it appears that Christmas will see a shortage of flowers never known before. The shortage is due to the demand caused by the influenza epidemic raging in this city and nearby territory.

In addition to using the phrase "Say It With Flowers" on all of its stationery and everywhere possible, Rock's Flower Store now has it on all of the delivery trucks of the company. This makes an effective advertisement and has caused more attention to be paid to this admonition than any other way that the phrase has been used. On the body of each truck, in good sized letters are the words "Flowers by Wire Anywhere."

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES

Z-I-N-C-O

WHAT IT IS

Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

COAL

How to Make Little Piles Look Big And Act Big

THE farmers have a lot to say about making two blades of grass grow where one used to. And it isn't all talk either. They do it.

Now, supposing you could make one ton of coal do what a ton and a half has done before. The coal shortage then, wouldn't hit you so hard.

"Perhaps" that very thing can be done.

Note we say "perhaps!"

Making big claims that we cannot make good is not in our line of business.

What we can do, however, is make every pound of coal you burn give you all the heat it ought to give.

It may cost you the cost of several tons to do it. But if it will save you the cost of ton after ton, year after year; it will pay for itself over and over.

Right now, before you are firing strong, is the time to have Our Coal Eater Detective go over your system.

Send for him.

Wholesale Florists' Protective Association

At Hotel Breslin, New York, on Saturday evening, Dec. 14, the Wholesale Florists' Protective Association celebrated its tenth anniversary, fittingly entitling the occasion Forefather's Day. The guests sat at one long table which was handsomely decorated and the credit for which goes to A. H. Langjahr, who also had full charge of the supper arrangements, and acquitted himself so handsomely that he was awarded a unanimous vote of thanks. The supper in quality was far above the average, well cooked and well served, and this helped cement the spirit of brotherly friendliness which was well in evidence throughout the evening.

Naturally, an occasion of this kind was not allowed to pass without some speechmaking. Frank H. Traendly acted as toastmaster, introducing the speakers, among whom were, in addition to that gentleman himself—who in the nature of his duties had to make quite a number of introductory speeches—W. F. Sheridan (charter member); George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Percy B. Rigby of S. S. Pennock Co., New York; Philip F. Keesler, Wm. Badgley, Ward W. Smith, manager for the association, and others.

The keynote of the evening was service and credits, and epitomizing the various talks, among the points brought out were these: Outsiders who had visited New York in recent years gave credit to the W. F. P. A. for improved collections. Many outside wholesalers had gotten down to the spirit of the New York organization, and these were getting their money once a month. Those who pursued the old course of unlimited credit were still subjecting themselves to business embarrassment. "With these men, when a fellow goes up the creditor heads the Roll of Honor." The terms of credit started by the present organization are to be found in operation in many cities throughout the land.

W. F. Sheridan extended the welcome to the guests. Looking back to the date of the organization of the association, conditions at that time, he said, were chaotic, due not so much to those who could not pay, but simply to those who would not pay. Many of the retailers would not settle with the wholesalers inside of six months. The organization had standardized the business and has had a lasting and an influential effect upon it. It has been a success from the start and has set the pace, which others have followed, making the work done by the W. F. P. A. not only good for itself, but for others.

Wallace R. Pierson felt that he was among friends who had done much for the florists' business. As comparing present conditions he cited the time when some had looked upon a note as a payment and others,a promise, as money. With some, unfortunately, this idea still prevails. Mr. Pierson concluded with an apt quotation from Kipling:

"I have eaten your bread and salt,
I have drunk your water and wine;
And the deaths ye died
I have watched beside,
And the lives ye led were mine."

Mr. Traendly brought out the fact that the St. Louis wholesale florists had formed an association on the New York plan, going it one better, however, to the extent that they got their money twice a month.

George B. Hart of Rochester expressed his thorough belief in the system practiced by the W. F. P. A. As the only commission house in Rochester he had to create a rule for himself. He instanced that on the 15th of last October, without waiting until the end of the month, and on account of the big business being transacted about that time, which called for heavy cash outlays, he rendered his statements which were nearly all met. He intended to adopt the rules of the present organization.

Percy B. Rigby of the S. S. Pennock Co. of New York and Philadelphia, narrated some of the experiences of the wholesalers in the city of Philadelphia. At one time Philadelphia had but slight competition, but now there were wholesale florists in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Rochester, Buffalo and Boston who shared in the market.

Philip Kessler was introduced by Mr. Traendly as another wholesale florist who had been honored by the New York Florists' Club, jokingly referring to the fact that the W. F. P. A. had furnished it several presidents. Mr. Kessler is evidently taking his new honors seriously. He said that instead of his usual monthly vacation this next season he intends to make use of that period to visit every florist open to membership in the endeavor to bring him into the New York Florists' Club. He felt highly honored at his election and would endeavor to do the very best he could for his fellow members. "If the growers would come more freely to the meetings of the N. Y. F. C. they would not be growing, for instance, pompon 'Mums which sold for a song, when they could grow other varieties for which they could get 75c. to $1 a dozen."

Wm. Badgley made the point that the more thoroughly an association was organized, the better work it could do; an organization not effectively organized or officered cannot accomplish much.

E. C. Horan, another charter member, and one who remembers the old days when the retailer had to go and camp on the threshold of the grower's doorway to make sure that he would be enabled to get some flowers for the day's sales, especially if there were festive days, called attention to the great difference existing in the methods of doing business today, when a retailer could get down to his shop at 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning, suitably dressed for the day, and conduct his purchases over the 'phone, or at least at a minimum loss of time. Reviewing the organization of the W. F. P. A., Mr. Horan said that while it met with considerable opposition at the start it took buyers but six months to understand that they had to pay their bills promptly in order to obtain supplies.

Ward W. Smith, the manager for the association, said that he foresaw the time when all lines of business in all cities and all communities would be along cooperative lines. The Allies had perhaps seen it before we did, even Germany, although she aimed at the wrong lines. He felt that proof had been given that cooperation can be carried out better through democracies than through autocracies. He disparaged any credit due himself for the success of the association, saying the success was due to all together, that it was the spirit of cooperation which had made for success. Reconstruction is making for it, he said, organizations cooperate within organizations, the object being the greatest good for the greatest number.

Through the progress of the dinner and the talks which followed, good music was rendered by Muller, and songs by Miss Lea Lealand and Wm. Logan were heartily joined in by the entertainees. A flashlight picture was taken of the assemblage. Among those present were: Frank Traendly, Chas. Schenck, Alfred H. Langjahr, H. E. Froment, Walter F. Sheridan, Joseph S. Fenrich, Wm. Kessler, E. C. Horan, Wm. P. Ford, Philip F. Kessler, Paul Meconi, Clarence Slinn, Wm. Badgley of Badgley & Bishop, Paul Rigo and F. R. Martin of Henshaw Floral Co., Maurice Glass of Henry M. Robinson & Co., William and John Gunther of Gunther Bros., Percy B. Rigby and Joseph Morichard of S. S. Pennock Co., Meyer Othile of Riedel & Meyer, all of New York; George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; A. F. Faulkner, representing the American Florist; A. T. De La Mare, representing The Florists' Exchange.

Phone Tolls Reduced

Postmaster General Burleson has announced sweeping reductions in long distance and toll 'phone rates on the basis of 6¼ miles air line mileage, half the day rate for night service up to midnight and one quarter this rate between that hour and 4:30 a.m. These will take effect January 21. According to the report, the intention is to equalize charges over the country, to remove "disparities and preferences" and provide a scientific basis for future reductions contemplated as unification of telephone and telegraph wires proceeds." The following paragraphs are condensed from Mr. Burleson's announcement:

A station to station service such as exists in the balance of the world is established; that is when a connection is made with a man's house or office the basic rate applies and is payable whether or not the individual desired responds. The rate up to 24 miles is 5c. for six miles; for greater distances 5c. for each eight miles. This arrangement is far simpler than the existing ones of which more than 60 have been in force. The effect of the unification will be to reduce or to make no change in about 70 per cent. of the rates, but slightly raise the other 30 per cent. Another effect will be the elimination of fraud in the "particular person" service, the rate for which has been so modified as to compensate for this extra expense. A charge of 25 per cent. of the station to station service is made whether or not the "particular person" is secured, this amount being added to the station to station rate when the person sought is actually given the connection.

In many large sections of the country the minimum toll rate has been not less than 15c. Under the new scheme for short distances the rates are reduced to 10c. or even 5c. For the cheapest form of service the talks may last five minutes as compared with three, two, or even only one minute as at the present. Free toll areas, where the exchange rate is designed to cover free service or a low charge are not affected by the new plan.

No Labor Surplus—No Decline in Prices

The views of Frank A. Vanderlip on the industrial situation were given in a recent talk before the Academy of Political Science, and certain of his statements will be found interesting to our own readers, his summary of the situation being that we are not likely to have any overplus of labor for some time to come and that he cannot foresee any immediate wholesale decline in prices for the near future. The citations follow:

"One picture is that there are billions of dollars of contracts canceled, and there must be millions of men thrown out of work, and it must be impossible to find works of peace to employ these hands immediately. In some measure that is right, but I think a good many of these contracts, perhaps some millions of dollars of them, were really contracts which were industrially impossible to perform in the time laid out to perform them, and their cancellation does not mean the discharge of men, but the cancellation of paper contracts. Of course, there will be vast contracts canceled and numbers of men thrown out of employment, a period of readjustment that cannot help being harsh in its effects. Still we have been growing, we have been making normal progress during the last four years and might remember that we should ordinarily had 5,000,000 immigrants in that period. We have had practically none, and have lost upward of a million of Europeans who have returned. There is a prospect of a considerable outward movement after freedom of travel is again established. We will have from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 men in uniform for some time to come. So we are not likely to have that overplus of labor which some expect. There has been a great damming up of production of many kinds, and there is a vast amount of work of a peace nature to do, so I don't consider that there is going to be an excess of labor anything like as serious as some anticipate.

"Wages are high and the price of everything is high, and there is a very substantial economic reason for the currency inflation of the whole world that has been going on for more than four years. European countries have shipped to us $1,300,000,000 in gold, and every bank in the allied countries has more gold than before the war, forming a great increase in the basis of circulating money. We are on a level of prices where we are likely to remain for some time. While the war is over, war financing is not. There will have to be more loans. Very substantial borrowings are going on. Extension is going on, and I don't foresee a wholesale decline in prices, such as some people have anticipated. Prices are naturally influenced by the volume of money, and I don't think there is a prospect of any very extreme changes."

Sweet William was being measured for a suit of clothes. It was his first made to order suit, and he was very proud of the fact. After the shopman had made all the necessary weird passes with the tape, his mother walked over to another counter to inspect some goods. "This will be a nice suit, my little fellow," smiled the man to little William. "Would you like the shoulders padded?" "Don't matter about the shoulders," was the significant reply, "but you can pad the trousers."—N. Y. Globe.

The Flower Business

It Never was Better

Don't worry about what is going to happen, according to your way of thinking, and judging by conditions in Europe right now or what effect the high prices paid for flowers will have on the public. All of that really does not matter much. The fact is that everything half way decent brought to the market is being cleaned up at prices never heard of before. This will keep up, so you might as well get used to it—not only cheerfully pay the market price and charge accordingly and thereby make a larger margin of profit than ever, but also do a little more growing yourself to meet these conditions. The pessimist will keep on living in misery the happier others are, and the optimist will not only make the best of things but do his share to make things run smoothly. The man stocked up with good stuff will make money next year. It isn't too late to stock up in order to do a great Spring business. Don't hesitate because bulbs are high. They won't come down. Don't hesitate planting Sweet Peas because most likely everybody will plant them. Don't wait for what might happen, for there never was a better chance to accomplish things than right now. There never was a time when flowers were in greater demand than right now, and in time to come, and never a better time to get busy than the present. Things will boom in our business as they never have boomed before and we all can help, stock up, keep pushing and produce the goods. The market is here so full steam ahead

Cold Storage Lilies for Easter

If it is intended to get cold storage Lilies in for Easter the bulbs should be planted now. I don't hold it impossible to get a good percentage of the plants to flower for Easter, but taking into consideration how late Easter comes in 1919 and uncertain weather conditions, as well as the condition of the bulbs themselves, which will not improve, having been kept in cold storage so long, there is a risk. However, if the bulbs are planted at once, kept at about 50 deg. until well established and growth begins, if after this they be kept moving along in a 60 deg. house, there should be no trouble in getting a good percentage into flower with fair stems. Whether they can be held until Easter or not, I am sure they will bring good returns. I believe higher prices were never paid for Lilies than now or will be for all offered for the next three months. Lilies bring as much as last Easter; in fact, in many localities they can't be had at all, so no retail grower can make a mistake by planting a few cases and let them come along. Avoid a low temperature when the plants are once under way. More failure is due to it than perhaps anything else. Dust stems and blasted buds come from it. The man who can't give his plants 60 deg. or over has no business trying to force them. It just means waste of money and labor.

New Salvia "America"

With us no other Salvia made a better showing the past season than "America." The plants were a mass of flowers all Summer. With an exceptional Fall they kept on sending up flowering spikes away into November. It wasn't that these flowers brought a lot of money, but they were excellent for decoration purposes. As a bedder this sort bids fair to take the place of all other dwarf sorts. If you have use for Salvias at all by all means grow on a good stock for next Spring's sales. The best way to grow this Salvia is to select a few extra fine specimens in Fall, pot them up and take one crop of cuttings after another during the Winter. In that way you keep on improving. If you are short or haven't tried this sort, with a good lot of 2½in. plants kept shifted, a lot of cuttings can be taken, all of which, even those rooted as late as next April, will grow into salable stock by bedding out time. Another way to increase the stock is through seed, which is being offered of this novelty for the first time. If you grow from seed it will be well to remember next Summer to watch your own stock and if there should be any difference at all in the plants as to habit and size select the best, either for seed or to take cuttings from another year.

Cinerarias

For years we have looked upon the Cinerarias as plants of but little value. As to making money out of them, our attention was taken up with other stock. While the true gardener enjoys as much as ever growing Cinerarias to perfection and feasts his eyes on the wonderful color display, when the plants are in flower, a good many of us thought we could hardly afford to allow their taking up valuable space in the greenhouse. Under existing conditions we gradually change our minds. Well grown specimens in bloom for Christmas are going to pay as much as other stock will. With a scarcity of flowers most likely all through the Winter Cinerarias will mean more than ever they have if for no other reason than to help make a show in the florist establishments. If you should happen to have small stock on hand it will pay to shift it into larger pots and let the plants come along in a cool house; even if small buds appear now the plants will make considerable growth for the next six weeks if the roots can get hold of more soil. Plan now for next year to grow a nice lot of Cinerarias. Some of the rose shades, white and light blue are especially desirable ones to get. Seed is now offered in separate colors. While they don't always come true, they come pretty near it.

Gladiolus for Profit

Growing Them Under Glass

There isn't a retail grower who can't make money on Gladioli if he handles them right, and this is not so much in the way they are grown as to time their flowering period. One can successfully force a Gladiolus in almost any house with sufficient head room which isn't over 5ft., but the main thing is to arrange it so you have a succession of flowers from late April on up to the time the first ones are being cut out of doors. Avoid getting a big crop in at a certain time and dumping on a glutted market what you can't make use of yourself. I don't know whether there will be a glutted market on anything in the next seven months, but the man who grows a part of the stock he retails will make the most money out of it if he can so time his crops as to have a steady supply coming along on which he can depend, regardless of conditions in the wholesale market. Where is there the florist who can't find good use for well grown spikes of Gladioli such as America, Chicago White, Augusta, Halley or Mrs. Frank Pendleton during the Spring and Summer months? You will get as much for one spike grown from a 2c. bulb as a 4in. Geranium with less work and bench room; but don't plant a thousand bulbs at one time, rather keep on planting a few every two weeks, starting right now with the first lot and keeping it up until next April.

Cultural Notes

On Gladioli Under Glass

For the first batch of bulbs to be planted it is well to make use of 4in. pots; place under some bench in the Carnation house until active growth is under way, especially if the grower is short on room for the present. From 12 to 15 weeks are required for the bulbs planted now to come into flower, but the later you plant the shorter the period required. The only time it is good policy to plant Gladioli between the Carnations is when the Carnations are no good. In that case it is economy to throw the Carnations out and plant the bulbs in rows across the bench. Wherever there is a low growing crop on a bench, such as Pansies, Violets, Freesias or Forget-menots, and enough space between the plants, Gladioli may be planted between, as for weeks they will not interfere with each other. In a bench with 5in. of soil get the bulbs at least 3in. below the surface and allow about 3in. of space between them. Every bit as good results can be obtained by planting three to five bulbs, according to the size, in a 6in. pot. A Carnation house will suit the plants nicely. Keep away from steam or hot water pipes, and never permit the soil in the benches to dry out too much. Blind buds will be the result. When buds appear a good dose of liquid manure makes for extra large flowers.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

National Publicity Campaign

There is no doubt that florists generally have faced a rather poor condition of business this year.

Our publicity committee realizes that this is the main reason for the shortage, small though it be, in the amount of $50,000 which it was expected could be raised for the first year of our campaign.

We are over $4000 short of our planned requirements. The florist industry has gone "over the top" in practically all other drives but its own. It would be unpatriotic to criticize, and yet it may be pointed out that the florists who did contribute to the funds were unanimously of the opinion that the florist business would have been sadly the worse this year had it not been for the campaign. Being financially interested in our movement, they have made it their business, through inquiry and comparisons to determine for themselves the value of our work. And they are satisfied to continue their subscriptions for another year, and the year after, and then still another year.

There's faith for you! We are now in the closing days of 1918. Florists are anticipating an unusually good Christmas trade, and prospects for a prosperous year are exceedingly bright. It is a good time for all who have allowed the present year to pass without making a subscription to the fund to sit down and write a check for a 1919 contribution. Better still, fill out our form, sent on request, covering an annual contribution for three years.

A prominent retail florist said the other day: "Why make three or four years the term of the campaign? You may have my support as long as I am in business. The movement is the best ever instituted in the florist industry, and should never stop. Why halt at an expenditure of $50,000, when $100,000 would double the benefit and put flowers where they ought to be—on every home table, every day in the year?"

There's the rub! With a little less than our planned amount we have barely scratched the surface of possibility. But the scratching was deep, as we have discovered. With more money we could brand instead of scratch our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," on the public mind, and it would stay as long as we renewed the branding.

It's up to the trade to make this possible. The committees have a fine working organization, but it is money only that will keep the machinery going. Our promotion bureau has been quite busy in the last two weeks, despatching the various aids for direct publicity provided through our service. We have a descriptive pamphlet ready to mail to anyone who makes request.

Nephrolepis Ferns Become Yellow

We have a lot of Teddy, Jr., and Schulzi ferns in 5in. pots, and one of our customers complained about the foliage looking so yellow. Can you enlighten as to what to do to make them greener and what causes the trouble? Is it caused by the ferns being grown too cold or through lack of food?—T. N. Y., Pa.

—Too low a temperature, insufficient fertilizer, irregular watering and too little light will all tend to make your ferns yellow. The inquirer will be able, as he is on the spot, to determine just which of the above conditions are present in his greenhouse, and cause his ferns to become yellow. J. H. S.

Hill's Rose Premier

The committee appointed to examine closely and to report on the exhibition of a hundred blooms of the Rose Premier, at the meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, Wednesday night, Dec. 11, submit the following:

We regard this novelty in all its features and constitutional qualities to be far superior to any Rose now in commerce. It is so far in advance of all other varieties that mere comparison does not alone disclose its merits, which in the total seem to entitle it to the designation of perfection in a Rose.

We highly commend this wonderful variety and predict for it a great future as supplying a long felt want for a Rose of its magnificent color: Rose pink, with stiff, thornless stems and luxuriant and really beautiful foliage, which augments the striking appearance of the Rose on exhibition. Its pronounced, delicious fragrance is a distinct mark of this truly remarkable Rose.

Fruit and Vegetable Growers Meet

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society was held at the Emerson Hotel, Dec. 10 and 11. There was a good attendance of members from all over the State, and much interest was displayed in the discussion of various topics, particularly the "Dust versus Spray" paper, by Dr. A. L. Quaintance of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology, and the discussion pertaining to Summer and Winter pruning, the oriental Peach moth and the fertilizer situation, etc. The following officers were elected: A. P. Snader, New Windsor, president; E. A. Knock, Pocomoke City, vice-president; S. B. Shaw, College Park, secretary-treasurer. Dr. Symons resigned from the secretaryship after a tenure of ten years.

The society, in cooperation with the Maryland Agricultural Society made a small exhibit covering 1500 sq. ft. in the Interallied War Exposition conducted by the Southern Commercial Congress. This exhibit represented the State's agri-resources, including fruit, vegetables, etc.

The first annual meeting of the Maryland State Vegetable Growers was held Dec. 11 at the Hotel Emerson. A splendid paper on the Cabbage aroused considerable discussion, also wilt and blight of Tomatoes and the work done in the State, discussed by Prof. C. E. Temple. There was a general round table discussion on the Outlook for Trucking in Maryland, which brought out many helpful suggestions concerning the progress of the industry. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Jas. S. Smith, president; Fred Hurst, vice-president, and A. C. Auchter, secretary. Meeting of these societies will be held in Hagerstown, Md., in Dec., 1919.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

Not Enough To Go Around

True, the Retailer will have nothing left over at Christmas and New Year, owing to the short supply.

It is going to be a clean plate, if you will; but unless there has been enough on the plate to sustain there is a little satisfaction at having wiped it clean.

And yet, there is one big bright spot in the condition of affairs for the coming holiday trade—in this, that we venture to say there is no finer advertisement for any commodity than "SOLD OUT."

The disappointments there are going to be for the flower loving public are going to whet their appetites for flowers, such as an abundance of stock could never have done.

It is the unattainable that attracts, is it not? And does not abundance lower value?

So, without any desire to extract undue comfort out of the present situation, we see the benefit of a wonderfully fine advertisement for the trade.

And, by the way, Mr. Retailer, don't go out of your way to tell your customers that the Government took 50% of the fuel away from the grower and so deprived you of flowers.

Tell them, rather, something which is equally true and a far better ad., namely, that there are not enough flowers to go around to meet the demand.

"Please discontinue our ad., as we are cleaned out of plants.—T. E. Palmer, Mendenhall, Pa."

"We wrote you to give one more insertion to our advertisement of Delphiniums, but we have quite a number of orders this morning, and would like to have you discontinue it.—Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y."

"My sales have been wonderful and can trace many to The Florist's Exchange.—T. H. Fuller, Battle Creek, Mich."

European Notes

The thermometer registered 14 deg. of frost (Fahr.) last night; earlier in the week seven and eight degrees were experienced, mainly in low lying districts. As, however, the atmosphere has been dry for the greater part of November, we do not anticipate any very serious injury to our growing plants, and as we are sure that the cold weather will check the ravages of vermin, we rest content. While there is a tendency to slackness apparent in the trade just now the demand for Radish seed is simply abnormal and growers can obtain almost any price they choose to ask for thoroughly reliable stocks. It is much to be regretted that we are not able to expedite the delivery of our 1918 crops of this article. The causes of this delay have been explained in previous notes. For the present we can only say that there is no improvement in the situation and as stocks of all varieties are very low indeed we have nothing to fall back upon. Will our friends kindly bear these facts in mind, and act accordingly?

That highly speculative article Onion seed is causing us considerable perturbation just now. There is without doubt quite a surplus of some varieties, notably the white Lisbon; the so called Bermuda varieties are also offered very freely, owing to lack of permission to convey it to your side. Judging from the reports of your Government there appears to be a somewhat heavy surplus in California, for which efforts are being made to find a market in Europe, so that while the crops of the varieties that have been proved to be reliable during the four strenuous years through which we have passed are without doubt very meagre, it is difficult to induce market growers to pay a remunerative price for the same. As the food controllers have fixed a satisfactory price for the 1918 crop of Onion bulbs, no doubt the gardeners will be a little easier to deal with when sowing time arrives.

Parsley is another article of which the crop is disappointing; this is in part due to the extraordinary demand for the green leaves for market work. The plants that might have produced seed were stripped so bare at the end of June that the July and August drought simply destroyed them. As the demand for green Parsley is still exceptionally brisk, the young plants are subjected to the same treatment; in many cases the entire plant, including the root, is sent to market, and this is sure to affect the 1919 seed crop.

Nov. 22. European Seeds.

The frosts referred to in last week's notes have made our flower gardens look shabby, but so far as we can judge vegetables for the table are practically uninjured. The wish is father to the thought, for if any serious damage befell our Cabbage plants for next year's harvest the consequences would be grave; for it is doubtful if there has been such a limited acreage planted at any time during the past six years.

With the happy cessation of hostilities a large acreage of derelict land will come into cultivation again and seeds will consequently be in increased demand.

It is safe to say that all the Brassicas will be cleaned up within the next three months, with the possible exceptions of Brussels Sprouts and Cauliflower. The fact that growers are taking advantage of the needs of their fellows and demanding shamefully exhorbitant prices for this very necessary article does not appear to curtail the demand at all. A few fortunate growers are able to reap a rich harvest. The pendulum is bound to swing back as Carrot, Parsnip and Spinach testify. Then in the words of an American philosopher, "somebody will get it in the neck."

Fortunately for the poor repatriated peasants in Northern France to whom the Choux in their pot-a-feu is an absolute nevessity, specially organized efforts are being made by many charitable societies to see that their needs are supplied free of charge. European Seeds.

Nov. 27.

New York Seed Trade

Inquiries of several of the leading plant importers of this city elicited the opinion that it is entirely too late and that the risk would be altogether too great to attempt now to import from Europe, Azaleas, Rhododendrons and other plants for the purpose of forcing them into flower for Easter which, next year, comes on April 20, even if such plants were available for immediate shipment, and cargo space could be obtained on steamships which would sail at once, neither of which is at all certain. There is, however, we are informed by the plant importers an abnormally large number of orders being placed with Europeen plant growers for importation next Spring, for such plants as after June 1, 1919, will be shut out of this county by the Plant Exclusion ordinance, unless some modification of this order can be obtained.

John Scheepers & Co., Inc., 2 Stone st., received this week a letter from Samuel Redstone, a gentleman well known in this city who, two years ago, when in England as the European representative of that company, entered the service of the Allies. Mr. Redstone writes that he received an honorable discharge Nov. 22, and will return to the United States. Before so doing he will visit in the interests of John Scheepers & Co., Inc., many of the important horticultural specialists, among these. Wallace, Blackmore, Langdon, Campbell, Holford, Kelway, Barr, Englehart, Dicksons, etc., in England, and thence will go to Scotland seeking out novelties, and also selling to these estates American products such as his company produces.

Seedsmen and others dealing in Christmas greens and boughs of berried shrubs report that the demand is unprecedented and high prices rule. There is a normal supply of Mistletoe, Southern Smilax, Pine Needles, Asparagus, Green Ruscus Laurel (Kalmia) and ferns, and a moderate supply of Holly, Standing Pine (Lycopodium dendroideum) Red Berries (Ilex verticillata). Pine Cones, Red Ruscus and Boxwood are practically out of the market, the small supply having been exhausted. Christmas trees are in short supply. Holly is now selling at $10 and upward per case. Sphagnum Moss also is in short supply. An article, in which this class of goods is treated more fully will be found elsewhere in this issue.

Burnett Bros., 92 Chambers st., report that the printers are now delivering their 1919 catalogs, which will be mailed directly after the Christmas holidays.

Chicago Seed Trade

Seedsmen report an unusually large demand for Gladioli bulbs for delivery in the Spring of 1919. American growers have been active in producing large crops so that the absence of imported stock will not affect the market.

The making of Holly wreaths and the winding of bouquet green wreathing is well under way at the warehouses of Vaughan's Seed Store, at Halsted and Randolph sts. Geo. Mohn has charge of the large force of women doing this work.

Joe Marks, of A. Henderson & Co., has been confined to his home the past week with a severe cold. This firm reports a good demand for cold storage Lilium giganteum. The high price that cut Lilies are bringing in the wholesale cut flower market has stimulated the demand.

The W. W. Barnard Co. is putting its store in shape for Christmas sales. A stock of palms and decorative plants is being put in. W. K. Partridge is at work on the Spring catalog and expects to have it ready for the printer immediately after the first of the new year.

Manager Degnan, of Wintersons Seed Store, has a happy way of adjusting things to meet conditions. Over a year ago he renamed the old, well known Keiserskroon Tulip, Grand Duc, a name by which it was originally known. Now that the Kaiser's crown and the Grand Duc's also have met the fate they so justly deserved, Mr. Degnan has renamed this popular variety "Spring Delight," a name which he asserts no future change can ever displace. The bulbs on exhibition are unusually fine. Ten average sized bulbs often weigh one pound.

There is no change in the Onion set market in the Chicago District. The crops in the warehouses are reported to be going through the Winter without much loss. Whites are being sold at from $2.75 to $3 and the colored varieties at $2 for January delivery.

Harry's Seed Store

H. Paré, 249 Le Pailleur st., Montreal, Que., announces the opening of "Harry's Seed Store." He would like to receive copies of wholesale and retail catalogs and circulars, with terms and conditions, and also asks to have his name placed on mailing lists for future offerings.

Primitive Corn

An ear of "primitive" Corn with the following letter was received at this office recently from J. F. Rupp, Shiremanstown, Pa.

By this mail I send you an ear of primitive Corn, which may prove interesting to you and your readers from a botanical or biological standpoint.

This is by no means near the original Indian Corn but an improvement on it, and may well be described as a primitive form of our Indian Corn; and we can easily trace the steps taken by the American Indian in developing by selection in order to eliminate the individual grain husk; with the result that our present day Indian Corn has become very highly developed. We grow some of this primitive Corn and find it very interesting to many people. Some of the ears turn out entirely huskless kernels.

This ear of Corn was 9in. long and 2½in. in diameter, and was enclosed in a rather thin outer husk. There were 14 rows of kernels, not placed on the cob in exactly straight lines but with a slight twist. The ear was sparsely supplied with silk. Each kernel was entirely enveloped in a husk of its own, was very hard, heavily glazed, of yellow color, and indented on the end, somewhat like the modern "Dent" Corn.

Mildew of Greenhouse Lettuce

Downy mildew, a fungous disease attacking Lettuce particularly, has been found in greenhouses during Fall and Winter by botanists from the Ohio Experiment Station while making pathological studies in Northern Ohio forcing houses. The cause is now attributed to excess heat and humidity which favor development of the fungus.

The mildew is identified by yellow spots above and a white downy growth on the underside of the leaves. It often appears on the seedbeds and if diseased seedlings are reset it spreads rapidly unless control measures are carried out. Sometimes it appears when the Lettuce crop is almost matured. Even a light attack decreases the value of the crop.

Gathering and burning diseased plants is recommended as one of the first control methods. Care must also be taken in the heating of the greenhouse as a high temperature aids disease development. Surface watering also aids in spreading the disease. The fungus is not noticed so much where sub-irrigation is practiced.

Steam sterilization of greenhouse beds and seed beds will destroy downy mildew but when an excess of heat and humidity are maintained, the disease may reappear.

The seed trade will be sorry to hear of the death of Lieut. R. B. Hutchcraft, son of R. B. Hutchcraft, seedsman of Paris, Ky. Further details will be found in "Our Florist Soldiers" column.

Some remarks on plant breeding, being in connection with a lecture delivered by Prof. W. W. Mackie, will be found in the San Franciso newsletter.

There are many noted slogans among seedsmen. One of the latest noted, and a very good one, too, is "Seed You Can't Keep Down," adopted by the Daniel Bachelor Seed Store, Utica, N. Y.

Southern States

Louisville, Ky.

From the number of orders which are being booked in advance by Louisville florists, indications are that holiday business will be extremely gratifying to the trade. The big retailers report heavy telegraphic orders as well as local business, much of this demand coming from the soldiers. There has been an increase in the number of influenza cases, but the second attack is much milder than the first, and the deaths have been fewer.

George Schulz, of the Jacob Schulz Co., stated that business was excellent, but that stock has been very scarce in Louisville, and little is to be obtained in even the larger markets.

The December meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was again postponed, because of the florists being busy and the next meeting will not take place till after the first of the year.

The possibility of a flower show being held during the Winter, probably in February, is again being discussed, but unless stock is more plentiful, no attempt will be made to hold one.

The difference in weather conditions between last year and this is shown by the fact that Roses have recently been in bloom here outdoors, whereas on the same date last year there were 17in. of snow on the ground, accompanied by the coldest weather of years.

Sues Gas Company

Herbert G. Walker, head of the F. Walker Co., on Chestnut st., is suing the Louisville Gas and Electric Co. for $3750, representing the loss of stock due to lack of gas pressure last Winter. For more than two weeks the pressure was far below normal and the gas furnace proved a failure. He also suffered damage in December, 1916, from the same cause, but did not attempt to collect.

Mrs. John A. Stratton, who has done a great deal for the school garden movement and other civic activities, is seriously ill and is not expected to recover.

The Louisville Flower Mission will continue to operate independently, and receive assistance from the Associated Charities, although all other charities have been organized under one parent body.

The New Albany (Ind.) Water Co. has asked for a five per cent. surcharge in rates, which would make a 15 per cent. increase in all for the past two years. Louisville florists have been fortunate in that the water company is municipally operated and has always been a money maker. O. V. N. S.

Washington, D. C.

Gude Bros. Co. is hitting the market just right and is reaping a harvest as the result of taking a chance on open weather before Christmas. Despite the pessimistic talk in the trade some months ago, that the florist business was about to be wiped out of existence and that it would be impossible to get coal, etc., this firm went ahead and planted more heavily than ever, with the idea of having the stock come through early.

"With a shortage of stock greater than ever in the history of the local market," said Mr. Gude, "and a demand several times as great as we have ever had before, and with Christmas prices prevailing all through the month, our foresight in going ahead with our plans is now standing us in good stead. The extremely cold Winter last season and the other difficulties deterred many growers from taking a chance this year. We figured, however, that we could push our stock along, take our profit while the business was obtainable and then stand a freeze-out after Christmas if that should happen.

"We have the flowers now, and the worst difficulties have disappeared. Unfortunately, the relief came so late that many of the florists will be without stock. In anticipation of a Lily shortage, we put in several thousand more Callas and we expect to do better with these than with the Japanese Lilies. The usual run of potted plants, including Marguerites in 8in. pots, Glory of Cincinnati Begonias and other desirable stock will be offered in time to take care of the rush."

Baltimore, Md.

Stock Extremely Scarce

There is an extreme scarcity of all varieties of cut flowers and the few which find their way to the market are eagerly bought up at good prices. There is a fair cut of Roses but not nearly enough for the demand and the same may be said of Carnations. There is little for the retailer to choose from aside from Roses and Carnations.

'Mums are over and little bulbous stock is in yet. Some Stevia is to be had but few Easter Lilies, although both these and Callas are coming in; the recent cloudy weather has been against production. However, there is prospect of a little larger supply for the holiday season.

About Town

Wm. C. Price and his son have made good progress toward getting the Towson Nurseries established, and the place is now in good shape. A tract of 45 acres adjoining the present nursery has recently been acquired, so that they have plenty of room to expand, which Mr. Price plans to do.

The first bulbous stock of the season, consisting of a few Paperwhites and Soleil d'Or Narcissi made its appearance this week in John Cook's window. Mr. Cook is enjoying his annual Winter stay in Florida.

Isaac H. Moss has a lot of Poinsettias to use for cut flowers for Christmas. These will be in good shape at the right time.

Some madeup baskets of Begonias, Poinsettia plants, well fruited Orange trees and other plants which are intended for holiday sales, all show by their handiwork and arrangement the creative talent of our friend Robert Halliday, whose method of arranging plants is beautifully individual and distinctive.

Geo. Cook has recently added a Ford truck to his establishment. He has quite a bit of material already on hand to build more greenhouses, as soon as labor conditions will permit his doing so.

Erdman & Ulrich are growing an enormous lot of ferns in all sizes and their madeup baskets and boxes of Crotons, Begonias and Poinsettias and seasonable plants for holiday trade are well worthy of mention. Mr. Ulrich also announced that after this season the firm would confine itself to wholesale business exclusively and discontinue the retail end of the business.

The Seidewitz Flower Shop is showing a fine lot of well flowered Cyclamen plants in all sizes. The business, which was that of the late Edwin A. Seidewitz, is being continued by his sons, William E. being in charge of the store and Edwin acting as manager of the greenhouses at Arlington.

Mrs. Mary J. Thomas, a relative of the late Robert Halliday, and who was very well known to the older generation of the trade, died recently at her home in Rowland Park, at the ripe age of 82 years.

The labor situation is gradually improving here, due to the completion of many of the war construction projects and the gradual closing down of the munition works adjacent to the city. This has resulted in the release of many men, who are now available for employment in other lines of industry, which have heretofore been suffering from want of sufficient labor to carry them on properly.

Holiday Prospects

There is every prospect for a satisfactory holiday trade and while the supply of cut flowers will not be as large as usual there will no doubt be more than there have been during the past few weeks. Blooming plants of all kinds are in excellent demand, but the available supply is light and many ferns and palms will no doubt be used in their stead.

The writer is pleased to announce that he is again with the Leo Niessen Co., and now that we are returning once more to normal conditions he will endeavor to keep EXCHANGE readers informed through its columns of the happenings among the trade in and around that metropolis of the South, Baltimore.

WILLIAM F. EKAS.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Stock was scarce last week and prices high. The outlook for Christmas is promising. Indications point to good prices, though not an oversupply of anything. Design work has taken up practically all the stock in the market.

Arthur Kowalski, of the Colonial Flower Shop, exhibited well executed paintings at this week's exhibition of the Buffalo Arts Club.

Scott, the florist, is featuring Begonias and Cyclamens for the Christmas trade. These are grown in the firm's own greenhouses. George Schlicht, who was greenhouse man for Scott's, fought valiantly in the thickest of the fight in France. He was a machine gunner. His friends are rejoicing because he writes that he has escaped without a scar. Frank McGee, former store man at Scott's, has been mustered out at Camp Dix, where he was mess sergeant for the past year. He recently passed through Buffalo for Detroit, where his wife is living. He may take up civilian employment in that city.

Fort Porter, Buffalo, now a hospital for wounded soldiers, will be used as a demobilization base for wounded soldiers, it is believed.

A civic center for Buffalo, with park and floral features, is urged by George H. Norton, chairman of the City Planning Commission. Niagara Square, where the McKinley monument is located, may be the site chosen. The plan would include a testimonial to the boys who took part in the war.

Supt. J. H. Jackson of Queen Victoria Park, at Niagara Falls, Ont., said that the park would be opened to the public immediately.

The graduate course in landscape design and that in forestry may be taken up as part of the regular college course at the State College of Agriculture at Cornell, beginning Dec. 30. Students, including those discharged from military duty, taking this course may complete a full year of university work by the end of August.

S. A. Anderson, local florist and treasurer-elect of Erie County, recently gave a luncheon at the Iroquois Hotel to outgoing members of the staff of County Treasurer Bard, and their successors.

Supt. John J. Roesch of the Department of Public Markets, of Buffalo, has laid down a rule for regulation of prices of Christmas trees. The rule requires marketmen to tag their trees so that customers may see the prices. To insure compliance with the regulation, dealers on public markets are required to put up a deposit, ranging as high as $75.

JOSEPH A. MCGUIRE.

Lancaster, Pa.

The war has had nothing on the weather. I doubt if ever in the history of cut flower production business has fallen to the low percentage it has right now. With prospects of help from Sweet Peas along comes a 96 hours stretch of cloudy, rainy, warm, murky weather, and starts the buds dropping, and growers' hopes for a good Christmas crop.

The retailer is up against a reasonable demand with scarcely any flowers to fill it, and is naturally sore over the high prices he has to pay for cut flowers, yet has he any real cause? The grower (excepting in a few cases) is not making as much as he would with a normal crop and normal prices. He has many troubles of which the retailer knows nought. Many is the time he has had to take a price 500 per cent. below the cost of production with the retailer perfectly satisfied to make the abnormal profit it netted. Why deny the poor grower his occasional day of reckoning.

But don't forget the customer. There is reason in all things and we must not let the demand and supply end of present conditions make us ignore the fact that the good will of the customer is to be maintained but will not be if value is not given. W. C. d'Arcy defines "good will" as "an option on opportunity, a preemption of the markets of tomorrow, a discoverer of new fields, the surest means of tiding over a period of readjustment, and the only reliable insurance which a business can buy." For the sake of our business let us be wise and look a little beyond the dollar. I would like to make this stronger, but THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE would not be allowed to print it.

The Rosery has joined the F. T. D. Ass'n and is prepared to handle any business that it may bring. It had a shortage of flowers but what it had were good and the plants and Christmas reds make the store attractive. Mrs. Moore, proprietor, spent several days in Philadelphia looking up stock.

Walter Hammond is buying only enough to keep his regular customers supplied and does not expect trouble over the holidays as he will push the plant end of the business.

Mrs. Goldbach is working along the same lines and has had a run on flowers for a local opera given here.

H. A. Schroyer is getting flowers from local growers. He sent Miss Carrie Steckman to Philadelphia the past week to look up stock personally.

The weather has put several growers out of commission for a few days, among them Harry K. Rohrer, Willis B. Girvin. Even the writer had to miss his first day for five years on account of sickness by staying home one day the past week with a rheumatic arm, superinduced by the weather and a grouchy disposition.

Charles H. Hamilton, Jr., of Corrugated Fiber Products, was in Lancaster the past week with the market going down in his line and little business on this account.

W. O. Smith, of Carlisle, and family, motored to Lancaster to look up the Geranium situation.

Lancaster County Florists' Ass'n

On account of the close proximity to the holidays the date of our regular meeting was changed to Tuesday, Dec 10, and the place the Brenneman Building. The meeting was called to order by President Elmer Weaver with a little routine business and the nomination of officers for the ensuing year. The club's precedent of holding all officers over for a second term was not broken at this meeting with the result of the following nominations: President, Elmer Weaver, of Ronks; vice-president, Lemon Landis, of Lancaster; secretary, Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster; treasurer, Harry K. Rohrer, of Lancaster.

The next meeting to be held in our regular rooms at the Chamber of Commerce will be a joint meeting with the Ladies' Auxiliary which will assist in arranging a program. The president appointed Messrs. David Rose, Rudolph Nagle and Lemon Landis to take charge of the sports for the evening. An adjournment was then made to the table and a buffet lunch, after which bowling, cards, billards and pool followed. J. Wade Galey, of Strasburg, carried first prize for high score in bowling, and Chas. B. Herr, of Strasburg, honors in cards. H. A. Schroyer was champion story teller, and Albert M. Herr and B. F. Barr "dusters," as they went to a venison dinner at the Elks' Club about 10 p.m.

A. F. Strickler and Lemon Landis were voted delightful hosts. The remaining member of the committee, Harry K. Rohrer, sick in bed, was extended a vote of sympathy. President Weaver's hot coffee and sweet cider was enjoyed by all. About 11:30 the affair was a thing of the past, but the remembrance of it will linger for many a day with those fortunate enough to be there.

"Twilight and Evening Bell"

Miss Mary Wilson, sister of Geo B. Wilson, president of the Wheatland Greenhouse Co., died on Sunday night, Dec. 9, and was buried Thursday Dec. 14. She was hostess for her brother at the home of ex-President Buchanan, purchased by Mr. Wilson a number of years back. Aside from her numerous friends in this city she had many loving acquaintances among the visitors to this historic spot. The funeral was largely attended and the floral offerings numerous. Mr. Wilson has the sympathy of the trade in his bereavment.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Should the weather of the past two weeks continue, there will be few flowers for the Christmas trade. Last week there were about six hours of sunshine. Flowers are still scarce and high prices prevail. Carnations sold at $10 and $12 per 100, the highest price known for this time of year. The few Roses seen each day are sold at high prices as soon as they reach the market, $8 to $20 per 100 seems to be the usual price. Good Russell sell at 35c.; Am. Beauty are more plentiful than any other Rose and move slowly. Specials sell at 75c. each with shorter grades in proportion. All other flowers sell well at high prices. Valley, Peas, Calendulas, Primroses, orchids and Paperwhites are being received daily. Lilies are scarce and clean up well each day at $3 per doz. Some few Callas are coming also. Prices for Christmas will be the highest ever known and may have a tendency to discourage flower buyers as the retailer will sell his customers something else rather than ask such high prices. It is the opinion of some dealers that the price will hurt the flower business as artificial flowers and plants will soon take their place. Almost everyone is preparing for a heavy business, and the shops have an attractive appearance due to wreaths, baskets, attractive plants and beautiful arrangements of Boxwood and Christmas greens. This week some good Holly sold well at $6 to $7.50 per case.

Trade Brevities

Thos. Silverblatt, discharged from the U. S. Army, returned home last Saturday. Before entering the service he was manager of the floral department at the Wm. Penn Hotel.

Geo. McCallum has been transferred from Municipal Pier, Chicago, to a training vessel at New York to complete his course in the U. S. Navy.

McCallum received two carloads of fancy Holly last week. It was disposed of in two days.

Rochester, N. Y.

Stock of all kinds is extremely scarce here and difficulty is experienced in getting enough to supply the increasing demands, which though prices are higher than at any previous time, keeps up. All available stock is cleaning up almost as soon as it comes in. Roses, Carnations, Lilies, 'Mums and Violets are about all the flowers that can be had in any quantity. Late 'Mums are moving in fine shape at good prices and are filling a gap which the shortage of other flowers would have made. The outlook for Christmas flowers is not encouraging. Unless something unforseen happens there will be an acute shortage. Demands for Christmas greens show decided increase over those of last year. This undoubtedly shows that more decorating is being done. Plants for Christmas will no doubt be on the short side, there being only a fair amount on hand. This will no doubt be cleaned up quickly.

Interior fixtures have been installed in the new seed store of Hart & Vick Inc. The store presents a handsome appearance and is up to date in every particular.

At the last regular meeting of the Rochester Florist Ass'n, invitations were sent to the ladies and the last and most successful meeting of the year was the consequence. Charles Zoller generously offered to show his latest series of color plates depicting scenes from his recent travels in California and some of the famous Busch gardens. These were shown for the first time to the Rochester florists. About 60 members and their friends were in attendance. Light refreshments were served.

Why Subscribe if You Don't Read?

When the editor makes every effort to produce an up to date paper and places on record the news of the week and all matters of information which concern the trade, it is discouraging to have subscribers write letters of inquiry a week or two later asking for replies to questions concerning such and such a matter, whereas if they had read their paper with any attention whatsoever they would have found their questions had already been fully covered.

MERCHANTVILLE, N. J.—The business of the late Benjamin Connell will be closed out. His widow, Mrs. Elizabeth F. Connell, states that circumstances do not permit of her continuing same, although she may take a few odd orders, her association with her husband in the business having taught her a number of things of interest which may be of some future benefit.

Plants for the Holidays

Prepare now for Christmas. There is going to be a big demand for plants this year. The war is over and there is joy in every home; your customers will want fine plants to decorate their festive boards and to make presents. There has been a scarcity of help the past year and many growers had to close some of their houses; a great many places closed up for good which, no doubt, will make good stock scarce. We have a very fine stock of plants and will give you good value for your money. We recommend the placing and shipping of orders early, as there is no telling what the weather or railroad conditions will be later on.

FERNS. Our ferns are very fine this year, and we will give you good stock.

NEPH. Scottii and Teddy Jr. 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in. pots, $7.20 per doz.; 7-in. pots, $12.00 per doz.; 8-in. pots, $1.50 each; 12-in. tub fern, $3.00 each.

NEPH. Bostonensis. 6-in. pots, $6.00 per doz.

NEPH. Norwood. 6-in. pots, $7.20 per doz.

NEPH. Smithi. 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.

PTERIS Wilsoni. 3 plants in 6-in. pan, very fine, $4.20 per doz. 4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.

HOLLY FERNS. 4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.

ASPLENIUM Nidus Avis (Bird's Nest Fern). 5-in. pots, fine stock, $9.00, $12.00, $15.00 per doz.

FICUS Elastica (Rubber Plant). 6-in. pots, $7.20 and $9.00 per doz.; 7-in. pots, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz., extra fine.

ASPARAGA Plumosa. 3-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

DISH FERNS. 2½-in. pots, the best varieties, $6.00 per 100.

HARDY IVIES. Fine plants, staked, 5-in. pots, $3.60 per doz., 6-in. pots, $6.00 doz.

To save express charges, please mention if pots are wanted.

Cash with order. No plants shipped C. O. D. All shipments travel at purchaser's risk and we are not responsible for any delay in transit, as our responsibility ceases when delivery is made to Express Company.

37 WARREN ST., NEW YORK

Foreclosure Sale

On January 8th, 1919, at 10 A.M., on the steps of the Queens County Court House, Long Island City, N. Y.

An exceptional greenhouse property and dwelling, situated at Whitestone Ave. and Higgins Lane, Flushing, Long Island, New York, 7 miles from Manhattan, via Queensboro Bridge.

Three acres of land. 12 greenhouses (about 25,000 ft. of glass), Hitchings, Lord & Burnham and Wm. Lutton builders, in 1st-class condition; side walls and all benches built of concrete in most practical manner; 15 frames, 100x6 ft., built of concrete; 10 frames, 100x6 ft., built of wood; all heated by hot water. "Ideal" and Hitchings' boilers, practically new, heat the place. Concrete cellars for coal, stables, pot sheds and other buildings make it an unusually well planned place for growing pot plants. For years Ericas, Acacias, etc., were made a specialty of by H. D. Darlington, later by Knight & Struck.

A conservative valuation of the entire plant, including land, is $50,000.

Premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage of $15,000, interest at 6%.

Horticultural Society Meeting

In recognition of the good work done by the New Haven Horticultural Society, during the past year, in war garden work and other activities, the city of New Haven has placed at the disposal of the society a fine room in the City Hall for future meetings. This is gratifying and will put new life and vigor into the society.

At the meeting on Dec. 10 a committee was appointed by President Geo. W. Cromie to draft a plan for a big membership drive. It includes E. F. Coe, president Elm City Nursery Co., B. G. Leeper, and John Weigand, who will probably develop a practical and systematic campaign plan. Other business transacted was the re-election of all the old officers. E. F. Coe and Walter Shaw were added to the board of managers.

The silver cup offered again this year by John N. Champion & Co., florists, was awarded to Frank C. Sheldon, of the Connecticut Experiment Station, for receiving the highest number of points for flowers exhibited at our meetings throughout the year. Number of points was 4230.

The committee on trial grounds at Storrs College submitted a set of rules for testing flowers, but for lack of some necessary information the matter was tabled until next meeting.

The meeting for Dec. 24, falling on Christmas eve, will be postponed until Jan. 14.

A letter from Miss Emma Slocombe was read saying that her father, John H. Slocombe, the veteran Dahlia grower, was not improved in health. His long illness has left him very weak. We miss his cheerful presence at our meetings as he has been a regular attendant for years, and has brought in many interesting seedlings for discussion.

WM. J RATHGEBER.

Bridgeport, Conn.

During the past few weeks there has been an unusual scarcity of cut flowers for this season of the year. Although the weather has been warm, it has been cloudy, which has had much to do with curtailing the supply. This is especially true of Carnations. Several of the trade who depend entirely on the wholesalers for their supply, report that the wholesale price is so high that they are obliged to raise the retail price to $1.50 per doz. However, in spite of the top notch prices, people have bought everything up eagerly. November business showed a decided increase over any previous year.

Several florists report that Chadwick 'Mums are still making a fine showing. Violets are of good quality, but the supply is short. Easter Lilies are bringing good prices. Stevia helps out wonderfully in funeral work. Calendulas and Bouvardia are in good supply.

Cyclamens, Jerusalem Cherries, Poinsettias, ferns, Begonias, Primroses, Crotons, etc., are much in evidence. Effective combinations of some of these plants displayed in novelty baskets have been noticed in the windows.

Holly, Laurel and all Christmas greens are so high and scarce that the market is poorly supplied this year. The local florists expect to charge much higher prices for wreaths and roping, etc., on this account.

Various Observations

George Pflomm reports that he is well fixed for a large Christmas trade. This firm has an excellent display of Christmas novelties in baskets filled with foliage, Orange trees, Crotons, etc., which make the window exceptionally attractive. Funeral work has kept all hands so busy that they are getting tired out.

Robert Hawkins says business is splendid; the bulk of trade, however, runs to funeral work. He is preparing for a large Christmas trade, and has a splendid assortment of potted plants, etc., on hand. This firm reports that cut flowers are [illegible] and high.

John Reck and Son have opened a branch store at the corner of Main and [illegible] Hill sts. They made several large pieces recently for the Bullard funeral, which called for a number of American Beauty Roses.

James Horan & Son have so many orders booked for roping, wreaths, decorative greens, etc., that they do not know where they will get enough to supply the demand. Their 'Mums are gone, but their large greenhouses have a splendid crop of Carnations, Stevia, etc., on hand. They are also cutting fine Narcissus. Mr. Horan is having hard work to get enough Violets to fill his orders. Funeral work keeps all hands busy, and is bringing good prices.

The Park Garden and Flower Shop has received a shipment of Holly, which is exceptionally good. It has already started delivering Christmas orders. Most of these are baskets filled with plants sent to the sick. Chadwick 'Mums and pompons are still being cut at their greenhouses, also a good crop of Callas. Carnations are not flowering rapidly on account of the cloudy weather. George Skinner, a former chauffeur for this firm, is still on the other side, but hopes soon to return.

Julius Reck reports that the demand for floral designs continues heavy. He is cutting good Easter Lilies and Sweet Peas.

Frank Foehrenbeck's Carnations are a little backward at present, but he has a nice crop coming along for Christmas. He is still cutting nice 'Mums and cold storage Easter Lilies. In coldframes he has planted 35,000 Pansies, many of which are in blossom.

James E. Beach has promising Poinsettas for Christmas trade. Judging from the appearance of his greenhouses, he will be plentifully supplied with cut flowers and potted plants. A fine crop of Callas was noted here. Funeral orders have kept all hands going day and night to keep up with the rush.

Gus. F. Herthal, of the West End Florist, is making greater preparations than ever before for the Christmas trade.

The New York Florist has had a busy week. Its window is decorated effectively with Christmas novelties.

Fred Kolb has his houses filled with his usual number of splendid Carnations.

F. E. B.

New Bedford, Mass.

All report business as rather quiet, but everyone is busy preparing for Christmas. Wreaths and baskets will be as predominant as in other years if not more so this year on account of blooming plants being scarce. Flowers are high at present and few are carrying any large amount of stock. Funeral work is plentiful.

Trade Personals

Davenport is making a nice showing of green plants and has some elegant Christmas wreaths prepared for the rush. He has installed a new heater in his shop and made more or less improvement throughout.

Ed. Peirce, who is preparing to close nearly all his houses until Spring, reports business as good.

We regret to say Ed. Shaw's daughter is sick again at the hospital; however, she is improving nicely and hopes to be well again soon.

Wm. P. Peirce, Jr., has arrived from overseas and is looking fine. He has been in several battles, has been gassed and wounded, and is glad to be back to good old U. S. A. He speaks highly of the Red Cross and the Salvation Army. Kate Peirce is now well again and back to business.

Society Holds Annual Meeting

The Newport Hort. Society held its annual meeting on Tuesday evening, Dec. 10, when the following officers and standing committees were elected:

Pres., Frederick Carter; first vice-pres., Arthur W. Potter, Jr.; second vice-pres., James Hooper; Rec. Secy., Fred P. Webber; Finan. Sec'y, William Quay; Treas., Richard Gardner; Sergt. at Arms, William F. Smith. Executive Committee: The officers named and Andrew S. Meikle, Esau Kampanaar, Bruce Britterton, Charles Philpot, Alexander MacLellan, James Robertson, John B. Urquhart and James Watt. Auditing Committee: Herbert Blin, Bruce Butterton and Andrew S. Meikle.

The year just closed has been an unusual one. There has been a falling off in attendance at the meetings. The regular exhibitions were given up to make way for one-day monthly shows, which developed considerable interest among amateurs and children, but resulted in a decided falling off in professional interest. To remedy the lack of interest in the society's regular meetings a proposition was made to hold only one meeting each month the coming year, which, however, was voted down, it being felt that with the war over prosperity and normal conditions will soon again prevail.

"Plant Exclusion an Accomplished Fact" from THE EXCHANGE was read and came as a surprise to some who do not seem to wake up until too late.

Business over, the entertainment committee served refreshments and a pleasant hour spent together.

ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., on Wed. Dec. 11 at 6.45 p.m. In spite of the inclement weather there was a large attendance, with Pres. Robt. Jones in the chair. The Judges appointed for the monthly exhibits were: Thos. Twigg, Wm. Noonan and Geo. Platt. They awarded the president's special prize for the best table decoration, for assistant gardeners only, to Hennig Michaelson, assist. to Geo. Ferguson, second, John Gailens, assist. to Wm. Churchill.

Treasurer Ernest J. Brown presented a creditable annual report, showing that the society has completed a successful season, both in point of membership and financially.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Joseph Adler, Pres.; Frank Watson, Vice-pres.; Ernest J. Brown, re-elected Treas.; Ernest Westlake re-elected, Sec'y; Harry Goodband, re-elected Cor. Sec'y; Robt. Jones, Trustee for three years. Executive Committee: William Noonan, Thos. Henderson, Ben. Sutherland, Wm. Milstead, Wm. Churchill, W. G. Carter and Thos. Meech.

There was a short discussion on "How to Grow Amaryllis and when to test them." A letter of condolence was ordered sent the family of the late A. Hans, a member who died recently. Exhibits for the next meeting, to be held on Wed. Jan. 8, at 2 p.m., are: three Poinsettias, cut, 25 spikes of Freesias and six ears of field Corn.

After the meeting a very enjoyable social entertainment and smoker was held.

Club Meeting

The regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club was held in Dunlop's Hall on Dec. 9. As Mr. Geraghty was absent in Chicago, the chair was occupied by Vice-President H. G. Dillemuth.

It was decided to hold a banquet in conjunction with others interested in the flower business in March, at which the executive of the Canadian Horticultural Society will be entertained. The committee appointed to take charge of this for the club are as follows: J. A. Neal, chairman; J. J. Higgins and H. James.

Literature for Christmas advertising was distributed. The attractive blotters and stickers contain baskets of Poinsettias.

The greater part of the evening was taken up with the discussion of Mr. Dillemuth's paper on costs given at the November meeting. It was pointed out that where the florist occupies quarters over the store the house and store accounts should be kept separate. Florists should charge their salaries against the business. In fixing the price of a bunch of flowers they should remember that the flowers must be wrapped in paper, perhaps boxed, asparagus or fern thrown in, tags attached and the flowers delivered. All this means expense as well as salaries, rent, heat and taxes and must be considered in making the charge.

It is a common practice in some lines of business to add one per cent. to the selling price to cover the cost of advertising. More florists are now using newspaper space and in addition collective advertising should be done by the club such as using some of the bill boards for holidays, New Years, Easter, Mother's Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas and for the 'Mum show.

THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE was quoted to show the advantage of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. In one city the size of Toronto the shipments amounted to $100 a day for a month and the incoming business amounted to $83 a day for the same period. This was quoted to show the power of organized advertising. Some other examples were also given. The rising cost of flowers was also discussed. Florists are asked to pay $8 a case for Holly and $5 a hundred for ground Pine wreathing wholesale.

Mr. Dillemuth was in receipt of a request from the President of the Chicago Club asking for information regarding the operation of the Toronto Club.

The next regular meeting will be held on Jan. 6.

Business Brevities

George Geraghty, who has returned from a buying trip to Chicago, hopes to be in a better position than in the past two or three years to take care of the Christmas trade. Every evidence indicates that business will be bigger than ever if the stock of flowers is sufficient to take care of the demand.

At present a great deal of stock is being used for decorative purposes. Many of the florists have big jobs on hand such as decorating the big stores for Christmas. J. J. Higgins and H. G. Dillemuth have been busy during the past week making the big piano houses and other places assume a Christmas air. Large stocks of decorating material have been ordered and there is a good demand for it though it looks as if the supply of ferns would not be sufficient.

Retailers are discussing the question of licensing stores which open for a month or two at the busy seasons and are not to be seen when the tax collector makes his rounds. This will have its effect in the floral business and will protect legitimate retail businesses.

Wreaths are used in the cemeteries during the Winter. Trade in these has been especially heavy this year.

Mr. Neal reports that the stores are going in more for potted plants this year than formerly owing to the shortage of cut flowers. He thinks, however, that now the war is over, this situation will be remedied next year. The many restrictions on the various lines of business are being rapidly removed and the florist trade will, no doubt, soon return to old proportions.

Discussing the question of costs, Mr. Neal said that it is important that each department pay its own way. Nothing is to be gained in pooling the expenses. Greater profits might be made by sacrificing a department. The cost sheet ought to show where the profits are being made.

Flower prices are on the upward trend and will be still higher next week. Present ones are as follows: Orchids, $1 each; Roses $5, $6 and $7. Violets $1.50 per bunch. No American Beauty Roses are obtainable.

Carl Grobba will have an abundance of potted plants. Adams has a supply of Cyclamen, more than any previous year. The Toronto Floral Co. has a good looking lot of ferns and Cyclamen.

Trade Personals

J. J. Higgins has returned from Chicago where he secured a large amount of material for the Christmas trade. He is looking after a large number of decorating jobs.

Harrison of Roncesvalles ave., has stocked up with a large amount of Christmas trees. Because the war is over he expects the sales this year will be as large as previous to 1914.

Mrs. Moore of the Peoples' Florist has been visiting in Buffalo.

G. H. & Emma Emery, florists, Windsor, have sold out to Lucritia J. Bamford.

Mr. Yavner of the Arcade Florist, was in Chicago recently.

W. McClure of the Dale Estate, Brampton, has taken a position in the store of H. G. Dillemuth.

D. J. Cooke, who spent two years and a half in France, returned to his old job in Dillemuth's store. The confinement brought on his old trouble which developed in France and he has been admitted to the hospital.

At the Guelph Winter Fair, R. R Moore, Norwich, Ont., was first in seeds of Mangel, Turnip, Beet, Onion, Parsnip Cucumber, Tomato and Garden Pea. R. H Crosby was first on Carrot and Mr Letch on garden Bean seed.

The American Everblooming Hydrangea

An interesting history of one of our native American shrubs—Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora—which has also become one of the most popular.

By E. Y. Teas, of Eaton, Ohio, vetetan nurseryman

Nearly 20 years ago an employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Pittsburgh was given a job in Piqua, O. When moving to the latter city the wife of this man took with her a plant of this Hydrangea and slips from it were distributed about the city, so that in 1906 and 1907 I was able to collect 50 plants, paying from 50c. to $5 each, according to size. The plant was universally known there as "Everblooming" because it bloomed nearly all the Summer, while the better known H. paniculata grandiflora bloomed only in August and September.

The only authoritative history of the discovery of this plant is given by William Falconer, superintendent of Schenley Park, in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE of Aug. 14, 1904, wherein he says: "James Semple is a retired Pittsburgh florist now living at Avalon, a suburb of Allegheny. He is the Semple of China Aster fame, a canny old Scotchman and as wealthy as Crœsus. But retired as he is he cannot give up his love for flowers and pottering among plants. He and Wm. A. Shafer, former secretary of our botanical society, were out in the woods one Summer day a year or two ago, and there discovered growing wild a plant of our everyday native Hydrangea, H. arborescens, with large heads of sterile blossoms (in common talk we say "double flowers") as big and full and perfect as our ordinary Otaksa and pure white. His keen, practical eye at once saw its merit as a garden plant and his business sagacity told him that there was money in it.

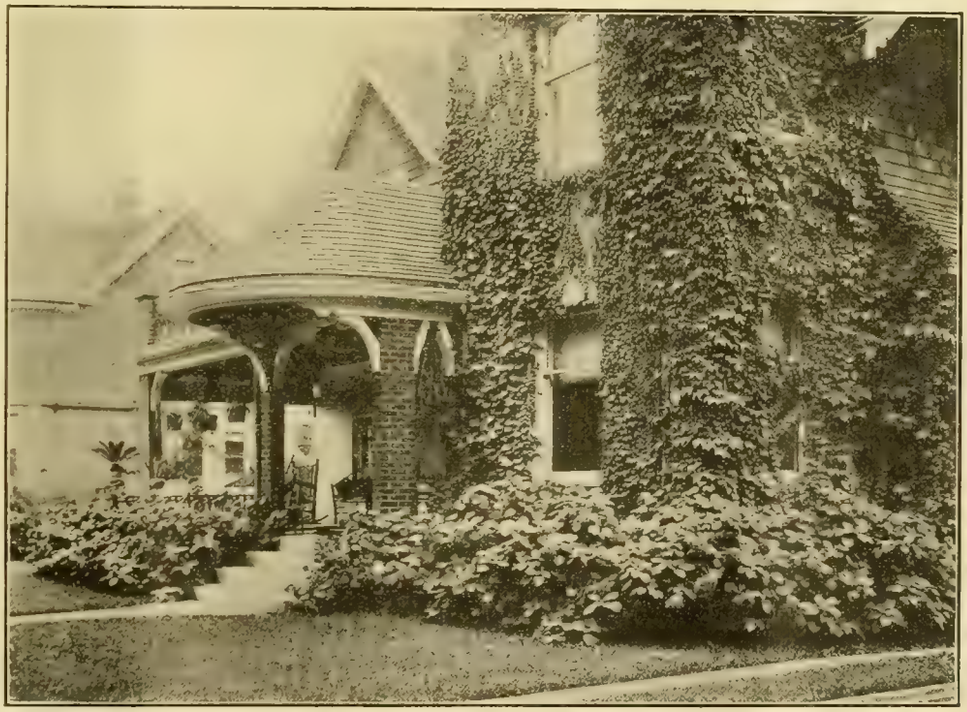
"So he secured every morsel of it, brought it home to his garden, planted it and is now propagating it. In a year he expects to have a thousand plants and to sell them at $5 per plant. I advised him to sell it in a lump to a novelty man for $1000, but he treated my proposition with disdain. I forgot that he didn't need the money, but were the stock mine I would have readily taken $1000 for it; but then you see that's where I am short in business and lean in pocket, while he is long headed in trade and full in pocket.

"But this Hydrangea is a mighty fine thing. It comes in bloom the first week in June, and lasts in full bloom well into July and is as hardy as a Dandelion."

This plant must have been in cultivation in Pittsburgh many years before it was discovered by Mr. Semple. It must have been fifteen years or more prior to 1904 that the lady brought it to Piqua. This lady died several years ago and the origin, as far as she was concerned, cannot be learned. I have been acquainted with the native type about 80 years. I have seen acres of the clumps but never an indication of any break from the normal. Why it is called "arborescens" is a mystery to me, as there is never noted any tendency to assume a woody, tree fern character.

As to its continuous blooming: There are hundreds of blooming clumps in this village (Eaton, O.) in all kinds of positions, on the north, south, east and west sides of buildings, and there are fresh blooms to be seen every day from early June until sharp frost, about the last of October. There is one peculiarity about the ripened bloom I have not noticed in any other flower. After the whiteness of the flower begins to fade, the bloom assumes a green color, and finally attains about the color of the foliage and remains so until the foliage begins to ripen while the Japan form ripens early and by the end of October is dry enough to burn.

As to its everblooming habit: There is a clump of a dozen plants set next to the cement foundation of the residence (See illus.) about 2ft. apart, five years planted, in ordinary loam soil that has never been fertilized; plants stand 3½ft. high and are as much across; these were not without some bloom every day from early June until October 1, and yet we had severe droughts during August and September.



Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora, five years' growth, cut down about 6-in. each February. Furnishes a harmonious base setting to the Ampelopsis Veitchii vines which frame the house

Hardy Bulbs, Their Rightful Place in the Garden

While there are a good many people who still associate bulbs in their minds with mere transients and annuals, the knowledge of their true worth in permanent plantings is fast growing.

The importance of bulbs for outside planting was never more clearly illustrated than this Fall when by reason of the war, the transportation of them from Holland was so precarious that a very great shortage was announced by headquarters disseminators.

More disappointment was experienced perhaps because of the scarcity in what we might rightly call the permanent kinds such as Narcissus (Daffodils) in all the standard varieties and the May-flowering Tulips (Darwin and Cottage). It was nothing short of a clamoring for kinds and colors for certain preconceived effects and finally a hasty compromise to take any color or kind that one could lay their hands on.

The war coming to an issue, too, at this stage, many people who had hitherto vetoed planting of any description because it was not essential, suddenly bethought themselves of that Spring display obtained at little cost, and so the clamoring increased tenfold.

Those who "did their shopping early" fared best, of course, while many latecomers were not served at all.

Perhaps it may seem paradoxical but it nevertheless was quite encouraging to note the many disappointed inquirers for bulbs as it was surely a true indication of the good times coming for the seedsman, the florist and the nurseryman.

We have said nothing specific regarding the better and wider use of bulbs but rather in a general way tried to bring out the thought of their value when planted in some permanent position. Here undisturbed they, every year, without any effort on our part, make a cheerful appearance and because they are beautiful and among the first flowers of Spring, are hailed with appreciation by one and all. EDWIN MATTHEWS.

Blooming of the Century Plant

Although the blooming of the Century Plant, Agave americana, is not uncommon in the older cities of our country and in many country towns, it is safe to say but few persons have ever seen one in flower. There seems no set time for them to bloom. They are not inappropriately called Century Plants, for it is an age almost before one blooms. While there are but few records of the exact age of plants that have flowered it is known that within a period of no more than half a century plants have flowered. In climates similar to that of California, where plants of this kind are hardy, the growth is more rapid, and perfection leading to flowering is reached at a comparatively early age. In Bermuda this Aloe is in a half wild state, it is reported, and the plants grow so strongly that prodigious flower spikes result. There is no frost or but little where the American Aloe thrives. It will stand a degree or two, I know, but just how many I do not know. As it has passed through a few when without any protection, it would not surprise me if it would undergo 10 degrees if standing in a sheltered place.

Lysimachia clethroides

There is a Japanese species of the Loose Strife family and when seen at its best, is a most graceful and showy plant. It thrives best in a damp soil and grows to a height of about three feet. The flowers are full white and are borne on long nodding dense spikes. It is an excellent plant for the hardy border or better still by the margin of the lake or Lily pond, also useful as a cut flower, standing well when cut. In the Fall months the leaves take on bright tints which makes it a showy plant even after the flowers have gone. It is perfectly hardy and deserves to be more widely planted.

A correspondent advises us of conditions with which the majority of the retailers may well sympathize. He says the situation this Christmas for the retailer is without precedent, for "he has his back against the wall. I don't believe we will ever wish to recall this Christmas as a satisfactory one."

City residents are just now like Macbeth, who fell when "the forest" attacked him in his stronghold; for though no warrior is visible behind the Christmas trees that have come from the wilds, nevertheless it's a case of "fall" for the parent who has kiddies. This remark is called forth by the thousands of trees, constituting great forts which were lying this past week on West st., near Warren, awaiting purchasers and transformation into Christmas trees. The major portion of this business is said to be in the hands of one hard-headed Yankee, who runs a grocery store other times. The trees come from Vermont this year and will be dear, from $1.50 up. No trees are in from Maine on account of the quarantine.

Gardeners and Florist's Annual

There will be no Annual published for 1919 due to the disturbed trade conditions of the past months. That the Annual is an appreciated publication has been evidenced by the large sales it has had in the past and which it still continues to enjoy.

The publishers venture to express the hope that with the situation again becoming normal it will be possible for them to put forth a greatly improved book for 1920.

Christmas Transmittals

Secretary Albert Pochelon of the F. T. D. suggests to its members that never before at any holiday was it so necessary for them to use their own good judgment in transmitting telegraph delivery orders to outsiders; they should eliminate as far as possible the small orders of $2 to $3, as same would be hard to fill in most sections of the country on account of the scarcity of flowers and plants.

Re. Novelties

A respected subscriber submits the following:

To what purpose is the advertising campaign and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery service to the wholesale trade if it sits sadly by and waits for business to adjust itself?

Question is brought up because this grower of flower novelties recently had his novelty turned back on his hands, being advised to lay it on the shelf until business was good again, by the wholesale house which had previously bought it liberally, they claiming that at the time they wrote there was no market in their city for such material. The grower fortunately had other markets wherein he found no difficulty in disposing of the stock.

And what is the grower of novelties to do while waiting? And have not the retailer and wholesaler alike, for years, demanded from the grower novelties? And when he gets them, are they not the last thing that gets a push? And when the grower ceases to make a fair living, what will become of the entire trade? And if we all grow the same kind of stock for funeral work only, where does our vaunted progressiveness come in?

"On Earth Peace, Good Will Toward Men"

For the great majority of us it is easier to rejoice this Christmas than last. Then, the world was immersed in the greatest war of all history. The nations were attempting to solve the same problem which in a smaller way the United States had faced and solved half a century before. To use Lincoln's phrase they were testing whether any nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal could long endure." Hate and fury, the powers of Hell, were engulfing our sons—the world's best manhood. Thousands were making the supreme sacrifice and thousands more, it was felt, were doomed to follow.

Now the war has ended, our participation has been justified. Right again has triumphed over might. The world by means of the International Peace Congress, is to be made more safe for democracy. Our soldier sons, their services and sacrifices no longer needed, are returning jubilant by thousands weekly from the battlefields of Europe. We greet them with individual and national rejoicing, and if we fail to find the familiar faces of husbands or sons, brothers or sweethearts but see in their stead golden stars on our service flags, our regret is transfused with pride that these had their share in advancing the day prophesied by Isaiah when "nation shall not rise up against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

But if we look no deeper than this we are remiss—traitors to the cause which they "so nobly advanced." Again to quote Lincoln, "it is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion," so that through our individual rectitude and enlightened self sacrifice our example may so shine before our family, our community, our state, and our nation that the world may see our good works and glorify Our Father which is in Heaven.

Those of our readers who are familiar with "King Robert of Sicily", may apply Longfellow's quotation of the words of the Magnificat, "deposuit potentes de sede, et exaltavit humiles" to the present Christmas festival; for, to use the poet's translation, "He hath put down the mighty from their seat and hath exalted them of low degree." In a limited and personal sense we may see only the deposition of the kaiser and the celebration of the birth of Jesus of Nazareth. But a broader view will show that in the closing of the war there is a victory of right over might, and bright hopes for tolerance over tyranny, an advance in the brotherhood of man. Just as the birth of Jesus of Nazareth occurred while the world was full of hate and turmoil and without pomp ushered in the reign of the Prince of Peace, so may the Christmas which we celebrate this year bring to us all the blessings foretold by the Heavenly Host

"On Earth Peace, Good Will Toward Men"

The Christmas Situation

Due to the coal restriction order of last May on the one side, which had the effect of sending hundreds out of business, obliging others to close down a part of their ranges and discouraging the trade generally, and the unexampled prosperity of the general public on the other side, the prices for flowers for the Christmas holidays are receiving comment in this week's issue, far more so than ever before to our knowledge at this season.

Letters from correspondents are printed in this issue which the trade must understand are published because THE EXCHANGE holds that it has no right to ignore its readers' opinions, if such opinions are expressed without animus and in the endeavor to bring about a reasonable discussion which might lead to betterment of existing conditions.

Because we give publication to these letters it does not follow that these are editorial views. It can readily be understood, however, that there is a tremendous shortage of stock for the holidays and that when such shortages occur prices are bound to rule higher. This rule holds good in all lines of trade. Our caution to all concerned if a caution is necessary, would be to the effect that prices should be held down as low as is consistent with a reasonable profit. Attemps to explain the cause of advances cannot be gone into too minutely for obvious reasons Beyond the statement of the coal restriction and the discouragement of growers, little more need be said to account for the shortage. The retail trade is confronted with a condition, not a theory, and it is up to it to exert its best efforts to overcome or mitigate the situation through the exercise of tact and diplomacy.

The best customers should naturally be taken care of before the outsider or the casual buyer; this latter class of customer will come back, but the reliable patron must not be offended.

To elucidate our argument: When THE FLORSTS' EXCHANGE felt compelled, two years ago, to raise its subscription price, the publishers were astounded when it was ascertained that some few of its oldest subscribers failed to renew. These men were written to and the circumstances explained, but without effect, save in one or two instances. The point was that these men were really offended. They felt as though it was an attempt on the part of the publishers to take advantage of them, for a reason which did not exist, and seemingly, no argument could persuade them to the contrary. These men were not reachable in person; had they been it is quite probable that many of them would have been reclaimed, because a personal explanation would have carried weight, but the results serve to point out the fact that, in many instances understanding their customers, it would be even better for a retail florist to make a sacrifice at this one exceptional time rather than to encourage the disfavor of people who had been dealing with him regularly for years.

Selling cut flowers for this approaching holiday season is going to prove a problem to every retail salesman and will call for the exercise of every ounce of tact and diplomacy he possesses.

One method of dealing with old and respected customers people whose trade is valued, would be to tell them that on account of coal restriction, growers had been discouraged, many going out of business; that flowers on this account were scarce and extremely high. If the customer had been in the habit of buying $25 worth of flowers, and the price this Christmas for the same lot of flowers approximates $50, give the customer these facts, but tell him likewise: "Mr. Smith, you have been accustomed to paying $25 for these flowers; now the selling price this year for the same quality and quantity is more than double, and we feel we cannot ask you to pay the full price. We want you to have the flowers and we want to retain your patronage, so will make a sacrifice and will fill your order for $35 or $40 (as the case may be." In this way the customer is likely to be retained, and in many instances he will even go to the length of expressing his intention to pay the ruling price.

The New York Trade Meeting

An experienced observer at the meeting on Monday night in New York City, of growers, retailers and wholesalers, expressed the opinion that considerable has been accomplished in that progress was made in unexpected directions. A spirit of good fellowship had been engendered and those who came with a more or less antagonistic feeling had gone away with a more friendly one and with the realization of the possibilities of future cooperation, as well as that of standardizing many avenues of the business hitherto in more or less conflict the year around.

It was agreed that it was too late to establish prices for this Christmas; in fact it does not seem possible to establish prices in advance for any holiday of the year. It does not seem a practicable scheme to get at it that way, nor is it in accordance with law.

A number of speakers gave voice to the fact that prices at the present time were not high in proportion to what they had been at other Christmas seasons, and that they were only believed to be high by the retailers through their ability in former years better to control the situation. The present condition has been brought about through the scarcity of supply and the attractive markets presented elsewhere.

A good idea was brought forth when one attendant urged that the various branches of the industry appoint representative committees, the joint committee so composed to convene and outline a policy of cooperation that would be beneficial to all subsidiary branches of the industry the year around; this would give opportunity to discuss and solve the various phases of the particular problem of prices.

Christmas Prices

A Discussion as to their Cause and Effect, participated in by the Growers, Wholesale Florists and Retailers

The condition of the New York market for Christmas was such as to make advisable action by those interested. Accordingly on Monday evening, Dec. 16, there was held a joint meeting of retailers, wholesalers and growers, at 56 West 30th st., New York, the object of the meeting being to discuss Christmas, 1918, prices, in the endeavor to stabilize them, if possible, so that the retailers could gain some definite idea as to what prices to charge on advance orders. More than 100 of those interested were present from the New York district, including many well known in the trade.

John Nicholas was elected chairman of the meeting and Ward W. Smith, secretary.

There ensued a general discussion of the subject in which men from the various branches of the trade were each individually permitted to give their views. The retailers pointed out that prices of flowers had become so high that people, in many cases, refused to buy, leaving the store in disgust, and bought other things instead of flowers; thus regular customers were lost and the whole trade suffered. The retailers agreed that growers were entitled to higher prices, but that when goods were sold through what was designated as "illegitimate wholesalers," men who bought out the entire stock of the grower for cash and then boosted the price to the retailer, the latter was compelled to charge so high for the stock that customers would not buy.

Several growers spoke, giving examples of how the cost of coal and all other materials had gone up, so that greatly increased prices were necessary; also that greenhouse forces had been depleted, all of which very notably shortened the supply of stock; that prices were not really high, but only relatively so, since in the last few years they had been much too low and that even now prices were barely covering the cost of production. The remedy suggested was that prices be raised by the retailers to the ultimate consumer, who should be educated to the realization that flowers, like all other commodities, must be increased in price to meet the greatly increased cost of production.

In regard to fixing a price in advance for a holiday, one of the growers suggested that if the retailers would guarantee to pay this fixed price and not expect to take advantage of a drop in the market, the growers might be willing to set such a maximum price before a holiday. Several instances were given of retailers who had agreed to accept stock at a certain price before a holiday and then, because prices had dropped, had refused to accept the goods.

Another point that was brought out was that when stock was plentiful outside growers used the New York market as a "dumping ground," and that many of the retailers encouraged the practice by buying this "dumped" stock. On the other hand some of the retailers complained that many growers sold stock direct to automobile parties and other private people at less than the retailer could sell it for; thus prices were affected and customers taken away from the retailer; this and similar practices tended to give the impression that the retailer was charging too much.

As to price fixing it was pointed out that there would probably be legal and other obstacles in the way of doing this.

Although the discussion lasted about three hours, no definite action was taken. Two suggestions were made which, although too late to be of use this year, would undoubtedly help the situation in the future if adopted by all concerned. They were:

(1) That the retailers keep prices more nearly uniform, by charging higher prices during the season when stock was plentiful; thus there would not be so great a jump in prices at holiday times and retailers could afford, if necessary, even to sell stock at a loss at holiday seasons.

(2) That retailers show themselves loyal to the legitimate commission men, supporting them in times when stock was plentiful, so that the wholesaler and grower would not have to charge excessively high prices when stock was scarce in order to compensate themselves for low prices obtained during glut periods.

Although the discussion became lively at times, the tact of Chairman Nicholas prevented the speakers from indulging in personalities, and the meeting was marked by good humor and a genuine effort to get at the real facts, so that some common understanding might be arrived at for the benefit of all. The meeting undoubtedly did much good in showing each group the difficulties and problems of those in the other groups.

A few among those well known in the trade whose presence was noted and who spoke were the following: Pres. Chas. H. Totty of the S. A. F. and O. H.; Preselect Philip F. Kessler of the New York Florists' Club; also former Presidents Geo. E. M. Stumpp and Chas. Schenck; F. R. Pierson, Aubrey Nash, Max Schling and Frank H. Traendly.

Holiday Shipments Will Not Be Delayed

In our issue of Dec. 7 (p. 900) is printed a letter written by the officers of the Lancaster County (Pa.) Florists' Club to Hon. W. G. McAdoo concerning shipments of cut flowers and plants. Below we quote the reply sent to the club, Dec. 14, by F. G. Holbrook, manager, Express and Mail section of the United States Railroad Administration.

Lancaster County Florists' Ass'n,
661 West Chestnut street,
Lancaster, Penn.

Gentlemen:—

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of December 4th to the Director General, requesting that the American Railway Express Company be instructed to give priority to shipments of cut flowers and plants. The present instructions of the Express Company provide that such shipments must be given preferred attention and any embargoes on express matter that may be placed will not include shipments of cut flowers and plants. In order that these shipments may be properly handled during the holiday rush, I am requesting the Express Company to direct the attention of all employees to the necessity for handling shipments of cut flowers and plants promptly.

Yours very truly,
F. S. Holbrook,
Manager Express & Mail Section.

The Florists' Round Table

In this column readers are cordially invited to present their personal views on topics of interest to the trade. They must not conclude, however, that the editor necessarily agrees with them. THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE reserves the right to disagree even though it publishes the letters which follow. Its idea is to encourage discussion among readers themselves.

Unusual Conditions in Florist Business

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Unless something unexpected develops during the coming week the anticipated "big business" for Christmas will not materialize to the extent hoped for. The abnormal prices asked by growers for stock have reached a point where the retailers absolutely refuse to handle it. Fortunate is the retailer who grows some of his own stock for he will reap a rich harvest.

There is not the slightest doubt that the demand for flowers this year will be greater than ever before if normal prices obtain, but as a prominent florist said: "When it comes to paying $12.50 per 100 for Carnations at wholesale, the price we would have to charge would be prohibitory. It works an injury to the entire trade by creating an impression in the public mind that flowers are a pretty expensive luxury." For this reason the florists have reached a tentative understanding to have a quiet Christmas.

Of course, florists blame the growers; but as a matter of fact on investigating the amount of stock we found the houses nearly bare of flowers. Just why this should be so we have not fully determined. There seems to be plants enough, but no flowers. With the unusually favorable weather conditions there ought to be plenty. The solution of the problem seems to be that with the advertising flowers have been getting, the normal demand has doubled. The growers have hedged considerably this Fall owing to coal and labor conditions, so there are no extra stocks to meet the increased holiday demand.

The only ray of hope is that with Boston and New York wholesalers refusing to handle the stock at prices asked a considerable quantity will be thrown on the market in the smaller towns in time for Christmas trade.

It was a mistake, Mr. Grower, not to have the courage of your convictions and run your plants to the limit after the money you spent for National advertising. You simply did not realize what advertising can do.

New Haven, Conn.

Which Shall it Be?

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Under existing conditions of business I am sure great damage must result to our trade as a whole by advancing prices regardless of values. The ability to get a high price for any article of itself does not create value, but is more often taking advantage of another's necessity. I believe that large business can not be built on such foundations. "Fair values for money expended" in the end is a principle more likely to prove successful than that of taxing all the traffic will stand.

The price list as sent out for the holiday trade is certainly a notable production. Imagine that when it has simmered down it will cause Mr. Ultimate Consumer profound thought, for figuring the Carnation proposition at $12 to $20 per 100 it is hardly possible for the retailer to charge less than $3 per doz. So when Mr. U. Consumer takes his wife and family down town to do his Christmas trading in a town with a general price list like ours he stacks up against a situation something like this. With the same amount of money he can buy:

12 Carnations or a 7 lb. Turkey
12 Carnations or 3 bushels of Potatoes
12 Carnations or 50 lbs. best flour
12 Carnations or 1½ bushels of Apples
12 Carnations or 5 doz. of Oranges
12 Carnations or 4 doz. fresh eggs
12 Carnations or 1000 lbs. of soft coal
12 Carnations or 2 chickens
12 Carnations or a box of better cigars than the average florist smokes
12 Carnations or a 3 lb. box of candy
12 Carnations or a $2. shirt with collar and necktie thrown in 12 Carnations or $3. waist for a poor relation
12 Carnations or a pair of slippers for grandma.
12 Carnations or 6 pair of socks for those who like useful presents
12 Carnations or a pair of warm gloves
12 Carnations or a hat for another poor relation
12 Carnations or any one of a very numerous line of aluminum and similar goods both useful and ornamental, and so on ad lib.

I am personally of the opinion that when Mr. Ultimate Consumer thinks over all these things he will probably arrive at the conclusion that florists are profiteers.

Ant and Aphis Problem

One of the best ways of getting rid of ants is to fill small saucers about ½in.. to the edge with molasses and place these in the trails of the ant. Put a man on the job to watch them and as soon as the ants crowd around the edges of the saucers simply push them into the molasses. Keep this up for a day and not many will be left.

(The preceding is in reply to a letter from an Exchange subscriber which appeared on p. 825, issue of Nov. 23. Incidentally, we may say that, through a typographical error, this letter was signed W. B. McDonough. The letter really came from W. B. Burleigh, Troy, N. Y., to whom credit is hereby given for suggesting the discussion of the problem. The subject was further treated in our issue of Nov. 30 and we should be glad to hear from others interested.—Ed.)

"They don't Cross the Bridge—Until they Come to it"

A foreigner was talking over the phone one day last week and that was what he said of Americans.

So far as plant exclusion is concerned his statement carries truth.

When coal restriction was put into effect but a few short months ago there was little agitation on the surface until the time came that the coal was needed. When it was realized it wasn't obtainable there was universal consternation.

Coal Restriction at its worst would have been—was—but a temporary evil. Plant Exclusion is with us for good, to all appearances. Every florist in the land is vitally concerned—or, we have always had reason to believe such to be the fact—and yet the great mass of florists, if it is allowed to judge by their atmosphere of silence, are positively apathetic and indifferent to the far reaching results of this startling edict, the reason for which, so far as the interdiction of florists' field plants is concerned, remains unknown.

Plant Exclusion

A meeting was held last Thursday, Nov. 12, in regard to the plant restriction and exclusion ordinance recently drawn up by the Federal Horticultural Board, and signed by Secretary F. D. Houston, but of which particulars have not been as yet officially promulgated.

At this meeting quite a number of gentlemen prominent in the trade were present, each one of whom gave free expression to the conclusions formed in his own mind as to the effect this ordinance would have on the future of the horticultural business.

Commenting upon a recent utterance by Secretary Daniels to the effect that "everything that hinders world understanding and world commerce must be put aside," it was agreed, in answer to the question "What do we want?" that the trade asked only what the Government claimed was wanted; namely, permission to do business on a common sense understanding and commerce with the world at large.

After much discussion further action was left in abeyance, awaiting receipt of the published ruling, which it was understood would be ready shortly, before coming to a decision as to future collective action.

The New Rose Columbia

The striking characteristics of the new Rose Columbia are its great freedom of growth, the very quick production of numerous strong breaks to the plant, each running up a long stiff stem without pinching, producing "extras" and "specials" with less coaxing and attention than any other rose. Another point thoroughly appreciated by the grower is its freedom from thorns; the stem is nearly thornless for 10 to 12in. below the flower.

It is a nice, kindly grower, not troubled with either mildew or black spot. Being "double," it makes a good Summer rose, but it never shows a trace of "sticking" in the Winter time, opening its buds freely and holding its bright, clear color in the short, dark days of Winter.

A quality frequently commented upon is the fact of its clear peach pink color, deepening as the Rose matures, making a handsome, open flower of fine size.

Cut blooms from this Spring's planting were reaching the market in commercial quantity by June in most of the big cities, and these have received favorable comments by the press, showing the quick action of the new comer.

From the "set" of E. G. Hill's seedlings which were first shown in true character in early 1917, this variety was really selected and named by the representative body of florists, who, after attending the Carnation meeting at Indianapolis during that memorable zero spell of February, stopped off at Richmond to inspect the very interesting lot of seedlings then in full show of bloom, and selected Columbia as the leader.

It has met the warmest reception of any Rose ever offered to the trade, and the most critical growers feel sure that it will justify the welcome extended to it.—S. A. H.

At first reading it would seem that the new 'phone rates announced in our news columns should help F. T. D. business; but a more careful perusal leaves this in doubt. For, if we interpret the rulings aright, it would seem that the change from personal service to mere "station" service might mean an actual increase and the apparent reductions on short distances might be more than offset by incidental extras. Surely this is not the intention of the Postmaster General.

The American Dahlia Society

President Richard Vincent, Jr., has made a personal appeal to the members of the Dahlia Society, asking that all members retain their membership for the coming year and do some missionary work in the endeavor to obtain new adherents. The Society has been wonderfully successful, all things considered. Under changes of by-laws, made at the annual meeting, the business year now runs from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31. All members will have the benefit of the bulletins for the balance of the year.

Talking of the interest in the Society he says that many of the Canadian members are renewing, which speaks well for them after four years in the war. Finally, in conclusion, he says of Dahlias: "Read of them, tell of them, grow them, show them, and so help keep alive the fine work we have done in the past."

A Garden of the Brave

In a speech at the luncheon of the Pilgrims of the United States on Britain's Day, Sir John Foster Fraser, after touching upon the parts the various nations have played in the great war, and making for the League of Nations, concluded by delineating a "Garden of the Brave" as follows:

Sometimes people to me say, "Is it true that in France and Flanders the Poppies grow over the dead?" It is true. Those of us who have been up the valley of the Somme, have been along the great stretches of the fighting line, know indeed, how there are little mounds there with the Poppies waving above them; know how you will find the stretches or groups of graves; how in front of the torn and broken lines the brave men have been laid to sleep, and over them the Poppies grow.

Since the armistice has been signed my mind travels across the Atlantic to that great stretch of land where for years guns used to reverberate, but now all is silent. People are wondering what to do in that region. Many courteous, generous Americans think it would be a gracious act on their part if they found the means whereby those torn towns and those disrupted villages could be brought into their own again.

Many French people believe it would be better if instead of that a great forest were allowed to grow over the mightiest cemetery in the world. But, casting my mind back to the scenes of the fighting, which are very real in my vision, I sometimes picture that it would be well that that great land where lie so many of our brave dead were made into a Garden of the Brave. I would like to see, and I do see sometimes, in my vision, the flowers of America growing where lie so many of your gallant sons.

I know there will be mighty stretches of Fleurs de Lis marking the sleeping place of 1,500,000 brave Frenchmen. I would like to see the blooms of Belgium nodding over the graves where brave Belgians sleep, and a mighty avenue of Maple trees, all glorious with their crimson and their gold, telling the place where the Canadians rest, and mighty masses of the wonderful Australian Wattle showing where the Australians are sleeping. Yes, and I know that out there, too, will be great sheaves of green, the Shamrock coverlet for the brave Irish; and Roses everywhere, the White Rose and Red Rose, the Roses of Old England, of Lancaster and of York, telling where 500,000 brave Englishmen lie.

Perhaps out in that Garden of the Brave, I would come across stretches of Heather, beautiful gold-purple Heather. I know a Scotchman is buried there. There would be playing—I would hear the sound of the pipes for the pipes always play where dead Scotch soldiers lie. That is the vision that comes to me.

The Christmas number of the Houston (Texas) Post has a 24in. closely printed article by our esteemed friend, S. J. Mitchell, president of the Houston Horticultural Society, on Christmas celebration and decoration. It is packed full of timely ideas as to florists' materials and their uses for window and store dressing, and in the home. This is the sort of article that should appear in newspapers and magazines to help the public decide upon what materials to choose and how to use them.

Cartoon "Said it" With a Rose

The idea of "Say it with Fowers" was effectively brought out in a recent Congressional inquiry as to certain enemy activities when the significance of a cartoon was questioned. The picture shows an American Beauty Rose in which money bags are seen. Above hover bees on whose wings are the names of France, England, Russia and Italy. The idea sought to be conveyed was the warning that these bees were seeking to take away the money out of this country.

Anthracite Waste as Fuel

It has recently been discovered that the "culm" or waste from anthracite coal mines may be used for fuel in furnaces after being treated by a simple process, or in some cases without such treatment. At the mouth of the mines in Pennsylvania and elsewhere huge piles—really hills or almost mountains—of this material have been accumulating for forty or fifty years. Since this material has cost the companies nothing, having been thrown out, and the miners "docked" in proportion, it should be a cheap form of fuel. However, only time and experience can tell how useful it may be as a heat producer, whether or not it may be more economical than coal and whether it is a safe and sure source of heat for commercial heating, especially florists' establishments.

Airplane Mail Service

The initial flight of the service between New York and Chicago via Cleveland was inaugurated Dec. 18. It carries first-class and registered mail only, including sealed parcels, not larger than 30in. combined length and girth; postage is 6c. per oz. or fraction thereof. To expedite delivery special delivery stamps can also be used. That this mail is going to prove of great advantage to business men is adduced through the fact that the service will cost but 3c. more than the ordinary mail, while delivery at destination will be made many hours in advance of the fastest train; mails are scheduled to reach Cleveland at 11:30 a.m., Chicago at 3 p.m. Mails for points beyond Chicago will be carried as far as that city by airplane and then forwarded in the regular way.

Douglas Fir Tree Seed for France

Percival S. Ridsdale, secretary of the American Forestry Association, sailed this week carrying a sack of Douglas Fir tree seed for the French Government. While the sack is so small that it fitted in his traveling bag it is expected to grow 50,000 trees whose value at maturity should be approximately a million dollars. Mr. Ridsdale said that due to the war France has lost 1,500,000 acres of woodland, partly because the trees have been used for trench, road and barracks building and partly because of being blasted to pieces by shells. In pre-war times almost a million people in this area were dependent for half the year upon these forests. In collecting seeds needed by France members of the American Forestry Ass'n, the forestry departments of the various States, the Boy Scouts and other organizations will be called upon to help.

Economic law of smoking.—Two old Scotsmen sat by the roadside, talking and puffing at their pipes. "There's no muckle pleasure in smokin', Sandy," said Donald. "Hoo dae ye mak' that oot?" questioned Sandy. "Weel," said Donald, "ye see, if ye're smokin' yer ain bacca ye're thinkin' o' the awfu' expense, an' if ye're smokin' some aither body's yer pipe's ramm't sae tight it winna draw."—Tit-Bits.

Western States

Kalamazoo, Mich.

There still continues a very brisk demand for all kinds of flowers, and many orders have to be cut, or turned away entirely. Under these conditions retail prices are higher than ever before, $1.50 per doz. being the standard price for Carnations, while Roses are quoted at $2 for the low mark, going up as high as $5 per doz. There are still some Lilies on the market and these fetch 30c. each. Violets and Peas are worth 50c. per bunch. 'Mums are nearly all off the market, but those which do come in bring from $4 to $6 per doz.

Bulb stock is not yet in and the foregoing will therefore constitute the bulk of flowers for the Christmas trade. Undoubtedly there will be great difficulty in filling orders for Christmas, and high prices will prevail all through the holidays and early in the new year.

In potted plants the chief reliance will be placed in Primula obconica and sinensis and Cyclamen, and a fairly good supply of these may be expected to come in, as the weather is and has been favorable for bringing along stock. There has been considerable funeral work; indeed, this probably is the chief reason of the great demand for flowers. I am sorry to say that the number of cases of influenza has increased and that all schools, theaters, churches, etc., are again ordered closed till further notice.

The supplies and fixtures of "Smith the Florist" were bought by Van der Salm Bros., who have removed them to their greenhouses on Wall st. The latter firm has in the past few years built up a good suburban trade, being well located in a desirable residential district. They are also large growers of Pansy plants.

S. B.

St. Louis, Mo.

With the end of the Mum season, the market is down to Roses and Carnations. A few bulbous flowers are coming in, with a light supply of Violets and Sweet Peas. These, at the time of writing do not cover the demand. Artificial flowers are being extensively used in sprays and set pieces, together with natural sprays of A. plumosus, Stevia, Calendulas and whatever blooms are obtainable. A similar scarcity has never been experienced before, but of course later there will be a reaction and having got the public used to high prices it is to be hoped that we will not cut prices in the future, but will find some systematic method of handling an oversupply when it does come. The prices now demanded are apparently too high and are causing the greater use of artificial flowers.

Prospects for holiday trade are good. The returning of the soldiers will cause many family reunions and other gatherings. The retailers' windows are full of decorated plants and other holiday stocks. Prices of flowers for Christmas can hardly be much higher, as the limit appears to have been reached. The wholesalers as well as the growers have a big smile, while the poor retailers seem to be reconciled and are making the best of the situation.

Notes

The trade is sorry to learn of the death, at the age of 32, of Mrs. Anna Picha, sister of Mrs. Julia Pelletier, of the Pelletier Floral Co. Death was due to pneumonia. Mrs. Picha leaves four children.

At Mrs. Fred Bruenigs store the making of sprays and design work kept the force busy.

F. C. Weber is busy with both city and shipping business.

A meeting of the publicity committee was held on Dec. 10, at the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.'s establishment.

The George H. Angermueller Co. has put on additional saleswomen to take care of the increased local and shipping business. The firm is featuring novelties and artificial flower specialties.

Otto Bruenig is cutting choice Roses from his range at Olivette, Mo.

John Steidle, of Olivette, Mo., is cutting Carnations, which bring high prices.

Mrs. Diener, proprietor of the Diener Floral Co., has been rushed with funeral work.

The writer regrets to announce the death of the wife and the infant son of Alex. Lurie, horticulturist at the Missouri Botannical Garden.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to H. G. Berning and family in the death, after a prolonged illness, of his mother, Mina Berning, the wife of John Berning. The funeral took place on Dec. 17, at St. Marcus Cemetery. The floral offerings were numerous.

Cleveland, O.

Wholesalers and retailers alike dread the coming of Christmas this year, because of the unprecedentedly low supply of stock. If it were a local matter, the introduction of stock from distant markets would obviate the condition, but that is impossible as acute shortage prevails in the entire country. Prices will be higher than at any previous time in the history of the business. Because of this the smaller florists in particular will experience difficulty in transacting the customary volume of business.

Only about 50 per cent. of the usual Christmas supply of Carnations will be available. Millions of flowers are ready to pop open in the ranges but as the unseasonably warm weather prevents the application of higher temperature with safety, nothing can be done to hasten their maturity. In consequence, great quantities will reach the market in January. During the week ending December 14, the prevailing price was 8c., but 12c. and possibly 15c. will be ruling figures for Christmas.

The uncertainty of the fuel situation in the early Fall, compelling many growers to hasten production with a view of closing down a portion of their ranges immediately after the first crop, has seriously curtailed the Christmas supply of Roses. To compensate for this diminution of output, however, cuts will be abnormally heavy in January and early February. The effect is the enforced rise of prices from 12c. to 40c., according to quality and grade.

An abundance of excellent Stevia will assist much in making the supply of the popular flowers go as far as possible. Some fine Buddleia will also be available. Poinsettias, both in pans and as cut flowers will be in reduced supply, as the crop is below par in practically all the local sources of production. No Valley at all is being offered. A few Paperwhite Narcissi and Freesias will make it in time for Christmas, but not enough to be of material assistance. Easter Lilies and Callas will occupy an important place because of their great value for funeral purposes. Double Violets are of good quality and orders are being booked at $3 per 100. Adiantum will be scarce and string Smilax and Asparagus will just about take care of the increased requirements.

There is a heavy demand for Southern Smilax, Holly, Laurel, and other Christmas greens. The call for such prepared stock as Oak, Magnolias and Lycopodium has practically exhausted the local supply. If the holiday business is to be advanced beyond the volume of last year, the necessity for pushing stock of this kind is more vitally imperative than ever.

Christmas Publicity

The efforts of the Publicity Committee are being put forth along unusual lines. Instead of endeavoring to increase the popularity of flowers, the design throughout has been to acquaint the public with the reasons for their desperate scarcity and consequent higher prices. Cleverly written special stories in the Sunday supplements have been employed in the promulgation of this most important purpose. The campaign is brief, though well defined, and doubtless much benefit—both present and future—will result from it.

Fate's Heavy Hand

Death visited the homes of two of our florists last week. Mrs. Mabel Bramley, wife of F. A. Bramley, of Bramley & Sons, died of hemorrhage following the birth of twin children, December 13, at Carnegie Hospital. The twins, a boy and girl, survive. Funeral services were held at the residence and interment was made in Lake View Cemetery.

Mrs. W. E. Copeland, wife of W. E. Copeland, former member of the firm of Copeland Bros., Vermilion, O., died of pneumonia December 11. She is survived by her husband and two children. Interment was made at Vermilion, December 15th.

Both of the bereaved are well known in local circles and to them is extended the sincere sympathy of thir fellow-tradesmen.

Notes of Interest

Regular monthly meeting of the Wholesale Florists Credit Association was held Dec. 17.

C. Betscher of Canal Dover, O., called upon friends in the trade December 13.

L. G. Boyle of Farrell, Pa., transacted business upon the wholesale market December 14.

J. Snyder of the B. A. Snyder Co., Boston, Mass., stopped in Cleveland December 14, while on his way to Chicago.

Claude Tyler, Carnation specialist par excellence, of Salem, O., spent December 14 and 15 calling upon his former friends in the trade of Cleveland and vicinity.

A meeting of the publicity committee of the Florists' Club was held at the Hollenden December 13, for the consideration of currency business problems.

W. T. McFarland, Akron, O., visited the wholesale market December 12 for the purpose of placing his holiday orders.

Trade Report

Market conditions still continue without a precedent in the way of prices and scarcity of material. In fact the large city prices have become so high that it is not well for relatively smaller towns to have many transactions with them. It seems the large centers have such a preponderance of wealthy trade with whom prices are no object that the store men are always safe in looking to smaller cities for their supply if that is at all possible. Order after order has been refused in this city because of the inability to obtain supplies. Funeral work maintains itself at a lively rate so there is no surplus from day to day. It is therefore difficult to see how there will be many flowers left for the normal Christmas trade. Foliage and blooming plants will be a welcome addition and will no doubt serve in a measure to brighten the situation.

Material such as ribbon, evergreens, Boxwood, Ruscus, Pine Cones and other extras will find a lively sale as these will do much as fillers to obtain volume where flowers are lacking.

Wholesale prices at this time are much as follows: Lilium giganteum and Callas $3 per doz. wholesale, double that at retail; Carnations $8 to $12 per 100; Roses $6 to $30 per 100; Violets $1 to $1.50 per 100; Cattleyas 50c. to $1 each; Poinsettias $3 to $6 per doz. from the grower, and Stevia $5 to $10 per 100 sprays.

Late Chrysanthemums have been a huge success this season. Indianapolis has been fortunate in having several crops of Mistletoe and other late varieties on hand.

There are rumors of a new commission house in this city of which Mr. Hitz, the well known Brightwood florist, is to be the proprietor. According to present plans it is to be located in E. Ohio st.

Messrs. Arno Nehrling and Wm. Pett were visitors from Crawfordsville last week. They both report large funerals and much improvement at their home city.

Messrs. Julius Dilhoff and S. S. Skidelsky, both of Philadelphia; Wm. Hitz of Madison, and B. F. Hensley of Knightstown, were recent visitors.

It is generally reported that several of the New Castle establishments are sprucing up their places with a view of enlarging their flower trade during the coming year. In fact, many plans are being made to get in line once more for the flower business.

Harry Rieman's family which has been ill with influenza is reported much better.

Walter Bertermann is in Chicago looking over flower conditions.

Tomlinson Hall Market reports a lively trade both wholesale and retail. The limit is the amount of material obtainable.

Robert Ellis is down with influenza, but at this writing is much improved.

The customary exhibit of plants and flowers has been arranged for the annual meeting of the State Florists' Ass'n of Indiana. A special committee has been named to take care of them. Any florist with meritorious stock will do well to display at this meeting as the decisions reached will be far reaching.

There seems to be a shortage of material in nearly everything essential to the flower business. Christmas trees, Holly, Laurel, wild Smilax, green Moss as well as flowers are reported short. If there is any trade at all during the holidays, there will be some lively scrambling to get aboard.

Thomas Hepler has returned from visiting Northern Indiana florists.

Several of the soldier boys have written that they are on the way home and will be on the job again ere long. Nearly all will find their old places waiting and at their pleasure.

Cut flowers of all kinds remain scarce, but there seem to be more Carnations on display in the stores, owing to the fact that the retailers got together and raised the price to $2 a doz. Florists supplies of all kinds are extremely scarce; the byword here today is: "Who has any Boxwood, Moss, wired picks or Magnolias?" as these articles are all essential to the florist who is going after Christmas business. However, there will be enough of this stock on the market as the various firms are just waiting for their shipments to arrive.

Carl Espelin, of Fort Collins, was in town buying his Christmas stock. He reports business excellent in his section.

Frank Fraiser has not sold any cut flowers by the dozen since Thanksgiving Day, as he has had a steady run of funeral work, which takes everything that he can get to fill his orders.

The Park Floral Co. has a window display of Poinsettias, planted with Boston ferns in baskets, which helps put some "pep" into Christmas shopping..

Ben Boldt has a fine lot of Jerusalem Cherries, Cyclamen and a few Spiræas. He also has a fine collection of Heathers, which he had shipped in from the Coast in due time to get them in the best of shape for his Christmas trade.

The America Flower Shop has a good cut flower window of Sweet Peas, Violets, Snapdragon and Carnations displayed in fancy pottery on velvet. Mr. Clawson has everything mapped out for a big Christmas business.

Boldt-Lundy's House of Flowers has an attractive window, the principal feature being gazing globes, with a fine selection of specimen plants of all kinds for the holidays.

The Alpha Floral Co. had a window display of Christmas wreaths for graves, the display being accompanied by a sign reading, "Remember the loved ones departed, by placing a wreath on their graves." This brought some extra business for the firm.

The Colorado Seed Co. has been rushed with orders for greens and florists' supplies, which have kept the regular force on the go, and required the addition of extra help.

The Barteldes Seed Co. has been supplying the trade with wire designs and Sphagnum Moss.

The Central Floral Co. has opened its establishment, taking half the store for the Christmas business. The proprietors are Jacob Boxer and Max Schradsky. They will have their big opening day in January.

The writer wishes the trade a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Business Difficulties

In the matter of the bankruptcy of the Los Angeles Flower Market, Inc., Los Angeles, Cal., the trustee, W. W. Eakins, as receiver, has filed his report. A petition for discharge and a final meeting of creditors was held on Dec. 18.

The establishment of the British Columbia Pottery Co., Ltd., of Victoria, B. C., was sold at auction on Dec. 18 and 19.

FOLIAGE AND BERRIES FOR CHRISTMAS

Foliage and Berries are always seasonable at Christmas ; this year especially so because of the shortage of cut flowers—Various attractive and available kinds are here suggested

It is quite likely, judging from reports from different parts of the country, that cut flowers will be scarce this Christmas and consequently high in price. It is also probable that there will be an increased demand for flowering and berried plants to take the place of cut flowers. But the possibilities of plants for decorative purposes are limited, so that it might be worth while for the florist to push the sale of berries and hardy foliage material as a substitute for the shortened supply of cut blooms. The cherry red of the Christmas berries contrasted with the glossy green which is characteristic of many kinds of foliage used at Christmas, adds a bright touch to the Yuletide decorations, suggesting the warmth of the traditional roaring fire in the great open fireplace, with its associated laughter and good cheer. This year, in many homes, the Christmas decorations will help to speak a welcome to the men in khaki or blue who have come back from across the sea, after successfully completing the greatest task in all history.

Incidentally, it is also probable that the supply of berries and foliage material may likewise be curtailed, because of the shortage of labor for picking.

Most, if not all, the following material may be had from the wholesalers or from the florist supply houses. It should be handled with care and not allowed to dry out. It is quite likely to be high in price this season and whatever is spoiled means that much less profit.

Decorative Foliage

One of the favorite foliage materials is Magnolia grandiflora. This has become popular within late years. Even when dry the large green leaves retain their form and color. Some are considerably broader than others and the broadest ones are excellent for heavy effects in backgrounds. The Magnolia grows abundantly in the South, from where its foliage can always be had. Another merit which it possesses is that its normal green color is not affected by the cold weather, as is that of Galax and Leucothœ.

Leucothœ Catesbaei is another well known shrub useful to the florist for its foliage. The thick leaves, although green in Summer, assume a bronze hue as Winter comes on. Incidentally it may be mentioned that its flowers, which come in the Spring, are extremely attractive. L. Axillaris is also a desirable Leucothœ for the florist. Although its leaves are smaller than those of L. Catesbæi these two are very much alike. These Leucothœ were long classed as Andromeda and in some catalogs may still be lsited under that name. Smilax is an old standby. There are many species of it, but the most desirable for the florists' use is laurifolia. The appropriateness of Smilax for festooning lies in the fact that it has long climbing shoots; in fact it ascends trees of great height. The leaves are thick and very numerous, about 2in. to 4 in. long and evergreen.

A foliage material that has come into use by florists during recent years is what is commonly called Mexican Ivy. The foliage of this plant—which is, by the way, not an Ivy at all, nor has it any connection with Mexico, that the writer knows of—is very pretty, in shape resembling a widened arrow head. Sometimes leaves of the English Ivy will be noted of this shape. The botanical name of Mexican Ivy is Vancouveria hexandra and it grows wild from northern California to British Columbia. The shoots of the plant, which grow to a foot or more, are slender and delicate, thus making them especially useful for fine work.

Of the Pine foliages one of the most attractive for Christmas use is that of Pinus palustris, the long leaved or Broom Pine. The young plants or "brooms" as they are called, from their resemblance to that useful household implement—the effect being produced by the cluster of long needles of the latest growth—are sought for because of their novelty. The ends of the older branches are also available. The foliage has a delightful, resinous "Christmasy" smell.

The so-called running Pine and the standing Pine—the latter also called tree Pine and bouquet green—are not Pines at all, but Lycopodiums. They are very useful for wreaths, the standing Pine being preferable for that purpose, wreaths made from it being superior to those made from the running Pine. The latter, whose botanical name is Lycopodium camplantum, is a vine; the tree Pine, L. obscurum, has a tree like growth, from 6in. to 12in. high.

In this list, of course, we must not fail to include the old reliable but desirable Boxwood, which needs no description.

Berries

Inseperably linked with associations of Christmas are of course Holly and Mistletoe. Holly, Ilex opaca, gives us not only useful foliage but its bright red berries; Mistletoe of long tradition, Pharadendron flavescens, is a parasitic plant, which is found growing wild on Oaks and on many other trees, all through the South. The English Mistletoe, botanically known as Viscum album much resembles ours.

From a list of Christmas berries the Sweet Pepper Tree, Schinus molle must not be omitted. Its berries, when ripe, assume a pleasing rose color, and this unusual hue makes them available for decorations out of the ordinary. The fact that the foliage is rather thin and therefore, soon begins to look withered, is perhaps a detriment, which could be overcome by stripping it from the branch, leaving the attractive berries.

Myrica cerifera, or M. carolinensis, the Bayberry, Wax or Candleberry is noted for its handsome gray white berries. Its name Wax or Candle, refers to the waxy covering of the berries. In the olden days, and perhaps within the memory of some of our grandfathers, that is before the days of gas, electricity, and John D. Rockefeller, a fine greenish white wax was obtained from these berries, from which excellent candles were made. The plant, in the North at least, does not retain its foliage. In the South it is called the Wax Myrtle.

The Red berry or Winterberry, Ilex ferticillata, has bright red berries and is found over a wide range of territory, extending from Canada to Florida. Like the Waxberry, it drops its foliage.

Another very attractive red berry is Mitchella repens, the Partridge berry. This is a delicate trailer, lying very close to the surface of the soil; the berries, which are found in pairs, are used commercially for making the well known (Partridge) berry bowls. These bowls are especially pleasing when used as a low table decoration.

A berry which has become popular in the last few years is the common Bittersweet, Celastrum scandens. At the coming of frost the orange red pods split open, showing the scarlet covering of the seeds. The plant is a twining shrub and the leaves drop very early.

Where the material is available something of a novelty may be produced by combining red, white and blue berries to produce a patriotic effect. We have reds to choose from, but unfortunately our blues are not of best quality for the purpose. The berries of the Viburnums range from lead blue to blue black; among the Privets berries ranging from bluish to bluish black may be found; Boston Ivy furnishes a lighter blue. For white, Snowberry, Mistletoe or perhaps Waxberry might be used. The idea could be further elaborated by the use of red, white and blue ribbon.

No retail florist can well do without a copy of the Manual of Floral Designing by W. Cleaver Harry. See particulars on page 1005.

More War Publicity

Lieut Edward Streeter, in his "Love Letters of a Rookie," entitled "Dere Mable," one of the most laughable contributions coming out of the war, has this to say regarding the telegraphic idea in one of his letters:

"Theres a fello in town what says he'll send flowers anywhere you want by telegraph. I was going to send you some for Christmas morning. Then I figgered it was a silly idea. In the first place they'd get all smashed on the way. An then you can't get enough flowers in one of them little envelopes to make one good smell. Nothing if not right. That's me all over, Mable."

In all seriousness, though, one of the essential matters in connection with making the telegraphic idea better known is the demonstrating of the method used in the relaying of orders from florist to florist.

Undoubtedly, there is much speculation on the part of the public still unacquainted with the idea (and the great majority still are) as to just how the flowers are sent.

An explanation of the methods used should find its way into every piece of advertising put out by the retailer.

Dracæna and Adiantum and Pteris ferns, in pot with decorated cover

We are all interested to learn that in President Wilson's progress from station to the Murat palace, on his arrival in France, "a young woman dressed in Alsatian costume got through the lines and carried a bunch of Roses to President Wilson's carriage" and that "a group of school boys did the same thing, and loaded Mrs. Wilson's carriage with Violets." Also that "Violets were the flowers of the day. The Champs Elysée was covered with bunches which, thrown at the Wilson carriage, fell on the pavement."

Wide Range of F. T. D. Orders

Grandy the Florist of Norfolk, Va., reports that during October his F. T. D. business consisted of 146 orders, which totaled $1,322. The 27 states and the number of orders are as follows: New York, 13, including five from New York City; Virginia and Maryland, 10 each; Pennsylvania, North Carolina and District of Columbia, eight each; Tennessee, seven; W. Virginia, 5; New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut, four each; South Carolina, Ohio and Louisiana, three each; Kentucky, Florida, Texas, Michigan, Indiana and California, two each; and one each for Minnesota, Colorado, Missouri, Washington, Georgia, Arkansas and Ontario.—27 states in all parts of the country coverd in one month's business!

The Manual of Floral Designing

By W. Cleaver Harry — Ready for Delivery January 1st, 1918

TO those who have been looking for a practical textbook on the art of floral designing we offer the first one ever published on this subject. As trained help is scarce, every retailer who is now passing through difficulties in instructing new help can transfer this burden of instruction by providing his beginners with a copy of The Manual of Floral Designing.

This textbook has been compiled by an authority --one who has spent many years at the retailers' make-up table and who understands thoroughly the principles which underlie the art of arrangement.

CONTENTS

Chapter I. Wire Frames and Mossing.—Text Book and Practical Experience both Necessary—Wire Frames—Mossing Pillow Frame

Christmas is fast approaching and all are busy between funerals getting things into shape so as to be somewhat prepared. Daily business continues strong and flowers are cleaned up to the last flower. The cut flower market for the holidays will be shorter than in years. Even potted stock will not be as plentiful as formerly. Prices will be firm to the advantage of everyone in the trade. This is better than many sales of small calibre when one works his head off, but when bills are paid wonders where all the money went. Properly and profitably to conduct a retail establishment during a Christmas rush requires management. A given percentage must be added to all sales for the extra cost of doing business during one of these mad rushes. Records will show that percentages differ and that it is a matter for the retailer to work out his own salvation.

Pompons are about to leave us for another year, even though we hang on to them as to straws, for with them pass our so called cheap flowers. Large 'Mums are still to be had but their numbers with the exception of Maude Dean are also getting less and the end is in sight. Carnations continue to be scarce. They sell up so clean that the growers are getting cold feet as to being able to deliver the usual amount for Christmas sales. All potted stock we will have to offer for Christmas is selling well, so outside of potted Freesias, Arecas and Azaleas we will have little that's new to offer.

Trade Gossip

Chappell's Flower Shop will move to a new location, in the Northwest Bank Building, the first of the year. Floor space will also be occupied on the mezzanine floor. As the floor space is small, good use of the mirrors will be made and the main floor used for display only.

Clarke Bros. are showing their usual Christmas window. Some of their Orange plants carry as many as 24 fruits. They will add a Ford delivery to their service.

W. T. Jackson, of Stevenson, and Geo. Haslinger, of Hood River, made a hurried visit to the city in quest of stock.

The Holden Floral Co. as usual has an excellent stock of potted stuff. The only trouble they experience is—not enough. The firm is hitting it just right with its Begonias, as they will be prime for the holiday.

Short Supply: Corresponding Prices

Dec. 17.—The supply of flowers in general is small. Prices are higher and firm.

American Beauty Roses are meeting with a good demand. Special grade blooms are selling at from 25c. to 75c. each, and other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses are moving well. Top grade blooms are selling at from 10c. to 50c. each, and No. 2 grade at from 4c. to 8c., according to variety.

The arrivals of Carnations are reported to be a trifle heavier; they are meeting with an active demand at from 8c. to 10c. each for select blooms and 4c. to 6c. for those of inferior quality.

Cattleya orchids are in fair supply and are selling at from 50c. to 75c. each for selected blooms. Gardenias are in larger receipts and are realizing from $1 to $6 per doz. White Lilies are in medium supply and are selling only moderately well at $15 to $20 per 100 for the best blooms.

There is a small supply of Callas at $2 to $4 per doz., of Calendulas at $4 to $6 per 100, of Sweet Peas at $2 to $5, of Yellow Daisies at $3 to $4, and of Bouvardia at 50c. to 75c. per bunch. Also of Mignonette at 50c. to $2 per doz., of Pansies at $2 to $2.50 per 100, of Poinsettias at $2 to $6 per doz., of Stevia at 25c. to 35c. per bunch, of double Violets at $1 to $2 per 100, of single Violets at 75c. to $1.50 per 100, and of Wallflowers at 50c. to 75c. per bunch. The supply of these miscellaneous flowers, it should be noted, is unusually small and they are meeting with an active demand.

Hardy and indoor growing greens, except Asparagus, are in short supply and are having a very brisk call.

Christmas Prices

The approach of the Christmas holidays, combined with a supply of plants shorter than usual, as well as an abnormally small supply of cut flowers, all resulting in unusually high prices, have produced a spirit of unrest among the retail florists, and of inquiry as to how best to meet prevailing conditions, in their bearing on the sales of cut flowers to their customers. These perplexing conditions caused the Association of Retail Florists of New York City and the Greek-American Association of Retail Florists to hold a joint meeting on Thursday night, Dec. 12, at the store of Young & Nugent, 42 W. 28th st., to consider the present shortage and prices of flowers at wholesale. About 80 members of the two associations were present. After a free discussion of the subject, it was decided to call another meeting and to invite both the growers and wholesalers of cut flowers to attend, so that there might be a general discussion of the situation by the three branches of the craft. This meeting was held at 56 W. 30th st., on Monday night of this week. A report is given in this issue.

The annual banquet of the Wholesale Cut Flower Protective Ass'n of this city was held on Saturday night of last week. Details appear elsewhere in this issue.

The National League for Women's Service is sending a letter under date of Dec. 16 to the flower growers, asking them in their shipment of flowers on Christmas Eve to the wholesale florists, to make a donation of flowers for the sick and wounded soldiers in the base hospitals. The letter states that the commission men will see that the flowers are properly forwarded. The letter reads in part:

"Was there ever a Christmas when hearts were merrier or the glad tidings of Peace on Earth rang truer than this? And to think, it has all been brought about by the boys for whom we appeal to you today, for the one thing that seems to bring a sweeter cheer than all else."

Supply Still Short

Dec. 17.—The supply of cut flowers at the wholesale flower market is no larger than it was last week. We have had a week of dull, sunless weather, and this in itself helps to make the supply more meagre. The outlook is not encouraging for a larger supply for the holidays. The market is good. There is considerable funeral work and although the retailers hesitate about buying flowers at the increased prices, they have to buy them and pay what is asked for this essential work. The market at this moment is a growers' market, and both wholesaler and retailer say there is no money in it for them. Be that as it may, the grower has to get money to meet his greatly increased expenses.

Probably at this time there are more Roses than any other flowers, but even the supply of those is not very large. American Beauty Roses are only in medium supply and prices for special blooms are from 50c. to 75c. each, with shorter grades at correspondingly lower rates. There is a moderate supply of hybrid tea Roses but no Roses, even those with the very shortest stems sell for less than 10c., and other grades are from 16c. up to 50c. each. Even at these prices the supply is cleaned up practically as soon as the stock arrives.

The Carnation supply is no larger than it was a week ago and prices are on the increase. Today the price is 8c. to 10c. but it looks now as if by the end of the week the figures would be much higher. Splits and other inferior flowers fetch 6c. apiece.

There is a moderate supply of Cattleya orchids, with a good demand, at 50c. to 75c. each. A good supply of Cypripedium insigne is also available at 25c. to 35c. each.

Lilies are in fair supply and prices are the same as last week, 20c. to 25c. each.

Sweet Peas in small supply are arriving and they are quickly cleaned up at $1.50 to $2 per 100. There is little Lily of the Valley; it sells at $8 to $10 per 100. Calendulas are in medium supply at $2 to $3 per 100. Stevia is one of the standbys and is plentiful at 25c. to 35c. per 100. A moderate number of short stemmed Snapdragons, Pansies and Wallflowers are available. The meagre supply of Violets brings $1.50 to $2 per 100. Paperwhite Narcissi are seen in small lots. Small lots of excellent Bouvardia are also offered and find a ready market.

The increased price of flowers has made the plant market exceptionally good. There are few plants that were grown for the holidays that are not sold now at prices in advance of those of a year ago. Asparagus and Adiantum is scarce.

The supply of Christmas greens is not as large and it is with difficulty that enough is obtained to fill orders. There is an unusually heavy call for all kinds of Christmas goods.

Spokes in the Hub

Dolansky & MacDonald, the wholesalers on Devonshire st., are handling William Sim's flowers. Mr. Sim's greenhouses this season are largely given over to Carnations.

Penn is featuring luxuriantly berried plants of Ardisia with pans of large Poinsettias.

Though no Azaleas came from Belgium this Fall, the William W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, has a batch of well flowered plants which are selling well at handsome prices.

The New England Florist Supply Co. reports an unusually heavy demand for Christmas goods. With the shortage of greenhouse flowers there is a much heavier call for greenery, red Ruscus and Holly berries. Shortage of labor has brought a lack of greenery, and orders have been turned down.

Henry M. Robinson Co. is rushed with orders. Several of its men have returned from the Navy. The demand for all kinds of Christmas goods far exceeds that of last year. Shipping trade is heavy and there is a heavy call for flowers.

At the last meeting of the Horticultural Club of Boston Fred E. Wilson of Nahant read an excellent paper on chemical fertilizers. A copy was sent to each member of the club. The next meeting will be on Jan. 1. R. C.

Tight Market

Dec. 16.—There is no relief to the stringent market conditions reported last week. If anything it is still more stringent. There never was a time when the demand for stock so far overbalanced the supply as it does now. The wholesale growers who sell their own stock and the commission houses handle a good amount of stock each day. It is probable that if there was not such a widespread demand as there is at present conditions would pass with but little comment. It is certain that those who are cutting even fair crops are reaping golden returns. On the other hand, growers who early in the season determined to close down, are reproaching themselves for their hasty decision. They took a chance and lost. Since the passing of the Thanksgiving Day trade all cut flower stock has brought better prices than it has ever done during the most stringent holiday markets in past years. Wholesalers are taking the best care of their good and steady customers; such stock as is available is carefully reserved for them, but even at that, few if any of their orders are filled for more than 50 per cent. of their requirements. Occasional buyers and those who buy wherever they can get stock cheapest get no consideration on the present market. This applies to out of the city trade, which come here, cash in hand, ready to pay the highest market price, as well as to local dealers, who belong to this class.

The outlook for Christmas is not encouraging for a large supply of cut flowers. It is almost certain that there will not be anywhere nearly enough to go around. Dealers are accepting orders for Christmas delivery only on condition that they will handle them to the best of their ability. It would be impossible, under the existing conditions, to promise otherwise. A week ago it was said that favorable weather would relieve the situation, but with less than a week before holiday shipping commences, it is too late to expect relief from any source. It has been said on former holiday occasions that growers held their stock back to be thrown on the market immediately before the great rush was on, so as to secure holiday prices. With prices far in advance of those of former holiday seasons, existing for the past three weeks, it would be unreasonable to believe that any grower is holding out stock for better prices. This will be one of the first holiday seasons on the market when the so called "pickled stock" will be noticeable by its absence.

In Roses the supply of Am. Beauty is limited; all available stock is bringing the highest figure of the season. Fancy stock is bringing $10 per doz., but how prices will run for the next week no one will venture to say. Orders are booked conditionally on the prevailing price at time of shipment. In all other varieties the supply is far short of the demand, with Russell and Columbia bringing top prices. Buyers are wondering why Columbia should bring the same price as Russell, inasmuch as it is reputed to be a more productive variety. Special stock for Christmas sales is offered at from $60 to $75 per 100; short stock from $20 to $25. In other varieties short stock is selling at from $10 per 100 with the maximum price for fancy stock as high as $18 to $20 and up to $35 per 100.

The supply of Carnations is far behind the demand and regardless of the high prices that they are bringing, more could be sold. Splits are bringing $10 per 100 and prices for the better and fancy grades range as high as from $12 to $20 per 100.

Easter Lilies are bringing record prices, from $20 to $25 per 100; Sweet Peas $2.50 to $3; Violets, double and single, $2.50 to $3. Valley frequently goes as high as $8 per 100. The old time Calendula, which for some time kept around the $2 and $3 mark has risen to a $4 to $6 standard price. Paperwhites are bringing from $4 to $6, and Poinsettias from $4 to $6 per doz.; a limited supply of the pink variety is selling as high as $8 per doz. There is quite a bit of Stevia on the market that as a filler in is in ready demand.

All greens are high; fancy ferns coming from far Eastern points cannot be handled for less than $5 per 1000. Box wood is bringing 30c. per lb., double the price in former years. Winterberries are practically off the market and the usual line of miscellaneous stock that helps out in the Christmas trade is noticeably absent. There has been in the past a day set well in advance of the holiday shipping when holiday prices went into effect. There is nothing like that this year; holiday prices have been in force for some time and have reached the limit where it is well nigh impossible to make further advancements. The supply houses are stocking up on artificial flowers believing that much of this stock will be used during the rush of the next two weeks.

General News

The displays of red frieze, Ruscus and artificial Poinsettias in the retail store windows is more elaborate this season than ever before.

Plant growers report a complete clean up on all flowering stock. The supply of palms, ferns, Pandanus, Crotons, etc., is still good, but these are not usually classed as holiday stock.

E. C. Pruner, traveling representative for the Poehlmann Bros. Co., is in the city and will remain here until after the holidays, when he will again resume his position on the road.

Allen Humason, who is with the Army in New Jersey, left Monday for Hoboken, after spending a week in the city.

The demand for made up Magnolia wreaths is so great that Mr. Waters of the supply department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had a force of women workers busy nights and Sundays for the past three weeks turning them out.

Frank Oechslin has been confined to his home for the past ten days with pneumonia but was able to be up for a short time Monday. A large number of florists from the surrounding cities visit his place daily in search of Christmas blooming plants.

A. Lange has on exhibition three of the largest Ericas ever brought to the city. They are in tubs and are about 4ft. high, and 3ft. in diameter and well bloomed. They came from California.

Frank Gorley, of Grimm & Gorley, St. Louis, was in the city Monday looking for plant stock for holiday trade. He says the St. Louis market is just as tight on both plants and cut flowers as Chicago is.

A. F. Longren, representative of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., is in the city and will remain here until after the holidays.

The McRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco, is sending to this market fine sprays of cut Ericas. They are a striking feature in the retail stores in the loop. The stock is shipped direct to the retailers.

Ove Gnatt and family came up from La Porte, Ind., Monday, to do some Christmas shopping. Mr. Gnatt reports the demand for decorative material to be unusually strong so much so that they have to work overtime to keep it turned out.

C. V. Abeele, Terre Haute, Ind., was in town the past week. He is not only a good florist but a shrewd speculator in real estate. Some few years ago he sold his greenhouse property on 61st st. to the National Plant Co., and then bought a handsome range of modern houses in Mt. Pleasant, Mich. Later he traded the greenhouses for a farm close to that town. About a year ago he traded the Michigan farm for the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co. property at Terre Haute, one of the finest ranges of glass in that city. He states that he is cutting good crops of Carnations right along for which he finds a ready trade in his own town, at $3 per doz. retail.

Little Change

Dec. 17.—There is little if any change since last week in the cut flower market. The changes are in firmer prices with Carnations advancing to 10c. and 12c. Conditions show no improvement as the receipts have been cut down by a week of rain and cloudy weather that at this writing (December 16) still continues. Not enough short and medium grade Roses are received to meet half the requirements. Specials and extra grades are not as active. American Beauty Roses are in free supply with advancing prices. Cattleya orchids in large supply are clearing rather slowly. Cut Poinsettias are quoted at 40c.

to 50c., with a limited supply. Sweet Peas show a steady increase with the prospects for a good Christmas crop. Violets are moving fairly well. Lilies are coming in freely with an increasing supply of Callas.

Miscellaneous flowers are running short. Christmas greens supply is inadequate. Holly has jumped from $7 per case to $10 per case and the prospects are that it will still go higher. Holly wreaths are bringing at wholesale what they retailed for last year. All other greens have advanced in proportion.

Topics in Brief

It appears that every retail florist of any consequence in Washington has been in Philadelphia the past week seeking plants for Christmas. But everything in bloom in this city was sold or placed three weeeks ago. There is nothing left but some foliage stock.

Henry I. Faust shipped a special express car of Cyclamen to Washington one day this week. An attendant accompanied it to insure immediate delivery.

John Andre of Doylestown was in town this week looking over the green goods market it being his first Christmas in the retail end. He is well pleased with his first month's business as a retailer.

The Henry F. Michell Co. reports turning down double the amount of orders on Christmas greens they are able to fill.

The J. J. Habermehl's Sons are renovating their window at the Bellevue-Stratford. Walter Van den Hengel has a new color scheme in view.

Kansas City, Mo.

Artificial flowers are being used to help out the shortage of natural stock, which long ago reached the acute stage in this territory. What natural flowers there are are high and scarce. The Christmas outlook is that prices will be far in excess of anything ever known here. Growers who have flowers are not holding back for the holidays, however, because they can get such good prices every day.

What Roses are in this market are selling at wholesale from 8c. to 50c. apiece. The few Carnations bring 10c. apiece wholesale. California Violets bring $2 to $3 a dozen bunches wholesale. Christmas greens will be scarce. There has not been enough cold weather to bring Holly to perfection. What has come thus far has few berries.

Trade News

Rock's have added two new Studebakers and one new Vim to their delivery service, making six trucks in all. Each bears in large letters the slogan, "Say It With Flowers."

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has a large crop of Roses coming in fine condition for Christmas.

Miss Elizabeth Hayden of Murray's, has recovered from an attack of influenza. She was in the hospital about two weeks, but is now at her home.

Saturday, Dec. 7, not a Rose or Carnation was sold in Rock's. Every one of these flowers that was cut in the greenhouse—and they have been cutting several thousand daily—was sold on orders, nearly all for funeral work. Three days of the same week the shop was cleaned up on flowers and only one night was it possible for the entire force to leave for home before 11 o'clock.

Atkins Floral Shop, 1203 Baltimore Ave., has more than paid expenses since the opening Sept. 15. This is considered a good record for any business from the start. The shop is owned by A. W. Atkins, who is also owner of an auto delivery system. Delivery is made by means of motor cars. E. H. Harvey, who was formerly with A. Newell, is manager of the business.

Cincinnati, O.

The Market

Roses clean up each day on sight. The supply is short of actual demands. The same is true of Carnations. Easter Lilies and Callas prove good property. Poinsettias are becoming more plentiful from day to day and are selling well. Stevia has a good market. The few Snapdragons that come are snapped up quickly. Both orchids and Lily of the Valley meet with a good market. Violets sell well. Calendula, Wallflower, Forgetmenot and Baby Primrose all sell readily. Galax and Magnolia leaves are meeting with a tremendous demand.

George Berner, of C. E. Critchell's force has returned to work. He has been at his home for the past two weeks nursing his wife and family who were down with influenza. Mr. Critchell, himself, has recovered from the influenza and is back at the store.

The William Murphy Co. is handling many blooming plants for Christmas, largely Begonias and Poinsettias.

Otto H. Hoffmeister is confined to his home by an attack of influenza.

Frank Winans, Petoskey, Michigan, and Miss Fannie D. White, Lexington, Ky., were each in this city on purchasing expeditions last week. TEDDY.

Pacific Coast Hort. Society

Prof. W. W. Mackie, of the University of California, lectured at the December meeting of the society, on Dec. 7, on "Principles involved in improving plants for increased food production." The underlying principles of plant breeding apply to all plant life," he said. "It was formerly the custom to select the best plants year after year, from which to obtain seed, in an effort to produce an improved strain, but it was a slow method, and often ineffective, for the reason that the exceptional plants many times were nothing more than the result of favorable growing conditions. Nowadays cross-breeding is looked to for improvement, and the varieties that meet the hybridizer's ideals are selected to work from." As a sample of what could be obtained from cross-breeding, Prof. Mackie exhibited ten varieties of Wheat produced at one crossing, all sharply distinct and none resembling the parent plants. "Practical plant breeding as a science is only beginning. Many experiments have been made to produce an absolutely smut resisting Wheat, but without commensurate results. What is called a 'smut resisting' Wheat is only resistant to a degree. Smut makes only slow progress against it, but in the long run it succumbs. Many non-resistant varieties fare better, for at the point where smut makes its attack so many plant cells are killed that the smut is starved out and dies; so we have the anomaly of a non-resistant Wheat surviving the attack of smut more effectively than the so called resistant variety, its very weakness turning out to be a defense."

The business meeting of the society included the nomination of officers for the ensuing year. The term of one of the society's three trustees, John McLaren, will expire on Dec. 31; he was re-nominated. Nominations are still open until the January meeting, at which time the election takes place.

John Gill, J. Timcio and C. Abraham were appointed to judge the evening's exhibits, and their awards follow. Brasso Cattleya, Queen of California, by J. A. Carbone, 95 per cent.; Begonia Recinifolia,, by H. Plath, 85 per cent.

It was voted to entertain the Ladies' Auxiliary of the society, at the Feb., 1919, meeting, and H. Plath and D. Raymond were appointed a committee to make all necessary arrangements.

The project of holding a Spring flower show for the public, met with favorable comment. "It is an opportune time for the show," said President Poss, "three years have elapsed since the last show."

The suggestion was made that the society's membership could be increased and its sphere of usefulness enlarged by admitting amateurs as members. Sentiment was divided on the point. The by-laws of the society would have to be amended to make it possible. No vote was taken, but the matter is to be discussed again at the next meeting.

DETROIT, MICH. Robert W. Essig, president of the Pontiac Nursery Co., who recently went to Europe on a mission for the Red Cross, has arrived safely, a cablegram to that effect having been received here. Mr. Essig's ship the Orduna, on its way over, struck a British tank steamer and several lives were lost.

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES

Z-I-N-C-O WHAT IT IS

Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft

WHAT IT DOES
Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

Eupatorium ageratoides

How often it is we overlook the merits of our common native plants and extol something exotic that does not possess any striking quality not found in the native one? Perhaps it is because of the freeness with which the former grows while we have to coddle with the one that comes from another clime.

With the subject of our illustration we have often heard the remark, "It grows like a weed," and it surely does, but what of it—"A weed is any plant that grows where it is not wanted," and it is an easy matter to remove this "weed" from any position it has commandeered and so keep it in proper bounds.

That it has merits as a florist flower no one will dispute and I am much inclined to believe that its usefulness was much appreciated by the florist in his funeral work for the month of October. During this dreadful epidemic, which is just passing, white flowers of any description were welcomed and in the charming flowers of Eupatorium ageratoides there was found just what was needed to put the finishing touches to some floral design.

As a background plant for the hardy garden it is well placed, also for brightening up shrubbery borders where its tenacity of purpose helps it to compete with the strong growing shrubs. It is not often we see it as a porch bed plant, however, as shown in our illustration and the probability is that it "just happened" to find a footing and was allowed to remain. Like Topsy, it "just growed" and in such a dry situation as this is it proved an attractive feature indeed. EDWIN MATTHEWS.

Two Useful Suggestions

Here are two suggestions for nurserymen. When you cut off your one year old Privet (hedge plant) in your nursery rows use a mowing machine, not a pair of shears. Have one man drive the team, another to hold the knife guard steady and you can cut two rows at one time just as well as you can by hand with the shears. Another thing: When you dig Strawberry plants out solid, that is whole rows at a time, and Asparagus roots, use a Potato digger of the Hoover type. This does the work effectively and shakes out all the dirt, etc. CHAS. A. BLACK, JR.

Flowers for Sick and Wounded Soldiers

The National League for Women's Service, an organization with whose work the florists throughout the country and especially in New York city, have been identified in connection with its delivery of flowers to the hospitals through gifts from the trade, gave a tea to which all members of the N. Y. Florists' Club were invited, at 4 o'clock on Saturday, December 21, at its headquarters, 257 Madison ave., in token of its appreciation for these loving tokens on behalf of sick and wounded soldiers. Unfortunately, the trade attendance was slim, as florists at that hour were at their busiest with holiday trade.

This National League for Women's Service carries on its wonderful work in 29 states in the Union. At 261 Madison ave., corner East 39th st., it maintains the largest canteen in the country, having at its disposal a large old-fashioned brownstone mansion; this is equipped most completely looking to the comforts of enlisted men, including a small hospital. All engaged are voluntary workers, the only paid employees being the cook and dishwashers. Those who are volunteering their services are among the best of New York's young women. Miss Maud Wetmore is local president; Mrs. Edward McVickar, N. Y. City chairman, and Mrs. J. Clark Curtin is the good lady who has been making daily deliveries of flowers to the hospitals. Members of the N. Y. Florists' Club had the pleasure of meeting the two last mentioned ladies at a recent meeting of that club.

Members of the League have been occupied recently in raising funds wherewith to purchase flowers for the soldiers and sailors in the various nearby hospitals on Christmas morning, and had collected some $700 by Tuesday, at which time they were being overwhelmed with donations of Carnations, Roses, Stevia, small flowering plants and other flowers from members of the trade.

The Metric System

Compulsory adoption of the metric system by the United States is being urged as an Administration measure under the leadership of the Treasury Department; and Senator Shaffroth of Colorado has already introduced a bill to this effect.

The National Association of Manufacturers of the United States of America is decidedly opposed to it, as is also the American Institute of Weights and Measures, this latter society having investigated the subject most thoroughly.

In Great Britain, where the system has been under advisement for years, many feeling assured that to adopt a metric system would promote trade relations with the countries using same, it being in use in the majority of the countries of Europe and South America, every proposition to adopt it has been overwhelmingly defeated.

The "British Committee on Commercial and Industrial Policy after the War" has recently made an exhaustive analysis of this question, and we give its conclusions:

"We are not convinced that the metric system is upon the whole even theoretically superior to the British system, and we are satisfied that the practical objections to the proposed change are such as to decisively outweigh any advantages which are claimed for it. We regard the agitation for the establishment of the metric system as particularly untimely because of war taxation on manufacture, and because under present conditions the overwhelming activity of manufacturers in war work makes proper consideration of such a subject impossible."

The Florists' Round Table

In this column readers are cordially invited to present their personal views on topics of interest to the trade. They must not conclude, however, that the editor necessarily agrees with them. THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE reserves the right to disagree even though it publishes the letters which follow. Its idea is to encourage discussion among readers themselves.

Plant Exclusion

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

For some six thousand years or longer, as we are informed, the world has basked in the sunshine since the first recorded garden produced its fair flowers and tempting fruit. Will some one kindly inform us why it is now necessary, with all our enlightenment and our armies of expert entomologists and pathologists to exclude from America the world's choicest products of the gardener's art? European nurseries for centuries past have supplied the known world with useful and beautiful trees, shrubs, flowers and plants, including the choicest fruits, grown and developed to the greatest perfection in the congenial climate and atmosphere of those countries where gardening is indeed a science and an art, where trained gardeners pride themselves on the fact that their forefathers were trained in the profession for many generations. I know of men who are of the sixth generation on the same estates in England and I recently learned of one who claims to trace his lineage in this way back to the year 800.

When we think of Europe as the cradle of the horticultural world, where those grand old estates have for centuries vied with each other to produce the rarest and best in fruits and flowers, and where treasure laden ships have brought home from foreign ports the rich gleanings from all the world, and where by hybridization and the creation of new and improved varieties, as in the establishment of James Veitch & Son, whose good work finds expression in almost every garden and dooryard, can we sit calmly by while the doors to the world's great storehouse of supply of all these good things is banged shut and locked by a handful of men? One member of the Horticultural Board stated in the writer's presence while examining an importation of nursery stock, that it afforded him a valuable experience as it was the first time he had had such an opportunity.

America needs the assistance of the mother countries in building up our horticultural interests to that high state of perfection which this country is capable of developing. Comparatively speaking, this is a new country and we are in that stage of development to which Lord Bacon referred when he wrote: "When ages grow to civility and elegancy men come to build stately sooner than to garden finely as though gardening were the greater perfection."

In Europe many of the horticultural establishments have been conducted for generations and their catalogs are often like horticultural cyclopedias with their long lists of species and varieties (many of which are rarely known in this country) secured from all parts of the world or created through the cumulative efforts of centuries of skill and experience directed along these lines of work, while in America, with its many opportunities for enterprising young men, few follow the traditions of their predecessors. As one reads the horticultural notes, how many of our gardeners are the "transplanted product," or those whose habits and experiences have been formed in the environment of those whose training was European, and whose lifelong devotion to the work they loved has been in some manner imparted to the younger generation.

Conditions in America are not such as to make it practicable to produce the stock which the trade has been accustomed to importing. The nurseries in this country which supply the average community are woefully lacking in the varieties and assortments of the things that contribute to home adornment, fruitful orchards and bountiful gardens, while these European specialists have not only produced the best products in marvelous variety, but they have produced them in vast quantities and sold to American nurseries at prices so reasonable we could not afford not to buy their goods and grow them on into well developed stock. "Born in France," but grown in U. S.

While efforts are being made in various parts of this country to produce some of the special lines of stock that we have been accustomed to importing, these undertakings are still in the experimental stages, and there are many of us who feel that we have a greater work to do in building up the horticultural structure of the Western world, so that every home may be provided with the products essential to homelike surroundings and that the best trees, fruits and flowers may be readily accessible to every man, woman and child in America. EDWARD TEAS.

The Christmas Rush

A Few Pointers for Next Year

Were you among the many who not only sold out clean of everything but found themselves short of many items before the real rush started? In many localities it was a hard matter to pick up flowering stock, baskets, Holly, ribbons and other accessories shortly before Christmas. This made it uncomfortable for the man in need of these things. A lot of all that could have been avoided if orders had been in good time. Now while fresh in your mind as to the amount of stock and material used for the past Christmas, what better could be done than to make a note of all as a guide for next year? Without a proper record on hand it is impossible to work intelligently; it isn't enough to be able to say: "We sold all of our Begonias, got rid of all of our Holly, all of the Cyclamen went and didn't have nearly enough plant baskets!" You should know how many of each were sold, how many wreaths were made up and how many cases of Holly disposed of. In that way proper and timely preparations may be made for another year, and a lot of inconvenience and disappointment, both to you and your patrons, avoided. The farther away from the large markets a man lives and does business the more necessary is it to adopt a system of this kind. It will surely pay.

Growing Cyclamen the Second Year

Go over the stock of Cyclamen left over from Christmas. Plants well set with buds are well worthy of being taken care of. They will come in to good advantage later. Sometimes plants which have been on show for several days in the store suffer to an extent that they are not fit to be sent out, yet good enough to be placed in a cool house where with a little care they will soon get back into shape again. In years gone by we didn't think it worth while to bother much with leftovers. A lot of stock was fired out just because we got into the habit of doing it; but times have changed and if we know what is good for us we will take better care of things. It doesn't take much to make a Begonia, Cyclamen, Primrose or anything else in the flowering plant line unfit for sale when on show in a store a few days, but such plants in many cases can be revived. Have you ever tried to grow Cyclamen for the second year? It can be done nicely, and plants through flowering now, or such as have lost their buds or part of the foliage on account of rough treatment can be had in flower again by next Christmas. Take the plants out of the pots, shake off the soil, cut away a few roots so as to make it possible to repot a 6in. plant into a 5in., or a 5in. into a 4in., remove a few of the older leaves and place the plants alongside of the young stock. They will stand still for some weeks, after which new roots will appear as well as growth above. With proper treatment some grand specimens can be had by next Fall. It's worth trying.

Pentstemon

While the plants should be up by this time and ready for transplanting a sowing may still be made and nice plants be had for planting out and flowering next Summer. You will make no mistake in growing a fair sized batch of plants either to be used for cut flowers on your own grounds or for stock to be sold during the spring months along with other perennials. Southgate Gem will be found a splendid sort and very desirable for cuttings. Pentstemons are deserving of far more attention and should be grown more by the florist.

Chrysanthemum Maximum

If you wish to increase your stock of Chrysanthemum Maximum, this is a good time to sow seed. King Edward VII is one of the finest for cutting. The plants will give you a nice lot of flowers during the first Summer. One can also divide the old plants, but for those who grow only a few hundred plants making use of seed is better. The plants will flower more freely. The old plants in the field can never be depended on. While they are hardy, every once in a while they go. Sometimes too much covering during a mild Winter, not enough during a cold one finishes them. The older the plants the more likely they are to go; therefore, it is always well to sow out a little seed each Winter and let some young, "full-of-life" stock come along.

Late Chrysanthemums

While the past season has with most growers been one of the best ever for Chrysanthemums—no matter just what particular sorts a man had to offer—we have been through many years where we didn't find things quite so easy; but the fact remains that the retail grower, in order to get the most out of his 'Mums, should try to extend the flowering period over as many weeks as possible. In other words he should grow some of the earliest and some of the latest sorts. This year while the flowers brought especially good prices for Thanksgiving the price didn't drop after that day; in fact in many instances kept going up. Chrysanthemums are a crop almost every small grower can handle and do well with. No Rose house temperature is required; in fact, the late sorts when held toward the last in a dry, cool, well ventilated house can be kept for many days after they are ready to cut. There is no better time than the present to decide as to what sorts to grow for another year The number of good sorts is almost endless and yet each market has its own favorites consisting usually of such sorts as will do well in a certain locality or which the growers there prefer. It shouldn't be much trouble in stocking up with the favorites in your neighborhood. Get away from insisting on growing too many of one sort just because you have planty of stock on hand. That isn't the way to make 'Mums pay for the retail grower. To cut at least a part of requirements from September up to Christmas will pay.

Schizanthus

The Schizanthus as a cut flower is being more and more appreciated, especially during the Winter. Late Summer sown ones are now in flower. Those who had them in for Christmas made good money on them. One couldn't ask for a better cold house crop. Seed sown now will give plants for 2½ in. pots by early February. These later on planted out on a sunny bench will start to flower by the end of March and be at their best just about Easter. They don't require the latest style house in order to have them good. It will pay every florist with a little bench room to grow at least a few.

Stocks

Stocks always pay to have in flower during the Spring months. Seed sown now will do it; transplant the little seedlings into 2½ in. and plant them out later on, allowing a good foot of space between the plants. Don't worry about the single ones or how to avoid getting them. Sometimes they sell as well as the double ones. A good strain of Beauty of Nice for pink and Victoria for white always sell whether single or double. The man who conducts a retail business will find a way to use the flowers, if he could only have a lot to cut from when needed.

Vinca alba and rosea

We see more of these old timers grown of late than used to be the case. While the little single flowers in themselves cannot be called showy, a bed in bloom all through the Summer is hard to beat. When formal beds are considered out of date a dozen or so plants of Vinca planted along the edge of a perennial or shrub border in clumps will be a bright spot until frost. Sow at once in gentle heat. The seedlings wont make much headway until Spring, but in order to obtain fair sized plants seed should be sown at once.

Late Pansies

After you get through counting the Christmas money and have looked over the wholesale house bills, take enough time to order Pansy seed to be sown the first week in January. Never mind how many you have out in a frame for early flowering next Spring. They will all be sold and the ones sown in January will come into flower when you are all cleaned out of the first batch. Don't bother with cheap seed. If you sell direct to those who just want a few dozen plants and are willing to pay a fair price, a cheap mixture or small flowers won't do you credit. The best is none too good in Pansies for the average florist. Sow in flats, transplant and carry along in a 48 deg. house with glass protection for a while.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

National Publicity Campaign

During the months of January and February, our committees have arranged to run a series of six advertisements through 28 magazines of national circulation, some being given three insertions, and others two. One insertion through the whole list will give us an aggregate circulation of 10,000,000 without taking into consideration the fact that the number of readers, as generally computed, will provide a circulation at least four times as great. The other insertions will be in the same proportion.

To get the full benefit of this widespread publicity, florists who are wise, will connect their establishments with the magazine advertising by running replicas of these advertisements in their local newspapers, over their own names. To make this possible, our Promotion Bureau is preparing electrotype reproductions of the magazine advertisements, to fit a two column space in any newspaper. Each carries our slogan, "Say it with Flowers" as a display headline, and a suitable illustration, with one of the following subheads to appropriate reading matter: "For Weddings;" "On St. Valentine's Day;" "For the Sick Room;" "On Her Birthday;" "On His Birthday," and "For Gifts."

The plates occupy less space than those previously put out by the Bureau, and may be used as auxiliaries to the other series. Proofs of the plates and other information regarding this publicity may be had upon request made to the Secretary.

Start the New Year well by connecting personal effort with the efforts of the Committees, and the demand for flowers is sure to increase. In the year just closing, the beneficial results of the campaign publicity have been surprisingly noticeable, and with all dark clouds behind us and a clear business horizon before us, he would indeed be a pessimist who could doubt the efficacy of a strong, vigorous and lasting campaign for publicity for flowers.

Contributions toward the expense of the 1919 campaign are now most welcome. Make one of your New Year's resolutions a decision to help.

JOHN YOUNG, Secretary.

France and Flowers

If we may judge by what is written about the experience with flowers of our soldier boys in France, our boys on their return home will be ready converts to floriculture. One soldier boy, whose letter we read, stated that the gardens of France were three-quarters flowers and one-quarter vegetables. We suppose that he did not mean this literally, but the flowers looked so good to him that the vegetables seemed to be small in proportion.

France has taught the world a lesson in fortitude which will not soon be forgotten. France has also taught the world a lesson in floriculture in war-time which the world should not be slow to heed. All who have visited France during war time speak of flowers, flowers everywhere. Possibly the flowers may have had much to do with the courage and splendid fortitude displayed by the French nation during the four years of terrible warfare which they have experienced.

Anyway, those of our boys who have seen service in France will return to America fully imbued with the idea that flowers have a distinct purpose in life not at all related to mere display. Floriculture is surely due for a big boom.

MADISON COOPER, in the Flower Grower.

Cracked Hands

One of the vivid recollections of childhood recalls the discomfort experienced 50 years ago from raw cracks in the hands, brought on by working, barehanded, at wood covered with wet snow. The reason for the tendency of the skin of certain individuals to crack easily upon exposure is said to be physiological and not easily controlled. But there are some things one can do to overcome the trouble.

The protection of gloves of some sort is, of course, to be desired when the work permits. In my own experience I find that any sort of glove is well worth while during the Winter season, even the cheap cotton ones (or those that were cheap in pre-war days).

But the main reliance must be placed on helping nature to keep the skin in a normal condition. After exposure to cold and dirt and wet, as when one is working in dirt at this time of year, take two or three minutes at night to soak the hands in hot water—not lukewarm, but hot. Then, while the skin is soft and the pores well opened, rub in some sort of oil or grease. You would not think of trying to soften an old harness by oiling it while dry. There is a wonderful difference in the effect of applying an unguent after the skin has been softened with hot water.

When the skin has broken, so that there is a raw crack, use a strong antiseptic on the raw place before anointing. Otherwise you are covering in the germs that cause the inflammation and soreness and making a good breeding place for them. After a thorough cleansing touch the raw spots with iodine, or some other antiseptic; then apply oil in some form. The antiseptic will stop pain and throbbing at once, and with the help of moisture, heat and an unguent, nature will restore conditions pretty well overnight. Wearing a light, loose glove overnight will help nature in the healing process.

The following recipe, which has been in use in our household for years, gives a cold cream equal to the best at the druggist's: Melt slowly in an earthen dish, one-half ounce each, white wax and spermaceti and one ounce mutton tallow. Pour into a bowl, slowly adding two ounces each almond oil and glycerine (mixed), beating slowly with fork until smooth. While still warm put into covered dish. If perfume is used it should be added before the cream sets.

European Notes

The weather minions are so eager to save up an abundant supply of fine weather for the historical visit of your highly esteemed President that they have put off all supplies for home consumption in the meantime. The result is that we are floundering about in the mud during the shortest days of the year, and open air work is practically at a standstill. We have been using the time sorting over our fruits of Peppers and Tomatoes hoping to be able to use the time in cleaning out the seed, but hitherto with little success; for although all the fruits have been gathered and are under cover they ripen slowly owing to lack of warm, dry air. The crop of all varieties will be small for the reasons previously reported in these notes. The seed merchant must be thankful for small mercies these days, but as a small compensation he is permitted to pay an unreasonably high figure (prompt cash, of course) for such articles as our masters, the growers, couchsafe to deliver. Seeds of the principal pot herbs are in great demand just now but supplies are not forthcoming in the same proportion. Thyme, Sage, Savory, Marjoram and Rosemary are practically unobtainable except at fabulous figures, and as, since the signing of the armistice, there has been a feeling abroad that a great slump in prices was inevitable not much business can be done.

EUROPEAN SEEDS.

Dec. 3.

Flower Seed Outlook

As the short days and the weather conditions keep us indoors most of the time just now, we are able thoroughly to investigate the extent of our stocks, and we trust the happier social and political conditions now prevailing will enable us in the near future to indulge the love of the beautiful as well as that of the essential and useful, flower seeds claim a share of our attention.

The acreage of land available for this culture in all the Allied countries in Europe has been so limited that with the average pre-war demand our supplies would have been exhausted long before this, for the neutral countries have been so restricted in the area devoted to the purpose and in the matter of permission to export, that the quantities actually received as from these sources have been practically negligible. The cheaper lines in all countries have been practically discarded, and our stocks are exhausted in consequence, but a few of the leading articles, such as Aster, Balsam, Convolvulus, Mignonette, Nasturtiums, Phlox and Pinks can still be supplied in moderate quantities, if our friends are willing to pay a remunerative price. The advance in cost price in some cases as high as 300 per cent over pre war figures, leaves only a very small margin for the merchant, who is being fairly crushed by the inevitable incidental expenses, while the grower has to pay so much more for manure and labor that his gain is almost infinitesimal. The public must open its heart and loosen its purse strings to help us keep the home fires burning.

Although our brave boys who have not had to make the supreme sacrifice are coming back to us very slowly at present, there is so much necessary work that must be done first that we cannot look forward to anything like a normal supply of flower seeds next season, so far as the Allied and neutral countries are concerned, but given a year of old time weather, and we trust to produce sufficient to supply all reasonable demands.

Mention of Sweet Peas has been purposely omitted because the key to the situation is in your hands, but now that the embargo on export from your side has been lifted the threatened shortage for home consumption no longer exists.

Once again the time of good will is upon us and the writer craves from our genial editor permission to express the good old wish of a righteously happy Christmas to all his friends, old and new.

New York Seed Trade

The preparation of 1918 catalogs is going on briskly in all the seed stores; in many cases the completed proofs are in the hands of the printer; in a few the catalogs are actually ready for distribution. Soon after the holidays millions of copies of this useful and interesting literature will be mailed out from the several seed stores of this city, each offering many kinds of seeds, the products resulting from which are really necessary to feed either the bodies or the souls of the people. We challenge the publishers of this country to show any yearly publication more useful than the seedsmen's annual catalogs.

The following letter sent us by F. J. Grootendorst & Sons, Boskoop, Holland, from their New York City office, will no doubt interest plant importers. The letter is a copy of one received by the firm from the New York office of the Holland-American Line (freight dept.) under date of Dec. 20:

"With reference to your favor of the 22d ult., we now beg to inform you that according to cable received from our home office, the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam, which steamer is supposed to be sailing from Rotterdam one of these days, will bring various shipments of nursery stock from Holland, which indicates that this commodity can again be brought over and which we hope will make it possible for you to import considerable shipments in the near future."

As a seasonable display, and for variety and good taste in arrangement the window exhibit at J. M. Thorburn & Co., 53 Barclay st., is one of the best in the city. This firm's export business is now quite active.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 41-43 Barclay st., reports that all bulbs are cleaned up to the last one and that there is still a cry for more.

Roman J. Irwin, 108 West 28th st., and also Mrs. Irwin are sick with influenza at their home in Larchmount, N. Y. Mr. Irwin has been unable to visit his New York office since Tuesday of last week.

It is reported that sound cold storage Lilium giganteum bulbs are meeting with an active demand. There are numerous inquiries for Paperwhite Narcissi also. One seedsman reports that he had to refuse orders for ten cases of those in one day. It would appear that any one having these bulbs now could dispose of them at almost his own price.

Large recent arrivals of Holly, it is reported, has caused a big tumble in prices.

Chicago Seed Trade

Wm. Reid, a former well known representative of the seed trade in this city, who joined the Canadian Army last Spring, has been granted his discharge and is visiting in this city. He has not yet decided on any future business connection. He was with the W. W. Barnard Co., as well as the A. L. Randall Co., before he joined the army.

Up to Saturday, Dec. 21, the sale of Christmas decorative material at the seed stores is reported to be slow. The scarcity of stock prevents any elaborate display, which, coupled with the prevailing high prices, is said to be the cause of a falling off in this class of trade.

John Fuhlbrugge, a former salesman of Vaughan's Seed Store, who until recently was manager of the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O., is in the city and expects to connect himself with some of the seed houses by the first of the New Year.

W. H. Huffmann, former manager of the seed department at Vaughan's Seed Store, who joined the army last Spring, and has been in the officers' training school at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., has been released from military service.

Winterson's Seed Store is having a good sale on first grade Gladioli bulbs, specially prepared for forcing, in all the leading varieties. Growers are now planting these in their houses, which have been closed for several months, some of them to come on naturally under glass and others in houses that will be slightly heated after the turn of the year.

The W. W. Barnard Co. has placed a lot of handsome decorative plants in the store for holiday trade. Bulb stock is all gone for the season.. Preparations are under way for a large poultry exhibit in the store soon after the first of the New Year.

Canadian Seed Notes

Saskatchewan's Provincial seed fair will be held this year at Saskatoon, from Jan. 14 to 17. The seed fair is held under the auspices of the College of Agriculture. Entries close on Jan. 2 and exhibits must be in place by Jan. 9. Judging will take place on Jan. 9, 10 and 11. All entries must be forwarded, charges prepaid to S. E. Greenway, Saskatoon, Sask. The Mooney Seed Co., Ltd., Regina, have donated a challenge shield for annual competition.

The Seed Commissioner at Ottawa is advocating a standard seed packet and it is understood that the Canadian seed trade will adopt same. This packet will contain more seed than formerly but will retail at 10c. instead of 5c. Prices of seeds will remain high for the coming season but there will be sufficient for all. England and France have been able to send us a fair amount of garden seeds. Shipments from Denmark have been prohibited during the past two years. The finer sorts came from this source and it looks as if there would be a limited quantity imported from this source for next season's needs but the price will be high.

Catalogs Received

J. Bolgiano & Son, Pratt, Light and Ellicott sts., Baltimore, Md., 1919 catalog of vegetable, flower and field seeds, also horticultural tools and sundries; 88 pages, freely illustrated, and with patriotic colored covers.

H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga., Spring, 1919 catalog, No. 57, of vegetable, field and flower seeds; also Roses and other flowering plants, and insecticides; 98 pages, with attractive colored covers.

The Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O., 1919 seed book, listing vegetable, flower and field seeds in considerable variety; also bulbs, plants and horticultural sundries; 98 pages, freely illustrated, with colored covers.

Richard Diener Co., Kentfield, Martin County, Cal., 1919 catalog, listing Gladioli of Mr. Diener's production; also vegetables and flowering plants originated by Mr. Diener; a twenty-page catalog, attractively illustrated, with a handsome cover in colors.

Carnation Support Co, Connersville, Ind., circular of self-tying flower supports for Roses, Carnations and 'Mums.

Everette R. Peacock Co., seedsmen, 4013 Milwaukee av., Chicago, Ill., circular of vegetable and flower seeds and Onion sets.

Priorities Restrictions Off

All remaining restrictions and directions imposed by the Priorities Division of the War Industries Board, and which are still in effect, will be lifted on Jan. 1, 1919. Announcement to this effect is contained in an official order issued by Edwin B. Parker, Priorities Commissioner.

E. A. D.

Restrictions on Stock

Plants, trees, shrubs and vines, including bulbs, have been removed from the list of Restricted Imports No. 1, according to an announcement of the War Trade Board. Licenses will now be freely issued providing the application for such licenses are otherwise in order. (This carries to June 1 next, it is understood.—Ed.)

Holiday Card

Robert Nicholson, seedsman, Dallas, Texas, is sending out an attractive holiday card showing the Statue of Liberty in the foreground and in the background a relief map, in perspective, of the U. S.; in the distance the rising sun. Near the statue is a Holly spray. The card is worded as follows: Greetings—May the glories of Liberty shine each day on our friends and homes in the U. S. A.

Toronto, Ont., Canada

Heavy Demand for Greens

Christmas this year is accompanied by a great deal more mirth and joyousness than has been the case for the past few years. The demand for Holly, Mistletoe and greens is unprecedented and sales are heavy. S. A. Frost alone handled a carload of Christmas trees, or nearly 2000. This did not include the small potted trees made white by dipping in water and sprinkling with plaster of Paris. Others, in addition, were touched with starch and sprinkled with mica and Epsom salts, making a good imitation of snow.

There have been many big jobs decorating stores, churches and houses with greenery of some sort.

The Steele Briggs Seed Co., Ltd., report an enormous sale of Holly and Mistletoe, wreaths and evergreen wreathing, Immortelles and Magnolia wreaths with Maple leaves or Poinsettia flowers. The firm also sold a great quantity of Christmas bells and trees, and Hinoki Christmas roping, the latter a Japanese novelty, and Magnolia wreaths decorated with Flanders' scarlet Poppies.

Delivery Costs

J. A. Neal, in further reference to the cost of delivery, states that his costs run from 14c. to 40c. per parcel and average about 21c. Even the small store has the wages of the messenger to pay and 10c. carfare on each delivery. As soon as the Christmas rush is over Mr. Neal will prepare a complete statement on costs for The Florists' Exchange, taking them month by month with an accurate statement of what it costs him for chauffeur, upkeep of trucks, gas, oil, etc.

Christmas stock is scarce and prices are very high. Mr. Simmons states that there will be no difficulty in disposing of all the stock available.

All the stores are beautifully decorated for Christmas. There appeared to be a greater demand for potted plants.

Prices of flowers are "away up" for Christmas and they are very scarce.

G. A. B. Krook, horticulturist for the C. P. R., reports that 284 acres were cultivated last year in Western Canada alone. The beautiful flower and war gardens along the Canadian Pacific Railway add greatly to the interest when traveling on this line.

Fred H. Miller is again running for the office of Deputy Reeve of York County. He is a member of the firm of Miller Bros.

The John Connon Co., Hamilton, made use of white bowls in different designs to replace the temporary scarcity of baskets, the importation of which was stopped for a short time.

Clarence Price, Hamilton, has had his store re-decorated.

Dunlop & Son, St. Catharines, have dropped the flower trade and are devoting all their attention to gardening.

McK. Ross & Sons, Chatham, have moved into a large new store on King st. West.

Club Meeetings

The following officers of the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Association were elected at the annual meeting, held this month: President, J. J. Trevis; first vice-president, R. Miller; second vice-president, W. J. Smith; secretary-treasurer, W. Horobin; associate secretary, J. McDonald; executive committee, G. Pascoe, H. J. Eddy, E. Haywood, C. H. Smith, Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Schoening.

The regular meeting of the Toronto Florists and Gardeners' Association was held on Dec. 17, with President H. G. Dillemuth in the chair. The first part of the evening was taken up with a debate between F. D. Clark and R. G. Thompson on the advisability of holding conventions.

George Mills was appointed to a vacancy on the executive committee, due to the fact that the past president had been appointed secretary.

It was decided to have a member give a synopsis of the articles in the various American and Canadian papers at each meeting. R. G. Thompson will give a synopsis at the next meeting on Jan. 21, 1919.

Prizes were awarded to exhibitors for the monthly exhibition.

Florists' baskets, which had been on the embargo list in the Dominion of Canada, have been restored to their former status, and can now be brought in.

Foreclosure Sale

On January 8th, 1919, at 10 A.M., on the steps of the Queens County Court House, Long Island City, N. Y.

An exceptional greenhouse property and dwelling, situated at Whitestone Ave. and Higgins Lane, Flushing, Long Island, New York, 7 miles from Manhattan, via Queensboro Bridge.

Three acres of land. 12 greenhouses (about 25,000 ft. of glass), Hitchings, Lord & Burnham and Wm. Lutton builders, in 1st-class condition; side walls and all benches built of concrete in most practical manner; 15 frames, 100x6 ft., built of concrete; 10 frames, 100x6 ft., built of wood; all heated by hot water. "Ideal" and Hitchings' boilers, practically new, heat the place. Concrete cellars for coal, stables, pot sheds and other buildings make it an unusually well planned place for growing pot plants. For years Ericas, Acacias, etc., were made a specialty of by H. D. Darlington, later by Knight & Struck.

A conservative valuation of the entire plant, including land, is $50,000.

Premises will be sold subject to a first mortgage of $15,000, interest at 6%.

Utica, N. Y.

Theodore Hillenbrand, fourteen years old, son of John Hillenbrand, florist at the Utica State Hospital, was instantly killed on Dec. 14, being struck by a street car while taking [illegible] on Genesee st. He was born at Bethlehem, Pa., where his father was employed with the late John E. Haines; later the family moved to London, Canada, where Mr. Hillenbrand was foreman for Gammage & Sons.

Albany, N. Y.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Albany Florists' Club held the first Thursday in December the followmg officers were elected: President, William Newport, Albany; vice-president, Robert Billson, Troy; secretary and treasurer, Robert Davison, Albany; trustees for three years, Howard Menand, Menands; Joseph Troudt, Canajoharie and George Nagangast, Albany. Plans were made for a banquet and installation of officers to be held the first Thursday evening in January at Keeler's hotel but the first Thursday coming the day after New Years, it has been decided to postpone it to the second Thursday, January 9. It was also decided to have a flower show and ladies' night the first Thursday in March. W. N.

Syracuse, N. Y.

In general the florists of this city were optimistic over the prospects of a successful Christmas trade. The retail stores reported a larger volume of business up to this writing than last year, and good prices were obtained. So far the mild weather has greatly reduced the necessity of heavy packing against frost, thus saving much work and expense.

While the wholesale prices of cut flowers are high, there seems little complaint from the flower buying public, who are becoming educated to the fact that the florist has increased expenses. Comparatively speaking $3 a doz. for Carnations still seems high to a few, but the retail prices of flowers has increased in the same ratio that the purchasing power of the dollar has decreased.

Good cut Roses are scarce. Potted plants are extremely few; in fact the scarcity in potted plants seems more acute this season than at any previous time. All the wholesalers were sold out many days ago. However, there are some extra fine Cyclamen Poinsettias Begonias, and other seasonable plants, but practically no Azaleas are to be found.

Club Elects Officers

At the December meeting of the Syracuse Florists' Club new officers were elected, and at the January meeting, which will take place on Jan. 6, they will be installed. The new officers are: Pres. W. F. Bultman (re-elected); Vice-Pres., S. C. Baker; Secy.-Treas., L. J. Mulhauser (re-elected).

It is proposed at the next meeting to plan both a pleasant and instructive program for the coming year. As far as possible it will be endeavored to cover topics of interest to the trade, not only from the growing end, but also in connection with cost data, economical business methods, etc. These will be discussed, not only by members of the club but by other business men as well, who will be invited to speak. M.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

There has been no great excitement in the flower business due, perhaps, to the high price of all stock. Prices held up almost to Christmas prices except in Am. Beauty Roses. There were plenty of them on the market, but they did not move at all. Prices held firm until the end of the week but so many long grade Am. Beauty Roses were shipped to the market that the wholesaler was glad to get rid of them at greatly reduced prices. The Roses were extremely scarce, as many of the growers are holding them in order to have enough for the Christmas trade.

Stock is going to be high in price and scarce. Carnations will be very short in supply. Paperwhites are not plentiful and as there is little variety to select from the buyers are satisfied to take what they can get. Stevia, Lilies, Peas, Calendulas, Primroses and Valley are about the only stock obtainable. The supply houses are almost cleaned out of all the novelty goods they had in stock. All kinds of wreaths and baskets are seen in the shop windows and market stands. There seem to be many street men and other venders who are not going to dispose of all their goods, for up to this writing, Saturday, Dec. 21, they have moved very little. Good Holly and wreaths are scarce. Wreaths are selling from $3 to $3.50 per doz., wholesale. Boxwood cleaned up well and there was not enough for all orders.

Good blooming plants are all sold up and seem to be much in demand. Many stores are pushing plants and artificial flowers in place of cut flowers. Some dealers predict that flowers will drop in price before Christmas Day and fancy Roses will be a glut on the market.

Back from the Army

Wm. Piggotts was discharged from the Army in time to help Randolph & McClements with their Christmas rush.

Oliver Langhans, Geo. McCallum, Harry Langhans and John McCallum, have received their honorable discharge from the Army and are expected home to help out with the holiday rush.

G. Wessenauer of Sewickley held the lucky ticket for a Buick automobile that was raffled off at the Liberty fair last Saturday.

Visitors last week were Jos. Haube, Charleroi, Pa.; Harry Irwin, Monessen, Pa.; John Hellstern, Wheeling, W. Va.; S. McCausland, Steubenville, O.; Mrs Carey, New Brighton, Pa.; Pete Hofman, New Galilee, Pa., and Mrs Leith, Butler, Pa. N. McC.

Lancaster, Pa.

Saturday, Dec. 20, Lancaster's big shopping day, gave a promise, not of a record breaking Christmas, but one that will prove satisfactory to any one in the retail business.

The cut flower situation has not improved greatly, although a few bright days during the past week helped somewhat. Fortunately for the trade, plants were never much better than they are this season, some wonderful stock coming from the Craig's in Philadelphia and some just as good, but not in so large variety, from our local grower, H. D. Rohrer, who has developed a good shipping trade in Primula.

Madeup baskets are popular this season and find a ready market, especially the medium priced ones; when they get beyond the $10 mark Lancaster's buyers are few and far between.

Our local lodge of Elks distribute about 500 baskets each Christmas to the poor, and it seems to me that a few flowers with each basket would bring an added Christmas cheer. I am making this suggestion to fellow Elks all over the country, to keep in mind and follow next Christmas.

Stocks Still Short

A trip through the country to a point about 30 miles east of Lancaster on Saturday, Dec. 20, took me past a number of greenhouse establishments. In none of them did I see any surplus flowers or even of buds, so that it looks as if the shortage would continue. At Elmer Weaver's there is a fair crop of Sweet Peas, but also many bare stems where the buds have dropped off.

A short stop was made at M. J. Brinton's of Christiana, where several thousand Carnation flowers of good quality were being graded for shipment. The houses were fairly well filled with buds. One bed of Mrs. C. W. Ward was a surprise as it was planted in October with the idea of using it for cuttings and today it is not only a mass of buds but the flowers are especially fine; just the opposite to what one would expect. Mr. Brinton, whose specialty is Lilies, has house after house planted and will have a fine lot for the holidays. The foliage of some of his Magnificum turns yellow, which he attributes to the lack of a sufficiently high temperature, but they are making wonderful breaks and this house will make its record later in the season. About 12,000 Paperwhites are under way but no Tulips nor Hyacinths, their place being taken by Freesias and two immense beds of Spanish Iris.

Ira Landis of Paradise is getting fine Mushrooms from his Carnation beds as well as a crop of flowers from the plants. The one does not interfere with the other in his particular soil.

The writer is sending out the following card to the members of the Florists' Club:

HAPPY NEW YEAR FROM YOUR SECRETARY. May every day be a prosperous one and every week's issue of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE add to your pleasure and prosperity, and be a reminder that I would like to have your renewals, copy for any advertising you have and be glad to receive any news items you can give me. ALBERT M. HERR.

Scranton, Pa.

Trade in general was excellent, regardless of the high prices and in spite of the poor weather conditions. There was a shortage of evergreen roping, and Christmas trees could not be bought at any price; the same can be said of Holly and Mistletoe. Our stock was composed mainly of Cyclamens, ferns and Poinsettias, with a good stock of cut flowers, and had the weather been favorable on the 24th we would have made a cleanup.

Trade opened up briskly on Christmas Day and at the close of business we were practically cleaned up. The cut flowers stock was very good, but the plants were not up to the usual standard. Prices, however, did not seem to make any difference. NEW YORK FLORAL CO.

Clubs and Societies

Sewickley (Pa.) Hort. Society

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the society was held on Tuesday evening Dec. 10, when the following officers were elected: S. W. Black, Pres.; Wm. Thomson, Jr., Vice-Pres.; John Carman, Sec'y; W. W. Scott, Treas. Executive Committee: A. E. Boncey, M. Curran, J. Barnet, A. Etherington and Wm. Thomson, Sr., The financial statement showed a good balance on the right side.

It was resolved to hold monthly competitions at each regular meeting of the coming year, and the executive committee was instructed to draw up a schedule.

Thos. Tyler was awarded a cultural certificate for a vase of Cypripediums of more than 20 distinct varieties and Wm. Thomson, Jr. a vote of thanks for seasonable flowers.

JOHN CARMAN, Secy.

Westchester (N. Y.) and Fairfield (Conn.) Horticultural Society

Annual Meeting

The annual meeting was held in Hubbard's Hall, Greenwich, Conn. Dec. 23, Pres. P. W. Popp, presiding. The judges for the evening were W. Whitton, James Linane and Tom Atchison. Awards were made to W. Graham, James Stuart, W. Smith, Robert Williamson, W. Morrow, Alex. Geddes and Thomas Ryan. Mr Graham explained his method of growing Bouvardia. A silver medal was presented to him for obtaining the highest number of points, during the past year.

Treasurer Williamson read his annual report, which showed that the society is advancing; he received a hearty vote of thanks for his creditable report.

The following officers were elected: Pres., William Graham, Greenwich; Vice-pres., Thomas Atchison, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Fin. Sec'y, John D. Wilson, Greenwich. Robert Williamson and John Conroy were unanimously chosen to succeed themselves in the offices of treasurer and corresponding secretary respectively. The Executive Committee chosen was: William Whitton, John Orr, James Tough, Alex. Smith and John Forbes.

The next meeting will be held on Friday, Jan. 10. As some highly important business will be brought up for discussion it is hoped that all the members will be present.

JACK CONROY, Corr. Sec'y.

Exhibit of Chrysanthemum Novelties

The committee appointed to view the exhibit of Elmer D. Smith, at the Detroit Florists' Club meeting of Dec. 11 to 18, reports the Chrysanthemum novelties valuable additions to the list of fine varieties already in commerce, and highly commends them to growers. The variety Victory is especially distinct. Its long range of blooming period from early November till a corresponding date in December adds materially to its value. Loyalty is distinct and beautiful and from the appearance of the bloom is a free grower. December Queen may be properly termed a bronze of extraordinary beauty. It will find by its merits a coveted place in the list of bronze varieties.

Club Elects Officers

At the meeting of the Hartford Florists' Club, held on Friday night, Dec. 6, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms, the following officers were elected: Pres., Joseph McManus; Vice-Pres., J. Albert Brodrib; Sec'y, Geo. Marchant; Treas., Wallace W. Thompson. Executive Committee, Geo. G. McClunie, Joseph F. Coombs and Vincent Umstead.

Pittsfield, Mass.

The new Drake flower shop in the Hull-Morton block opened on Dec. 14.

The Flower Shop at 40 Fenn st. will in the future be conducted by The Flower Shop, Inc. At a meeting held recently officers were chosen. Stanley G. Barnes of this city and Robert L. Smith of Schenectady, N. Y., who successfully conducted the business for the past nine years, will retain a large interest in the concern. Mr. Barnes will retire from the active management of the store, having received an excellent offer from the F. W. Woolworth Co., and will move to Atlanta, Ga. He will be succeeded by Chas. D. Mackie, who has been plant manager at the Cromwell Gardens of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Mr. Mackie was connected with the retail trade before going with A. N. Pierson, Inc.

Worcester, Mass.

Christmas trade is on with a rush and the florists expect to be cleaned out. Owing to the high prices that florists must demand this year in order to come out on top, the public were slower in placing orders, devoting most of their time asking prices, but as uniform prices prevailed at all shops the public was finally obliged to place its orders.

F. B. Madans, Main st. florist, is confined at his home threatened with double pneumonia, and although he is reported to be out of danger he will be unable to be at the store for Christmas trade.

The sudden death of Joseph Crotty, for nearly 25 years connected with Mr. Madans, has hit the business rather hard. Obituary notes concerning Mr. Crotty will be found elsewhere. Fred Madans, Jr., has taken charge of the store.

Wallace Sargent, one of the oldest florists in Worcester, who closed his greenhouses on Holden st. this Fall, is taking charge of the funeral work at the Madans store for the present.

Honorably Discharged

Vetor Dorey, for nearly a year in the Service, has been honorably discharged and is now back on the job at Lange's flower shop.

Chester Bernard, formerly with Littlefield's, and more recently of Aiken the Florist, Springfield, has been honorably discharged from the Army and is visiting friends in this city.

Owing to the scarcity of cut flowers the potted plants and basket novelties are being pushed more by the florists. There is also a brisk demand for cemetery wreaths this year, of Boxwood and Cones, etc.

Prevailing market prices of cut flowers were as follows: Carnations $6 to $10, with the exception of red and scarlet, which are bringing $12 and $14; Roses $10 to $30; Sweet Peas $1 to $2.50; Violets (very scarce) $2 to $3.50 per 100; Stevia $1 per bunch. A few Christmas White 'Mums bring from $2 to $4 per doz. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are quoted at 50c. for a small bunch. Red Ruscus and Immortelles are extremely scarce and supply houses refuse to take any more orders. F. L. M.

WENHAM, MASS.—We regret to learn that Austin F. Tracy, father of B. Hammond Tracy of Cedar Acres, Mass., died on Dec. 4, aged 82. He was born in Michigan and resided there till about 20 years ago when he came to Massachusetts to live with his sons. While living in Massachusetts he was greatly interested in vegetable growing and in his sons' Gladiolus fields.

The Florist-Grower's Complete Working Library

An Easy Way to Own These Eminently Valuable Books

Johnson's Gardeners' Directory and Cultural Instructor

Recognized the world over as the most complete and compact HORTICULTURAL DICTIONARY. Covers the whole field of horticulture and floriculture in 923 pages of closely set type.

Johnson's Dictionary deals with every phase of gardening, from flower pots to orchid culture, and mossy lawns to tools and tool houses. Brief instructions are given for the proper method of cultivating the species of every genus listed, including the most suitable soil, the best methods of propagation, and whether hardy or requiring greenhouse or stove protection. Fruits receive special attention, each kind having a more or less lengthy article devoted to its cultivation. Every garden vegetable is discussed in detail, in proportion to its importance, with regard to the best methods of cultivation, most suitable soil, handiest or most expedient ways of propagation and rearing. Herbs are dealt with similarly. A description of all the more common diseases, insect pests and other enemies are given, together with methods of prevention and remedy.

Home Fruit Grower

By M. G. KAINS

A clear, simple, practical and comprehensive volume for the amateur who seeks to grow high quality fruits for home needs, whether to eat out of hand as dessert, or to put up in some culinary way.

The author was particularly well fitted to write this book, having been reared in just such a fruit plantation, and in a village where for more than half a century the leading hobby has been high quality fruit growing for family use. With this standard of excellence he has united the best modern methods of securing choice specimens—methods little practiced, or even unknown, in his boyhood days—tillage, spraying, thinning, fertilizing, cover cropping, preventing frost injuries, low heading, rational pruning—each simple in itself and each conducive to the production of an abundance of the best fruit.

Besides general topics each fruit suitable to the home garden is discussed, in many cases with descriptions of a dozen, a score or even more varieties of conspicuous merit from the home plantation standpoint: Apple, Pear, Quince, Peach, Nectarine, Plum, Cherry, Apricot, Strawberry, Raspberry, Dewberry, Blackberry, Grape, Loquat, Fig, Juneberry, Pawpaw, Persimmon, Kaki, Wineberry, Pomegranate.

Heavily illustrated with teaching pictures. Cloth, postpaid.....$1.50

Commercial Carnation Culture

By J. HARRISON DICK

A Practical Book for Practical Men

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW ABOUT

The best varieties of the present day?
The proper shipping of stock?
Hybridizing and cross-breeding?
Diseases and insect pests?
The best type of greenhouse?

Commercial Rose Culture

By EBER HOLMES

Which embraces the author's experience extending over many years in the growing of Roses under glass and outdoors.

The book does not delve into the ancient history of the Rose or indulge in long descriptions and classifications of varieties, but points out to the beginner, the small grower, or the florist with a retail trade, who grows a few Roses with his general stock, the best way to be successful in growing good Roses.

165 pages, heavily illustrated, price, delivery postpaid, $1.50

Sweet Peas for Profit

By J. HARRISON DICK

Will prove an invaluable assistant. Even the expert grower of this graceful and beautiful flower finds it of value.

Gives up-to-date methods of growing Sweet Peas under glass in Winter and in the open air for a Summer crop. Consists of eleven chapters: Market Conditions, Cost and Profit, Houses, Cultivation, Sectional Treatises, Varieties, Cutting, Packing and Marketing, Raising New Varieties, Outdoor Cultivation (with a section on "Up-to-date Culture in England") Pests and Diseases and History of the Winter-flowering Sweet Pea.

Many factors of great importance are emphasized and a new ideal is set for the cultivation of this beautiful annual flower.

Handsomely printed and illustrated. 147 pages with complete index. Price, delivery postpaid....$1.50

Discovery in Use of Potash

The German potash propaganda, so successful among American farmers in the ten years before the great war, overleaped itself as did other German propaganda. It is pretty certain, writes O. S. Morgan, professor of agriculture at Columbia University that many farmers in the Eastern States, especially those growing Potatoes on loam soils, were persuaded to buy much more potash in their fertilizers than was warranted from the standpoints of potash shortage in the soil or immediate profits in increased crop yields.

Soils being no respecters of persons or sources of potash, absorbed and held back from immediate crop utilization or leaching in the drainage water a large fraction of the superfluous potash. Hence soils rarely showed by loss of vigor and in decreased yields a potash hunger until this year, when, after three seasons of reduced potash rations, many of our fields showed clearly that potash had become a chief crop limiter.

In a free lecture by Mr. Evans of Long Island at Columbia a report was made of a fertilizer test on sandy soil in Nassau County, N. Y. In 1917 a fair yield of Potatoes on normal vines had been gathered But in 1918 a yield of fifty bushels of low quality and small size Potatoes per acre on diseased vines were dug where no potash salts were applied. A yield of 150 bushels per acre of marketable grade from healthy vines were dug where a small amount of potash fertilizer had been applied at planting time. The fields were side by side on uniform sandy soil.

If unwittingly the Eastern farmers of sandy soils had not yielded to the German potash "penetration" scheme, it seems to me, writes Prof. Morgan, we should have felt potash shortage keenly, and so feeling would have given large measure of "comfort to the enemy." If, on the other hand, German trade grabbers had been satisfied with a plain measure of business they would have had the satisfaction of realizing that in 1914-1918 they did have a monopoly of potash. Now this monopoly is doubly broken by armistice and by our discovery of ourselves.

Shade Trees to Honor Soldiers

The following is from the Philadelphia Record of Dec. 9. Mr. Wohlert is a nurseryman of Narberth, Pa. Nurserymen ought to be deeply interested in the plan for memorial trees for soldiers and sailors and should show their interest at every opportunity.

Among the many movements afoot in honor of the defenders of liberty possibly the most popular will be that which has been started in many of our small communities for the purpose of planting a tree for each and every one of our men in uniform that entered the service willing to risk all for the great cause. The following extract from a letter addressed to the wife of one of our men in France shows the sentiment of the soldiers toward this movement:

American
Y. M. C. A.
On Active Service
With the American Expeditionary Forces
Nov. 4, 1918.

From Alfred L. Cutts,
Co. A., 314th Infantry.
A. E. F.

Narberth must be getting to be some place when London newspapers mention it. Was looking over a Daily Mail the other day, and up near the head of the paper was a piece about Narberth and Narbrook Park. It almost took my breath away. It went on to say that Narberth had started planting trees for the men who had left town to defend their country in France and that three trees had been planted as a starter with a big celebration attended by hundreds of people, Narberth being the third place to adopt that idea. Do I have a tree, too, or are they just for those that have been laid to rest here in France?

The artistic value of our monuments, dating from the war between the States, is not high, many of them being anything but a credit to those that planned them (note one on Belmont ave. in the Park). We can all agree that the artistic value and the benefit from a good shade tree are unquestioned.

Let all the shaded avenues in our suburban communities date from this great war and consecrate them to the memory of our heroes. A. E. WOHLERT.

Insects Attacking 'Mums

The Midge Again Plays Havoc

Enclosed you will find a few 'Mum leaves affected by some insect. Kindly inform me what is the best insecticide to use to get rid of this pest? I have tried Aphine, Fungine and Tobacco and gas for smoking (Hydrocyanic acid gas?).

I was given a few young 'Mum plants in the Spring and this pest is all over my 'Mums now. I have grown tens of thousands of 'Mums, but have never had anything like this before. How can I treat stock plants for my next year's cuttings?—C. A. D., Conn.

The specimens submitted with this query show a severe attack of the Chrysanthemum midge or gall fly, both leaves and stems having an abundance of the characteristic galls caused by this insect. From the reports of the past season it would appear that this insect has spread over practically the whole United States now, probably owing to the fact that many growers did not notice the insect until it had become very numerous.

Fumigating with hydrocyanic acid every three days for a period of 30 days is recommended, or with nicotine paper every two days for a similar period, but in any case the fumigating should be done after midnight, as the insect has a habit of emerging from the gall between midnight and morning. If all the stock is affected as badly as the specimens noted, it would pay best to burn it up, and to secure some clean stock. W.

Coming Meetings and Exhibitions

Cleveland, O.—American Carnation Society, annual meeting, Jan. 29 and 30, 1919. A. F. J. Baur, Rockwood ave. and 38th st., Indiana polis, Ind.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Farmer's week, Cornell College of Agriculture, Feb. 10 to 15 inclusive.

Publications Received

Seed Trade Buyer's Guide for 1919, published by the Seed World, Postal Telegraph Bldg., Chicago, Ill., containing classified listings of seed growers, wholesalers and others connected with the trade; also list of seed trade marks, seed statistics and reference tables, running to 162 pages.

General Trade Notes

SAN FRANCISCO.—The new seed store of the Chas. C. Navelet Co. at Market near First st. was formally opened to the public on Dec. 16th. J. R. W.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—E. C. Colgrove, at present located at 511 Child st., will open a new store at 356 Lyell ave., in addition to his present location. He plans the erection of additional greenhouses this Spring.

NEWARK, N. J.—A recent fire in the store of Dominick Orgo & Son, florists, at 171 Ferry st., caused $1000 damage to stock and premises. The fire was caused by an overheated stove.

WHITE MARSH, MD.—Richard Vincent, Jr., ex-president of the Society of American Florists, who persists in calling himself Junior (and who has a better right for where will you find a younger man at his age?), celebrated the 78th anniversary of his birth on Dec. 16 last.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—Chas. DeClere opened what is known as the American Flower Shop, at 213 N. Washington st., on Dec. 12. The interior is attractively finished in white enamel, with fixtures to correspond. Mr. DeClerc began business as a small florist 11 years ago, in a small place on Adams st., and has built up a prosperous business.

GORHAM, ME. Fred H. Smith, florist, died at his home on South st. on Dec. 11. Mr. Smith's birthplace was Dayton where he was born on Oct. 29, 1860. He moved to Gorham 12 years ago, opening a greenhouse on South st., where he conducted a successful business. He was a member of Gorham Grange and an associate member of John R. Adams Post. He is survived by his wife and one son, Lieut. Royal H. G. Smith, now stationed in France; also a sister, Mrs. Addie E. Smith of Dayton.

News from the Center of the Belgian Nursery Industry

The publisher of the Horticultural Trade Journal posted letters of inquiry to Belgian firms on Armistice Day, Nov. 11. These were among the first letters to enter Belgium from England since the opening of the war, August, 1914. We publish herewith reply of Jules de Puysseleyr of Loochristy, Ghent, a center of the Belgian nursery trade, which appeared in the Horticultural Trade Journal of Nov. 27, 1918, and a copy of which has just reached our office. The letter will be found intensely interesting, as it gives a brief account of conditions during the war and as they were at the time of writing.

Many thanks for your kind letter. What a surprise, what a joy for us to receive a letter—a letter from England, England, the hope and salvation of Belgium, England, the dread and doom of Germany. Yes, we are once more free from the enemy, free from four long years of cruel oppression, free from unceasing threat and unbearable arrogance, free from continual and incessant robbery. From free people that we were we had become slaves, and since then we only have learned the real meaning of the word "Liberty."

If you could only come to Belgium and if you could see again your old friends and acquaintances, I dare say you would hardly know them, for we have suffered so much under the German yoke. It is not so much from lack of food, thanks to the kind Americans, people had not too much but just sufficient nourishment, but we all have suffered morally and this most cruel pain has left its visible marks on every one of us. The Germans tried everything to shake and break our spirits, they left nothing untouched to demoralize us. But I am proud to say that the Belgians baffled all their mean projects, they disdainfully rejected every hypocritical approach of reconcilement and they steadily believed in the victory of our dear allies and in the final delivery of our beloved country. This steady hope, this sweet dream has come to a happy reality, our delight and our joy are so much the greater now that we look back to our long and painful slavery.

What has meanwhile become of the nurseries and nursery trade? You know the prosperity of our place before the war, you have seen year after year the rapid development of the nursery trade and you are a true witness how the houses and grounds were kept clean and held in good state. What a painful impression it would make on you if you came and saw our nurseries now. What a decay—what a ruin! The houses not being painted these four years, and no putty being at hand, have suffered very much from sun, rain and wind and hardly keep together. Especially the old houses are totally dismantled and are not fit to shelter plants during Winter.

The stock of plants has become very small and many a nursery has no plants at all. At the beginning every one thought the war would not last long, it would soon come to an end and so everybody kept his nursery and stock of plants in good order.

In 1915, however, people seeing that the war still lasted, that there was no selling of plants, no fuel to be got and that the leaf soil and other necessary materials became scarce and expensive, threw their plants away and started to grow vegetables. In 1916 and following years the selling of plants became worse and worse, the prices lower and lower, fuel very scarce and exceedingly expensive and so one after another, especially the small nurserymen, gave up growing plants and went in for vegetables. I dare say that at this time the half of the nurserymen in our place have no plants at all. Palms have nearly disappeared, the old stock is almost sold out and there is no young stock at hand. Araucarias are very scarce, thousands of stock plants have been thrown away and very few young plants were raised. Rhododendrons look rather poor, for year after year these remained untouched, were not transplanted and were not taken care of. As to Azaleas, the great specialty of our place, some stock is left in a few nurseries, but the selection of varieties has totally disappeared. Some of the best English selling varieties such as John Llewelyn, President Osw. de Kerhove and J. B. Varonne, are hardly to be found. The chief varieties in culture and in stock are Madame Petrick, Madame Van der Cruyssen, Vervaeneana. Besides, these plants are not in shape, form, growth and strength similar to what they were before the war. All the plants are about one year backward in growth, for instance an Azalea that was salable at three years of cultivation before the war, looks now as a plant of two years old and is not salable at all. The young stock of Azaleas fails totally and it will be a long time before the growth of this valuable plant is at the height of its normal cultivation.

And why did the cultivation of plants so speedily go backward?

Both in point of landscape beauty and in economic value Willows have played an important part. See text on page 1035

First of all, and perhaps the chief cause was lack of coal. In 1914 everybody could buy coal as well in the first half of 1915, thereafter coal mines and coal trade falling under German control coal was not to be got any more. Now and then, however, a small distribution was made to the nurserymen, but not half sufficient and of very inferior quality. Therefore, we had to put our plants in as few houses as possible, cover them with old and never renewed mats, and heat the houses with wood, ashes and a few coals. You can imagine the effect this had on the plants, no light, no air, and not heating enough made the plants diseased and at last they died away. After each Winter thousands of Azaleas perished to be thrown away.

A second cause was the failure of new leaf soil. At the beginning of the war we had free passage all over the country, but soon after a passport being required to move about (which was seldom given, notwithstanding good payment), we were compelled to stop at our place, and could not bring the leaf soil from the places where it was to be found.

At the same time the horses were taken away for the German army, the vehicles were required for the same purpose, the result of this was that the various necessary materials could not be transported except at exorbitant prices which only a few could afford to pay. So it came that the plants always being transplanted in old and used soil could not set forth new roots, did not grow, remained stunted plants and at last perished.

We might have helped the plants with some good appropriate manure, but there was none to speak of. The best manure we used for Azaleas before the war was malt-radicles, but these were not to be got with money, not even with gold (so dear to the Germans). The German army wanted these for food for the horses and the malteries being under their control nothing of this precious manure could be obtained.

Another serious obstacle was lack of hands. Many people were engaged in our army, as to the remaining, the tender hearted Germans acquired by force young Belgian people and compelled them to work for the German army against our own country. So we had to help ourselves with boys and women and the work was not half done; we could not give the necessary care to the plants and the nurseries were more and more neglected.

At last I must say a word about the exportation of plants during the war. In 1914, the exportation being normal, plants were sent to all countries except Germany. In 1915 Germans prohibited us to send plants to their enemies, especially to England and France. However, I am pleased to say that a good many plants travelled to England via Holland and the Germans were not clever enough to prevent this. Meanwhile an avalanche of German nurserymen invaded our nurseries and with ridiculous prices tried to buy our plants and make a good price out of them in Germany. The German government, however, limited the import of plants into Germany; every German nurseryman was only allowed to import one-third of the plants he used to buy before the war. America imported as usual but plants generally travelled in very bad condition. In 1916 the trade was very bad. Germans bought some plants but at the lowest possible prices; England very likely got no plants at all, and the exportations to America that year were disastrous, not half the plants reaching their destination in good condition and not half the amounts of invoices were paid. Sweden, Norway and Denmark have been all this time good customers, and plants travelled well to these countries. 1917 and 1918 were the worst years of the war. The Germans made specially favorable conditions for their friends the Belgians, these were as follows:

Plants can be sent to neutral lands under the following conditions: A caution of ten thousand marks must be deposited in the hands of the Germans, half the amount of the invoice must be paid in the same hands, and one per hundred of the amount of invoice must be paid in gold. The caution and the half amount of invoice are returned when the goods are paid for within three or four months from date of invoice, and when several other conditions (too many to tell) are fulfilled. The gold tax is evidently not returned.

From all this you will learn how the Germans facilitated our trade and the commerce in general, for in their papers they always vaunted the efficacious aid granted to the Belgian trade and they always blamed England for being the only and real obstacle to the development of Belgian commerce!

I am pleased to let you know that the nurseries in Ghent and in our place have not been damaged by actions of war, the armistice being signed when our troops stood before Ghent and on our place no fighting took place. On Nov. 12 the Germans left Loochristy and we feasted our delivery for the rest of the week.

I cannot end my letter without addressing my most sincere thanks to the great and loyal nation of England which took so great an interest in the unhappy fortune of the Belgian people.

The Germans used to say "God punish England," but our constant prayer will be "God bless and save England."

Jules de Puysseleyr.

If, Mr. Employer, you are in urgent need of the services of skilled former employees now in camp anywhere in the United States, it is within your rights to communicate with them advising them to request their discharge through their camp authorities. This discharge will be given in all cases where the act will not disrupt or cripple existing organization, but no man who voluntarily enlisted prior to April 1, 1917, can obtain a discharge under this ruling.

Above by order of the Secretary of War, through Peyton C. March, General Chief of Staff.

Permanent Community Christmas Trees

The American Forestry Association has issued the following call to every community in the United States to take steps to make its Community Christmas Tree Permanent.

At this Christmas season let us consider plans for making the Community Christmas tree permanent. In such a tree we would have a reminder of the year around Christmas spirit and a daily lesson before us all of what the Christmas spirit means to say nothing of the elimination of the great waste every year caused by cutting another tree. In nearly every community there will be found an ideal spot for public gathering. There should be the living growing tree that would come to be the gathering point not only at Christmas, but at other times. Such a tree might become, in many places, the center of a scheme for planting memorial trees in honor of our sailors and soldiers. Look ahead to next year by having your committee consult the City or State Forester in regard to planting a permanent Community Christmas Tree.

Plenty Nitrate of Soda for 1919

The reason why the farmers of this country received only 66,778 tons of nitrate, instead of 109,000 tons, through the $10,000,000 appropriation made by Congress has been revealed today by C. H. McDowell, Director of the Chemical Division of the War Industries Board. The remaining 42,000 tons of nitrate were commandeered by the War Department when the German drive became a menace last Spring. Military necessity heretofore kept the details a secret. In reviewing the situation Mr. McDowell stated in part that "The nitrate of soda situation in the United States up until about Aug. 1 was a serious one, and although every explosive and chemical plant was kept supplied with sufficient nitrate to maintain full operations at all times, this was done by drawing from Government arsenal reserves and transferring stocks from fertilizer manufacturers and other holders to plants where stocks were about exhausted.

"Owing to the shortage of nitrate, it was deemed wise to ask the importers to discontinue sales of nitrate to fertilizer manufacturers other than for the making of sulphuric acid, and after July 1 all consignments of nitrate arriving in the country sold to such manufacturers were commandeered by the Ordnance Department and turned over to munitions and chemical manufacturers. These contracts thus handled were made between the importers and the fertilizer people in the Fall of 1917.

"Immediately on the signing of the armistice all restrictions were taken off the importers as far as sales of nitrate to fertilizer manufacturers and agricultural users was concerned, so that there will be no difficulty in supplying the entire needs of the United States for agricultural use for Spring planting.

A Happy New Year to each and every one of our readers

May it restore to them that full measure of prosperity to which they are so well entitled after the many hardships patriotically endured for weary months

Nineteen-eighteen

To the world at large the year to which we are bidding goodbye has been the most prolific of startling events throughout all the centuries in that, added to the events of the previous years of fighting, it has witnessed the overthrowing of kings and potentates, the collapse of proud countries and, greatest of all, the return of peace, at least to those lands through whose union militarism and the will to conquer has received its crushing defeat.

To those industries which, from their nature were incapable of assisting in any way to the equipping or maintenance of our armies, and among these the florists and nurserymen, the period of the war has been a trying one. While the war industries boomed, wages increased and millions made or earned money as never before, out of these self same conditions came the excessive prices for every necessary of life—and which still remain with us.

From the very beginning our trade had its difficulties; it was not in a position to raise prices of material which the public could as well do without—in fact, was advised all too often to do without. The flower gardens of the rich were turned into vegetable plots, contemplated improvements of estates abandoned, gardeners in private places sent to the right about. Flowers and ornamental planting alike shared in the general taboo.

Men in our industries, employer and employee alike, joined the Colors, men to do the work grew scarcer with every month. Those remaining did their best, contributing freely, generally from husbanded resources, to war loans and the organized war relief societies, meanwhile "carrying on" to the best of their ability.

The Winter of 1917-18 will long be remembered for its severity and the scarcity and often inability to obtain coal; many a struggler was crowded to the wall, a tragical ending to a long period of endeavor. Then came the crowning blow, the Fuel Restriction order of May last—cruel it was, but patriotic men submitted to it without a murmur. Its effect is well in evidence to this day, leaving to a scarcity of stock unknown in our annals.

Along in the very beginning of this year loyal women had done much to raise the ban existing in 1917. Flowers were in demand, all that could be had, for the sick and wounded in our hospitals. But as more flowers were contributed by the trade than purchased, this demand did not ameliorate financial conditions.

It was not really until October last that the trade was on the way to good business, and this in great part through a demand brought about by causes which we feel well assured were not hailed with pleasure.

As the year closes it is matter of rejoicing that with all restrictions off, with every industry booming, with work for everybody, and no impediments in sight, the trade, restored to its own, should view the incoming of the year of 1919 with unfeigned satisfaction.

The war has left us with many problems to solve—the principal one the return to prewar conditions. In their solution, however, we shall not be isolated but in the same boat with everybody engaged in business.

Pursuing a sane business course through the coming years is all that is requisite in order to enjoy the prosperity that is now promised us.

Obfuscating the Issue

A contemporary last week printed a brief synopsis of Quarantine Bulletin No. 37, concluding same with the following enigmatical observation: "That surely is nothing to alarm anybody; not a word about the palms, Azaleas, and general nursery stock the American public are not going to be allowed to have from abroad any more!"

If through placing their trust in this language the readers of our contemporary should June 1, 1919, wake up to the realization that field grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, etc., classed by the authorities as nursery stock, which previously had been obtainable in any quantity desired and at moderate prices, were only to be had in extremely limited quantities and at prices away in excess of any previous record, they will then have cause for wonder why so generally well informed a publication should have slighted so serious a proposition as they are today confronted with.

What the authorities call "Notice of Quarantine No. 37, with Regulations," but which for better understanding we have heretofore styled Plant Exclusion and Restriction, is now a law, having been signed by Secretary Houston, to take effect June 1, 1919, and cannot be overthrown except through the will of the Secretary of Agriculture or through the action of Congress.

By those who fully realize the situation protests against this sweeping edict should therefore be addressed to your Congressman or Senator now sitting, and as well to his successor, if such there is to be in the new Congress.

There is little doubt but that the principal countries affected, Belgium, Holland, England and France, will make a vigorous protest against what must be looked upon by many as an altogether unnecessary restriction on certain stocks, and use every endeavor at Washington through their representatives there and as well through their own government to bring about amelioration. It is within the possibilities that among the minor matters brought up at the Peace Conference this will be one of them. Belgium being afflicted on every side, it is going to take time for that country to get her nurseries back into working condition, but Holland, France and England's nurseries are in condition to export and their stocks are in just as healthy condition as they were before the outbreak of the war, we understand.

The Dominion of Canada has no restrictions, so far as we can learn, in force or in contemplation for excluding florists' stock from that country coming in from either the United States or Europe. Imports are subject to license, etc., but that is as far as the matter goes in Canada.

A Bermuda grower has received a letter from an employee of the Federal Horticultural Board in which the latter gives expression to the fact that in addition to having visited the Island, he has been more or less in personal touch with imports of nursery stock from Bermuda, and that so far as his personal observation goes commercial importations from Bermuda which have been inspected and certified by its own Department of Agriculture, have been clean. The Bermuda Director of Agriculture, F. J. Wortley, is a vigorous worker and has been accomplishing great things in ridding Bermuda of many of the troublesome insect pests and diseases which a few years ago constituted a grave menace to the fruits and decorative plants grown there.

And yet with this testimony to the present state of freedom from disease and insect life, Bermuda must suffer with the balance of the world, from Quarantine No 37.

Plant Exclusion and Restriction

By degrees some of our contemporaries are awakening to the fact that plant exclusion has assumed definite form and will take effect June 1 next, although it is remarkable to notice that one of our confreres still seemingly hugs the delusion that "there is nothing in the wind."

Hints and suggestions as to why this, that and the other has been brought about, are out of order at this late date. Quarantine No. 37, with regulations, is now in legal working form, and to seek ameliorating interpretations of some of the restrictions appears to be all that is left open, with no likelihood of the possibility of overthrowing these regulations until the Congress has more time to spare to look into domestic matters than is given to it just now.

We have given freely of space in these columns to point out to the trade just what was in store for it, but no one seemed to care a two cent piece as to what was threatening. Between two stools one is apt to fall to the ground and this is very much the reason why Quarantine ruling No. 37 has gone through, every interest appearing to pull for its own particular needs (to the deuce with the others). One wanted orchids to come in, another bulbs, another florists' field stock, and so on down the line. The cooperation necessary to prove effective has been lacking as against the strong concerted action of those in favor of restriction and exclusion. One contemporary puts the situation in a nutshell when it says, "the general attitude of a large proportion of the plant growing fraternity has been to let 'George' do it." Never has so stringent a measure gone through with such a show of indifference on the part of the trade.

True it is that the officials of the Society of American Florists were faithful to their trust and attended the hearings, giving valuable information against the proposed exclusion edict. Evidently their testimony received scant consideration for the reason that not only did the embargo go through in the very language in which it had originally been drawn, but its severity was added to because whereas last May it was proposed to give four years for the importation of certain of the now restricted plants to the end that nurserymen in this country could stock up and go on, these future dates were cancelled, and all imports have to be made by June 1 next, at which time they stop.

The Department of Agriculture offers to import and grow on new plants from abroad for such of the nurserymen and florists here as may desire them; after a due period of examination to see that they are not disease bringers or insect harborers, they will be turned over to the purchaser. In this way it is presumed that it will be possible for this country to keep in touch with all the new plants which are brought into being in other countries. Just how many hundreds of orders the Department of Agriculture could take care of in this way we are not informed, but we imagine that if importations should come forward as they have in the past the Department would be kept busily engaged in the importing business, and would need a staff of several hundred employees for this one particular purpose, and almost from the beginning, in evidence of which we submit the following:

In the report of importations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, just received, France furnished the United States with 3,444,697 fruit trees; 165,014 Roses, 858,829 forest and ornamental deciduous trees, and 1,560,221 ornamental deciduous shrubs. England furnished 4117 fruit trees and Holland 6482. England furnished 88,626 Roses; Holland 736,185. Of forest and ornamental deciduous trees, England supplied 8685; Holland 49,873; of ornamental deciduous shrubs, England 23,325 and Holland 357,290. And these importations, be it noted, were the smallest since the year 1914. All the above mentioned material it is understood is in future to be tabooed, except that which as above noted may be brought in by the Department of Agriculture.

Of fruit tree stocks and Rose stocks which are still open for import, France supplied during the year ending June 30, 1918, nearly 8,000,000, while England supplied of Rose stocks 1,637,900. These are allowed to come in, we are officially informed, because it has been represented by experts that they are necessary to the floriculture and horticulture of this country under existing conditions. Presumably, under the same train of reasoning, Rhododendrons, Azaleas and all the other "shut out" plants are unnecessary!

Certain of the provisions of this ordinance or edict are peculiar; for instance, one might ask why a Crocus bulb is admitted but a Snowdrop bulb is excluded? That is just one of the many ambiguities to be met with. So far as we know it has never been made clear why the exclusion ban has been placed on florists' field stock. It is known and admitted that many dangerous insects and pests have been brought into the United States from abroad, but of all of these very few have been attached to importations of the stock our dealers and florist growers are principally interested in. In the bulletin under review, Quarantine No. 37, dated Sept. 30, there is one quoted case of the finding of infestation on Azaleas from Belgium; also, quantity unnamed, of larvæ of the gold tail moth on Rhododendron, Viburnum, Roses and Japanese Maples from Holland; also the lesser bulb fly (however dangerous that may be) in bulbs from Holland.

A Man and a Brother.—Nathaniel Hawthorne tells the following story in his English Note-Books: A donkey, the other day, stubbornly refused to come out of a boat which had brought him across the Mersey; at last, after many kicks had been applied, and other persecutions of that kind, a man stepped forward, addressing him affectionately, "Come along, brother;" (and the donkey obeyed at once!—P.

H. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. of Nursery, Mo., has been awarded a contract by the U. S. Government for 5000 ornamental trees, 22,000 shrubs, 1000 vines and a lot of Roses to be delivered the latter part of March to the U. S. Housing Corporation at Davenport, Ia., and Rock Island, Ill.

Ruling Against Peach Moth

The New York State Department of Agriculture has issued an order prohibiting the shipment of Peach and sweet Cherry trees from Dutchess, Westchester, Nassau and Richmond counties to points outside because "a dangerously injurious insect known as the oriental Peach moth has been located and presumably distributed" in those counties.

Nursery Trade Policies

The Princeton Nurseries, Princeton, N. J., sets an example not only in its published trade list, but in its public advertising as well, in that it gives strong expression to the fact that as wholesalers they will not undertake any retail trade. In its trade list it enunciates this policy:

"When soliciting the orders and support and encouragement of those in the Trade—our only potential customers—we hold that Nurserymen are entitled to know our plan and methods: We Sell to Nurserymen Only; we have no retail trade; we do not accept orders from private parties; we sell nothing to or through Landscape Architects; we do not sell any of our stock at Auction; nor to Department Stores, nor the 5 and 10 Cent Stores, directly or indirectly, under our own name or any other name. We offer no criticism of those outlets nor of those who use them. We do not use them."

In their public (newspaper) advertising they call attention to the fact that they have no dealings with retailers in any way. They offer no criticism but simply state that they do not use these avenues of trade, but express the fact that it would be a pleasure to them to recommend intending purchasers of trees and plants to reliable nearby nurserymen who could supply them. This policy might well be termed "emphatic cooperation" with one's customers.

The Willows

Both in point of landscape beauty and economic value, Willows have played an important part. Dating back from early times to the present day the use of the Willow in wicker work has formed quite an industry in many parts of the world. The ones chiefly used in basket making are Salix viminalis and Salix purpurea, both of which produce in one season the long willowy shoots most desirable for the work. In the manufacture of gunpowder, the wood of the strong growing kinds like Salix alba and Salix vitellina have been brought into use. Some parts of Delaware still show traces of these Willow groves which provided the bulk of the wood for the production of charcoal, one of the ingredients of gunpowder.

Another important use for Willows is in the draining of swampy lands. Planted in such soils that contain stagnant water, the several kinds that delight in wet soils as Salix alba, Salix vitellina, Salix babylonica and others, take up by absorption much of this superfluous moisture and in this way are a source of value from a sanitary point of view.

For holding the soil of stream banks, Willows are indispensable. Having such a rapid, extended and tenacious root system, the soil is held in position even under flooded conditions which occur at some seasons of the year. In this case not only are they a physical aid to the situation but are also of ornamental value, as all must agree, who have seen large or small water courses fringed with these graceful trees and shrubs.

Willows and water effects seem inseparable, especially is this so in the use of the Weeping Willow, Salix babylonica, and its golden counterpart, Salix babylonica aurea. These trees, planted near water, are invariably most vigorous and healthy for the reason that the roots are able to obtain the full amount of moisture, which condition the tree seems to revel in. Here, too, because the position eliminates the presence of other competitive growth (at least on the water side) the development of the long pendulent growth is unchecked and is shown off to the best advantage. Because of this very habit of growth, weeping trees (of whatever kind they may be) should be used singly and not grouped with other plants, which would detract from the peculiar beauty they possess.

Except in some specific plantings where they are made use of in quantity for draining superfluous moisture from low lands or some other physical reason, one can easily err in a too free use of Weeping Willows in the landscape. One or two is usually sufficient. A grove of them would become tiresome.

Some few kinds, like Salix vitellina aurea, Golden bark Willow and Salix britzensis, "Flame-bark Willow," assume rich bark colors in Winter and on that account alone are highly valued by planters.

Two species that are popular with the public and hence handled by the florist for Midwinter use, are Salix Caprea, Goat Willow and Salix discolor, Pussy Willow. The silvery white flower beds that push out from the scalelike covering by the slightest pressure of a warm temperature are so distinct from other more regal flowers that for this very reason people desire them. Placed in a vase of water with a little charcoal as a sweetening agency, they will keep in a room for weeks,—as a matter of fact, in addition to having a vase of flowers, we will find (by the time they have lost their decorative value) we have a bundle of rooted trees which will readily transplant to the open ground in the Spring.

So easy a subject are all the Willows to propagate by cuttings that this is invariably the only method used in the production of new stock. EDWIN MATTHEWS.

A Comforting Revelation.—An unusually fat Mephistopheles in a Faust extravaganza was on his way "home" when he stuck fast in the stage trapdoor. The pulling of the demons below and the shoving of the mortals above were all of no avail. In the midst of the ludicrous scene a gallery wag delightedly vociferated: "Well friends, that's a comfort, anyhow; the regions below are full!"—P.

Obituary

D. Mendels

D. Mendels of Freyling & Mendels, Grand Rapids, Michigan, died at his home on Wealthy st., Dec. 18, after a brief illness. Although the immediate cause has been operative for four years he was at his work until the Monday before his death having made all preparations for the day's business. Being born in the Netherlands in 1850, he was 68 years old on Aug. 20. He came to this country in 1870 and has been engaged in floriculture since 1875. In 1880 he started his present business as partner with Nicholas Freyling, who passed away 14 years ago and was succeeded by his son, Edward N. Freyling. Mr. Mendels is survived by his wife and one married daughter. Besides being a successful business man he was a man of exemplary habits and staunch principles, and a prominent member of the Reformed Church in whose interests and philanthropies he was zealous.

Mr. & Mrs. Joseph A. Crotty

Joseph A. Crotty, for 24 years employed as a clerk in the store of F. B. Madaus, florist at 370 Main st., Worcester, Mass., died Dec. 17 in his home, 12 Wabash ave., of pneumonia, which developed from influenza. As a boy of ten years he commenced work after school hours and later when his school studies were completed, he devoted his entire time to the business. He was one of the most popular clerks employed in any store in the business section of the city.

Being born in Worcester, the son of James T. and the late Nellie M. (Day) Crotty, at his death he was aged 34 years, 9 months and 28 days. His wife, Mrs. Isabelle V. (Toomey) Crotty, who was also sick with influenza, survived him only four days, leaving one son, Joseph M. Crotty, aged 2 years and 10 months. His father; three brothers, John J. Crotty, James E. Crotty and Frank R. Crotty survive him.

Winfield S. Harry

The many friends in the trade, of Winfield S. Harry, Conshohocken, Pa. will regret to learn of his death on Tues., Dec. 17, at the age of seventy. Death was due to a lingering illness, although Mr. Harry had been in failing health for some time.

Mr. Harry's ancestors were among the first settlers in Pennsylvania and his father was among the first nurserymen in the State. It was on land owned by the elder Mr. Harry that his son Winfield S. started in business with a few hotbed sash. Mr. Harry was a member of the Society of Friends and one of the early members of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, resigning from the latter organization on his retirement from business, four years ago. At the time of his retirement he had been in the seed and florist business for nearly fifty years and was known for his sterling integrity, his strict attention to his trade obligations and his loyalty to his home town, where he was highly respected.

He is survived by his widow and two sons: the Rev. Ernest J. Harry of Cleveland, O. and William Cleaver Harry, manager for Chas. H. Fox, "The Sign of the Rose," Philadelphia. W. Cleaver Harry is well known to readers through his retail articles in THE EXCHANGE.

Five Flowered Specimen of Single Tulip—President McKinley

We recently received at this office from Fred J. Michell, Jr., of the Henry F. Michell Co., 518 Market st., Philadelphia, Pa., a Tulip plant of the variety President McKinley, having on it five large and perfect blooms. This was grown, Mr. Michell says, by his neighbor Mr. Hetzel and that he has quite a number of this variety, and several single bulbs average five blooms from a bulb, while the majority from two to three flowers. Tulips, it is hardly necessary to say, usually produce one flower each on a scape or scape-like peduncle which arises directly from the bulb, but sometimes this scape or scape-like peduncle branches into two to five stems, each bearing a flower. There is no statement made in the several catalogs before us that the variety McKinley has this branching peduncle, multi-blooming habit to a greater extent than other varieties, but from Mr. Hetzel's statement this would appear to be true. Among the original species the following and perhaps others are more than one-flowered: Præstans, one to several; Sylvestris, when in cultivation sometimes two-flowered; Saxatilis, two-flowered; Biflora, two to three flowers.

Possibly the variety McKinley has in it the blood of one of these several-flowered, original species.

The five-flowered specimen of McKinley which Mr. Michell kindly sent us is a large, strong, well-shaped plant with large, showy blooms, orange red, shading to carmine, about equal in size. We are presenting an illustration of it herewith.

Live Plants Semaphores to Health

Back to nature for us humans in danger of the Flue! Strange as it may seem, but nevertheless true, is the fact that under modern ways of living in closed and heated rooms, the most valuable friends to warn us of danger to our health in our living quarters, offices or workrooms, are Live Potted Plants, such as ferns, palms or flowering plants of various kinds. In a healthy atmosphere these plants prosper and indicate their wellbeing visibly to any observing eye, but as soon as the air becomes charged with unhealthy gases, or too dry and hot, or foul from lack of ventilation, the plants soon lose their thrifty appearance and become sickly if improvement in their surroundings is not being made. Even the novice can see these changes and, as human life and wellbeing is influenced by these same conditions, it is reasonable to conclude that when plant life suffers, human life under these same conditions cannot be at its best, and to resist disease or attacks of influenza a person ought to be in the prime of health and free himself of all conditions undermining his wellbeing.

As the average person does spend most of his time indoors, which is altogether contrary to nature for the physical wellbeing of man, it is certainly sensible to see that living conditions indoors are made as favorable to life as possible. The human organism is much more robust than that of plants in general, but constant living under adverse conditions weakens the strongest and weak constitutions succumb before their time.

Where the usefulness of growing plants comes in is in their role of signaling by the loss of their health that living conditions are injurious to their tender organs and, consequently, not beneficial to human life. To regulate conditions that plants may thrive is at the same time maintaining a healthy atmosphere to live in.

The essentials to the maintenance of life are fresh air, light, food and proper temperature. Outside of food these apply to plants equally well and when furnished so that temperate climate plants do their best, human life will also take its normal, healthy course.

A temperature of as near 65 degrees as possible does suit most plants of the temperate zone, and it is well to accustom oneself to this heat instead of ten degrees higher as is habitually found indoors.

Atmospheric moisture is usually deficient in our homes due to heating methods that parch the air without supplying additional moisture. Ventilation will overcome this to some extent, but water containers placed on or near radiators will help appreciably.

Asparagus Fletcheri densifolius

A variation (seedling) of A. Sprengeri, originating with F. W. Fletcher of Auburndale, Mass. and Orlando, Fla., differs from Sprengeri in the shorter, more compact and much heavier foliage. Four sprays of Fletcheri will make a larger bunch than a dozen of Sprengeri. The variety is of quick, strong growth. As a foundation for sprays of flowers it is far superior to Sprengeri, but is too heavy for vase use with most cut flowers. It has, apparently, better shipping qualities than Sprengeri, makes a very handsome basket plant and will prove especially valuable for that purpose. For five years it has been tested and found to came true from seed.

"Oh, mamma, I'm frightened!" came from little Tommie in bed. "What are you frightened about, my son?" "I hear somebody on the roof." "Oh, well, go to sleep, my boy; it's only your father taking off his shoes before he sneaks through the scuttle. He's just got home from the club in his airship."—Yonkers Statesman.

Asparagus Fletcheri (densifolius)
A variation of A. Sprengeri, originating with W. F. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass.

The Senate this week, by a good majority vote, overturned the excessive zone postage rates adopted in the War Revenue bill of 1917 which, carried out to their full extent, would have exacted 10c. a pound for newspapers in the eighth zone. The new Senate rate is 1c. a pound for the first 150 miles and 1½c. a pound for all distances beyond. But this measure has still to pass through Congress and whether that body will acquiesce in the reduction remains to be learned. The papers, the past year, have been under much heavier mailing expense than since 1879, due to the operation of the present law which, if maintained will curtail the value of all and ruin many.

Gravity Method of Soil Handling

In some of the old style houses that are blocked together, there is no way of getting the soil in or out except through a doorway and it is usually carried by hand. The accompanying illustration shows a simple gravity method of handling soil. Use 2in. x 3in. lumber for the track. The sections can be joined together by easily detachable iron or wooden plates, using graduated supports at intervals to support the track.

Make several wooden box cars that hold about a bushel or a quantity that two men can handle readily. These cars should be little wider than the track. In making them, allow the side boards at the bottom to extend about 6in. below the bottom of the car. Within 4in. of each end and 2in. below the bottom drill a ¾in. hole on each side. Cut two pieces of ¾in. pipe 12in. longer than the width of the car. Now cut two pieces of 1¼in. pipe long enough to fit easily beneath the bottom boards of the car and between the side boards. Place the 1¼in. pieces between the side boards where the hole has been bored and run the ¾in. through it to form a roller; the latter extending equally beyond each side to serve as handles.

By using a roller at each end of the car it will run readily down a track without much grade. A large box at the doorway can be used as a platform for the cars to rest on while they are being filled. By using several cars and running back the empties by hand or rolling them on the edge of the bench considerable soil can be handled by a few men quickly and easily. Of course the track can be extended as far as desired, grade being downward when filling and the reverse when taking soil out of houses to the doorway. This apparatus is inexpensive and is much simpler than having a track of rollers such as was put on the market some time ago Chas. A. Black Jr.

Why Say More.—An Irish interpreter in a Waterford court recommended a prisoner who was making a rather long defence to be quiet. I asked him why the man might not have his say. "Sure," said he, "he's said all he has to say, and there's no use in any more."—Thackeray—P.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces

George McCallum, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been transferred from the Municipal field at Chicago to a training vessel at New York to complete his course in the Navy.

Wm. J. Peirce, Jr., who has arrived from overseas and is looking fine, has been in several battles, been gassed and wounded. He speaks highly of the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.

Thomas Silverblatt, discharged from the Army, has returned home. Before entering the service he was manager of the floral department of the William Penn Hotel of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Geo. Schlicht, greenhouse man for Scott the florist, of Buffalo, N. Y., was in the fighting in France, as a machine gunner, but escaped without injury. Frank McGee, former store man of the same firm, has been mustered out at Camp Dix, where he was mess sergeant for the past year.

The friends and relatives of Private Karl K. Whitthuhn, of Cleveland, O., who was recently reported missing in action, rejoice to learn that this report is not correct. He is recovering from illness in the base hospital in Angers, France. Private Witthuhn is a member of the 18th Infantry, A. E. F., and has been overseas since last July. He is the second son of Fred C. Witthuhn, the West 25th st. florist, of Cleveland, and one of the most popular of the younger members of the trade in that city. J. M. L.

Victor H. Ries, formerly with the F. & F. Nursery of Springfield, N. J., is corporal in the 302d Ammunition Train, and has seen over three months steady service at the front. He is a graduate of Cornell University, where he also received the degree of Master in floriculture. During his service abroad he has seen not a little of French horticulture, and writes that while in the Marne salient his companions at one time were quartered in the grounds of a magnificent chateau, where the Huns prior to departure had mined all the buildings including the magnificent greenhouses and walled garden. The wires were discovered, but not before the chateau had been accidentally blown up, although the greenhouses were saved.

From one of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE soldiers "Over There," V. A. Di Clemente, comes this poetic effusion, prefaced with the statement, "I have seen it quite plentiful, where once great battles raged."

THE MISTLETOE

Mute harbinger of Christmas Day
'Midst desolate ruins, in sweet repose
Brought thoughts of dawning happiness,
Of country, home and loved ones,
So dear, so near, yet far away.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., had 60 men who joined under the Colors, several among them becoming officers. The first man of the lot reported back for work the past week. Three men who went from one section were all wounded. Of three others from another section two were killed and one wounded.

Dewey Kruckeberg, son of Henry W. Kruckeberg of Los Angeles, Cal., our correspondent in that city, returning from "over there," passed through the East last week on his way to Camp Kearney, San Diego, where his squadron, the 217th Aero, was to be disbanded. This was the first fully drilled and equipped squadron ready for immediate action, to go abroad.

Paul Kaffke, one of the florists when there were only a few in Philadelphia, Pa., formerly with J. J. Habermehl's Sons, and Pennock Bros., has an 18 year old son, Caspar P. T. Kaffke, who enlisted in the Army when war was declared. This son first saw service overseas with the 30th Engineers, organized at the University, Washington, D. C., then the 1st Gas Regiment. He was wounded and gassed in October, and is now in a hospital in France.

Paul F. Viguier, formerly linotype operator on THE EXCHANGE and now attached to Headquarters, 6th Ammunition Train, A. E. F., France, writes under date of Nov. 17 that he has covered some of the battle ground; also that the building in which he is quartered resembles a Swiss cheese, the floor being littered with brick and plaster. Herbert Byitte, also formerly on THE EXCHANGE composing room staff, sends a Christmas card from France dated Nov. 23. He is at Base Hospital No. 15. He adds that he hopes to be home soon.

Lieut. R. B. Hutchcraft

We regret to learn of the death of Lieut. R. B. Hutchcraft, of Paris, Ky., son of R. B. Hutchcraft, well known dealer in Bluegrass and other field seeds. Lieut. Hutchcraft was killed in France on Nov. 6, but news of his death was not received in Paris until the past week.

Lieut. Hutchcraft entered the officers' training school at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, shortly after the war started. He received a commission as second lieutenant, and was later promoted for bravery on the field of battle, with the Junior Infantry of the Rainbow Division. He was a member of the Paris, Ky., bar, a graduate of Harvard law school, and of Transylvania University, and served two terms as representative of the State Legislature, from Bourbon County. He was also a member of the State Tax Commission. He was prominent in the Masonic order.

Floral Bedding at Camp Upton

The accompanying illustrations show bedding designs worked out by Private Joseph Rosenthal, at the Base Hospital at Camp Upton, N. Y. The designs called forth much favorable comment in the newspapers and have been much admired by the thousands of visitors to the camp. Some of the medical officers and officials from Washington told Private Rosenthal that the medical insignia and medal of honor are the first attempts at planting of this kind.

In the medical insignia or caduceus the principal plants used are: Santolina incana, for the wings at the end of the staff, the outer edge of the wings being composed of Golden Bedder Coleus and orange and green colored Alternanthera for the serpents. Two low, compact growing Celosias are utilized to represent the serpents heads; the central space between the serpents and the staff is filled out with Achyranthes.

The medal of honor is composed of Achyranthes, Abutilon Santolina, Coleus Sunshine, Echeveria secunda and dwarf Lobelia.

The excellent work done is particularly surprising in view of the difficulties that had to be overcome. The soil was acid and was filled with stumps and old roots. No plough was available, so that it was necessary to break the soil with pickaxes. Private Rosenthal writes: "I used the spoon of my mess kit instead of a trowel; only a small sprinkling can was available for watering large areas of ground." Soldier-gardener Rosenthal is a graduate of the Cornell Agricultural College, and assisted in the work of designing the "Million dollar garden" of the Samuel Untermyer estate. It may be mentioned incidentally that Mr. Untermyer furnished most of the plants used in the bedding designs illustrated herewith.

MICHIGAN BUSINESS SOLICITED

If you have an order for flowers to be delivered in another city, glance through this directory first; if you find an advertiser, properly located, you can rely on him.

The meeting of growers, retailers and wholesalers in New York one night last week, could well be made the starting point for consideration of a greatly needed system of cooperation among these three bodies (each one with its own problems to solve, and perhaps it is not too much to say that the problems of today and the future will prove greater than any created through the war or existent preceding the war) which are absolutely interdependent one on the other, for that which affects one must necessarily affect the others.

There can be no dispute but that all three participants in this great industry are entitled to make a living, with some over, for the proverbial rainy day which rarely fails to pay one a visit, oftentimes one of severity, some time during his career.

In the premises then it can be safely laid down as a foundation base for a strong cooperative movement that an injury to one is an injury to all, and that, per contra, whatever happens of good for one must have its reflex for good on the others. All three are entitled to live, move and have their being on much closer lines of cooperation than is now visible on the surface.

Not so very many years ago competition was hailed as "the life of trade," and a humble suggestion that co-operation might be the better scheme was apt to be laughed to scorn.

After the life, vitality and resources of our railroad companies had been squeezed out of them through ill-considered interference on the part of the state and federal legislators, brought about through the muck raking crusade of ten or fifteen years ago—and at a time when it will be conceded that these same railroad companies were in most active competition one with another—the greatest evidence of cooperation on a gigantic scale was brought about by the very government which previously had been a contributing cause of the roads' gradually lessening earnings, through its taking control of all the systems, and substituting the most approved method of cooperation the country has ever witnessed, whereby, at one stroke, competition was eliminated, uniformity introduced, and the most drastic changes brought about, all with a view to a singleness of purpose and procedure which solved the problem of transportation and distribution, bringing about an immediate efficiency which never could have been attained under competitive bases.

The taking over of the railroads for the purposes required was perfectly proper under the circumstances of pressure of war. We are not in politics, nor are we arguing for Government control of any public utilities. We simply cite this case as the most startling transition on record from competition to cooperation to point out the moral that if, instead of pulling three or thirty different ways to accomplish that which is the common end of all, namely to make a success of their business, the grower, retailer and wholesaler would seek those common grounds of cooperation whereby they could all three pull together and in one direction, results would be shortly accomplished so superior to present day tactics that the business life of all three parties at interest would be ameliorated in the highest degree—unnecessary friction, that bugbear of business men, would be reduced to a minimum; the grower's life would be less strenuous for he would have a far clearer idea of trade wants; the retailer would know where he stood, and the wholesaler would escape much of the undeserved censure which now all too often is heaped on him.

As a first step toward the merging of the interests of all three branches of the industry, it was suggested that each of these appoint representative committees, that from these a joint committee would be appointed to convene, discuss and outline a policy of cooperation that would be beneficial to all subsidiary branches of the business the year around. Each representative committee having first secured all the information possible from its own division would then be in position to take up with the other divisions similarly equipped, the problems before them.

The New York meeting was called ostensibly to establish prices for the Christmas just passed, but at that meeting it did not seem possible to formulate prices in advance for this or any holiday of the year; it did not look like a practical scheme to get at it that way, nor would it be in accordance with the Sherman law. Further, although this meeting was characterized in the beginning by an apparent development of considerable antagonism, the opinion was ultimately expressed that quite some good had been accomplished and that while the principal object of the meeting did not materialize, considerable benefit had been accomplished and progress made in unexpected directions.

It was shown that there were possibilities of future cooperation as well as of standardization of many lines of the business hitherto in more or less conflict the year around. The following two suggestions were made, which are well enough so far as they go, but would have to be considerably threshed out before they could become operative:

(1) That the retailers keep prices more nearly uniform, by charging higher prices during the season when stock was plentiful; thus there would not be so great a jump in prices at holiday times and retailers could afford, if necessary, even to sell stock at a loss at holiday seasons.

(2) That retailers show themselves loyal to the legitimate commission men, supporting them in times when stock was plentiful, so that the wholesaler and grower would not have to charge excessively high prices when stock was scarce in order to compensate themselves for low prices obtained during glut periods.

We have in the past had many brilliant essays and papers on the advisability of the component branches of the business getting closer together, to date without much success.

The cause is not far to seek; we are all busy with our own affairs every minute of the day, necessarily so. To ask any one man or several men to make a study of the situation, as it should be studied, is to request that man or those men to make sacrifices they can ill afford.

Quite obviously then it is up to the clubs and the National Society to provide the ways and means. It requires that one competent efficiency expert spend a year of his time in consultation with the bright men of the business and that the necessary funds be provided to carry him along—say $5000, perhaps $10,000. As this expert formulates his ideas these could be debated in club meetings—the debates ensuing would certainly furnish a topic for many a lively night, as well as supply the investigator with viewpoints which otherwise might escape him, and add to the cumulative value of his finished report. Expressing it another way, the discussions would tend to establish the practicability or otherwise of the expert's recommendations, and if he was a real scientist he would be quick to separate the wheat from the chaff.

Who, in club life, will give expression to this idea? We have spent $50,000 in the year 1918 for publicity, for flowers; one-fifth of that amount could well be subscribed for the purpose of putting our trade on a sure, financial footing, bettering the condition of every man in it and raising our industry to the plane to which by reason of its importance it is most assuredly entitled.

Must Flowers Have a Restricted Sale

During last Thanksgiving it was noted that in one of our largest cities practically no effort at all had been made by the retailers in the direction of making special sales for that occasion. In a paragraph in the retail department of THE EXCHANGE the following question was asked: "Is it that it was feared such advertising would offend the esthetic eyes of wealthy patrons?" This might have been followed up with a further question as to whether the cost of advertising in metropolitan dailies was a contributing factor, a problem which, by the way, has been met by retailers in some of the large centres through the adoption of a cooperative plan, whereby several combine in one ad; a method, apparently, which does not find favor everywhere.

An answer to the former question which, undoubtedly, would have been as true as any other, would have set forth that a large number of those retailers who were in a position to spread themselves for such an occasion as Thanksgiving Day, and from whom some such action was to be expected, were more concerned in making the most of the trade they already had, preferring to enlarge this by quieter methods, most of which are bound up in service to the customer whose recommendation is relied upon to bring more patrons to the store, than through any other source.

There are flower shops doing a class of trade which might suffer if too large a number of patrons were attracted by other means; their owners are among those who are in a logical position to advertise largely because they are the best equipped to back up the advertising in every way.

Then, from the standpoint of the particular retail stores we have in mind, the question arises as to whether this restricted class of trade is sufficient to make for a proper development of such stores to the advantage of the trade as a whole.

That some such effort for a larger volume of business seems advisable is best evidenced when we take into account the tremendous overhead expense of most of our great retail stores, for the more the sales are restricted the greater the necessity for selling at high prices.

The foregoing seems to lead up to the question as to whether our product, by virtue of its high appeal, is one which must necessarily confine itself in a large measure to a restricted sale.

In other words, is the selling of flowers to the masses, as enjoyed by other lines, a dream?

F.E.-Best Advertising Medium that question, nevertheless will sound out the public for us as no other method would.

That we have millions of flower lovers we know, but whether a large part of these millions can be made flower buyers is "something else again," as someone has said.

Most of us realize that wonderfully bright prospects would be in store for the trade if we could change the buying of flowers from what is generally regarded by the public as a luxury, into a habit. But are we setting the example? Most of us are not!

At a recent meeting of nearly two hundred florists, among whom were numbered some of our largest growers, wholesalers and retailers, there were two, possibly three, but not more, wearing flowers.

Now, these men, in their journey to the meeting place, traveled many miles, using steam trains, elevated roads, trolleys and subways, coming into contact with thousands of people, so it does not need any undue stretch of imagination to realize that these men, to whom the welfare of the trade means much, had the opportunity of supporting the present national advertising campaign in no small way, by wearing a boutonnière that evening.

In connection with the S. A. F. & O. H. advertising campaign, it would seem that after a florist has subscribed to the same, as a good business man, he should be determined to turn his contribution into a profitable investment, for he must realize that the page ads in the national magazines are particularly planned to put the public into a receptive flower buying mood; the creating of a national demand being the big purpose behind the aforesaid advertising campaign. To what extent that national demand is going to be converted into local sales is a matter that will be governed entirely by the individual effort of each and every florist. And, mark you, on that same effort also largely depends the success of the present countrywide flower publicity.

Then, that other big business builder for the retailer—the telegraphic idea. Have it in mind all the time. Its growth has been wonderful, but the future holds much more, for unless all signs fail it is going to be one of the greatest outlets for sales. Even at this early stage some of our largest retailers report the volume of telegraph, telephone and mail orders as exceeding their local business. Think of it! Was there ever a greater asset given any industry? What are you, Mr. Retailer, doing to spread the gospel of the telegraphic idea? Every retailer should be a disciple, for his contact with the public stamps him as the man to do the preaching.

Gifts of Flowers Handled by Committees

Editor Florists' Exchange:

Your editorial on page 948 issue of Dec. 14 concerning Flowers vs. Diamonds, or Merchandise Gifts, is one which I think should be discussed at every florist club meeting in the country.

The giving away of flowers to church fairs by retailers should be stopped and put on a business basis. Why should a retail florist be picked out exclusively as a dispenser of his products for charity any more than the jeweler, butcher, or grocer? Does he not have to pay for his goods also?

The trouble is, as you say, that flowers in the past have been held too cheaply and people are under the impression that they cost the retailer but little. The scarcity in flowers which the St. Louis florists have experienced the last month should prove a valuable lesson to them.

As the general public have now become used to paying high prices for flowers, they surely in future will be willing to pay a reasonable price, and it is now up to the grower and wholesaler to see that some method of handling the over-supply to prevent demoralization of the business is put into effect.

In the past flowers have been wholesaled either too cheap or too high in price. The growers themselves should take a hand. They have an organization. Let them discuss the cost of production and figure as nearly as possible what their flowers cost to produce; under no circumstances let them ever be sold under the cost of production. They could discuss the best means to get their flowers to market in the best of condition, and instruct their wholesalers the best way to take care of stock that is left over after the sales for the day are over. And if a grower thinks he can spare some of his flowers for the sick in the city charitable institutions let him so instruct the wholesaler and a receipt be given him showing the disposition of his stock.

Or, let the general public be informed, when they make a request for flower donations, that they must apply to the committee appointed by the growers themselves. This would relieve the retailer from having to give away gratuitously flowers which he pays for.

Preparedness

In times of peace prepare for war has now been changed to in times of war prepare for peace. The man who is putting his shoulder to the wheel a little more strenuously now than ever before will show wonderful results for his added energy. In all lines of industry, particularly our line, there are going to be wonderful readjustments after peace has been declared, and when the boys come marching home and everybody is in a receptive mood to cheer and entertain.

Flowers will play a great part in the program of events from now on.

Picture if you will the celebrations to follow. Who is to get this business? I don't know; but it's a safe bet that the fellow who has kept up his stock and let the public know at all times that he has flowers to sell will come in for his share of the business.

There is no better way to create the good will spirit that will stay put for all time than to talk flowers through the printed word, backed up by fresh flowers and punctual delivery. These three form a combination that will merit the business to which you will be justly entitled.

We are now in great days and florists will have their share. Just keep up the good work started and tie up to the national campaign. Follow its work and use it in your locality as far as you are able and then,—well, results will tell. Henry Penn,

Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

By W. Cleaver Harry — Ready for Delivery January 1st, 1918

TO those who have been looking for a practical textbook on the art of floral designing we offer the first one ever published on this subject. As trained help is scarce, every retailer who is now passing through difficulties in instructing new help can transfer this burden of instruction by providing his beginners with a copy of The Manual of Floral Designing.

This textbook has been compiled by an authority —one who has spent many years at the retailers' make-up table and who understands thoroughly the principles which underlie the art of arrangement.

Not in many years has the weather been so fine and mild and never so far as I know has the price list been so high; so, therefore, the prospects for the grower these holidays look very fine indeed. Roses are quoted from $2.50 upward per doz., and Carnations at the same price; Paperwhites $1 up; Lilies $5 per doz; Violets $1; Peas $1 per bunch, and any other stock that happens to come in sells at a corresponding scale. Even at the prices mentioned no orders are booked far in advance, for there are possibilities that even higher prices may prevail before Christmas; one of the only things we are sure of is a shortage of stock.

Funeral work is still brisk. Health conditions have improved and the ban on public gatherings has been lifted. Shipping trade is a problem; the question is how to make the available stock cover demands, price being apparently no longer a matter of interest to retailers in the larger cities. No doubt the present high prices will re-act to the disadvantage of the trade later on, but that is a chance we will have to take as at present there is no balance wheel to adjust the situation to conditions, and one cannot blame the grower for taking the opportunity to make up partly for the losses of last season.

Potted blooming plants are in medium supply and such plants as Cyclamen, Primroses, Poinsettias, etc., seem to offer sufficient attraction to buyers and divert somewhat criticism of the high price of cut flowers. These plants show a good fair value for the money, so the belief of customers in the good faith of the storekeeper is helped to a considerable degree. Holly and greens are too high in price to induce most florists here to bother with them, although baskets of Boxwood and Ruscus trimmed with red ribbon are quite abundant. Jackson's have a lot of artificial wreaths on display from $1.50 to $10, and Van Bochove a large collection of baskets prettily made up. Both lines seem to take well with the public. S. B.

St. Louis, Mo.

The Christmas market opened strong. Orders for Carnations and Roses are being daily received by wholesalers. Paperwhite Narcissus is wholesaling at $10 per 100. Stevia is running short which stiffens up the price of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. Artificial flowers are greatly in evidence and the counters of the wholesalers are filled with Ruscus red roping, Holly sprays, Poinsettias, Boxwood, prepared greens and ferns. Business in the artificial line will surely make a record for the season. The retailers have their windows filled with wreaths, baskets and numerous set pieces in artificial work. Carnations are $4 a doz. For Roses $3 to $10 is now demanded. There will be but little change for the holidays. The supply in Holly and Mistletoe will be limited. If bright weather continues the growers will market everything they can. Blooming plants will be pushed extensively by the retailers who will endeavor in this way to relieve the cut flower shortage. There will certainly be a limited supply in Violets and Sweet Peas, but it is hoped an increased one in bulbous stock. If the mild weather continues wholesalers and retailers will not have such a hard time making deliveries. The biggest Christmas business in years is expected.

Violets owing to the bright sunshine have increased in supply and are quoted at $1 to $2 per 100; Sweet Peas $3.

Trade Topics

Francis Gorly went to Chicago to look over the market and see what extra supplies he could get for his Christmas trade.

Mullanphy, florists, both stores, were taxed to the limit with local shipping and funeral orders.

Martin Seeger was buying in the wholesale district all week getting everything he could lay his hands on.

Alex. Laurie, horticulturist at Shaw Gardens, has gone on a vacation East to be absent till after the New Year.

Oscar Ruff is again at his post recovered from the influenza. W.

The Market

Dec. 24.—On Tuesday, the day before Christmas, up to 6 o'clock in the evening the characteristic features of the wholesale cut flower market were an above medium supply of some kinds of stock, and a medium to small supply of the rest. In no case, perhaps, was the supply as large as in previous years at Christmas time. The demand for most flowers was medium to large, but in several cases small. The prices in general were higher than they have ever been at Christmas in previous years. In our Christmas letter next week we hope to cover, as regards sales and prices, the time from 6 p.m. Tuesday until the close of business Christmas Day and also the sales of plants and flowers at the retail florists' stores.

Am. Beauty Roses were in medium supply. The demand was active. Special grade blooms sold at from 50c. to $1.50 each, and the other grades at corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses were in medium supply; the demand was large. No. 3 grade blooms sold at 4c. to 6c. each. No. 2 grade blooms went at from 10c. to 15c. each, and special grade at 20c. to $1 each according to variety.

Carnations were in medium or a little larger than medium supply. The demand from morning till six in the evening was small. The price of select reds and Wards was 15c. to 20c. each; for select pinks, other than Wards, 12c. to 15c.; for select whites 8c. to 12c., and for culls and splits 5c. to 8c., according to color. At 6 p. m. many thousands of Carnations were unsold and the outlook for sales was not at all cheerful, for the demand seemed to have stopped. Buyers were complaining much of the high prices, and a decline in prices seemed inevitable, and it looked as if even with lower prices coming so late the unsold surplus would be large.

Cattleya orchids were in above medium supply and moved slowly at about 25c. to 40c. for inferior to medium grade and 60c. to 75c. for select grade blooms. At 6 p.m. appearances indicated that the unsold surplus might be large. Gardenias were in moderate supply and moved rather slowly at $1 to $10 per doz. Lily of the Valley was in short supply. The demand was medium at $8 to $10 per 100 for the best grade blooms. White Lilies were in medium and pink in rather short supply; the demand was moderate at from 15c. to 20 each for white, and 8c. for pink on short stems, and 12c. on long stems.

Sweet Peas were in medium supply and sold freely at from $3 to $6 per 100 for medium to select grade blooms. Antirrhinum was in small supply and sold well at from $1 to $3 per bunch. There was a moderate supply of Calendulas, which met with a fair demand at from 75c. to $1.50 per doz. Poinsettias were in perhaps a little more than medium supply; blooms of really high quality sold well at from $4 to $6 and in a very few cases $9 per doz., but those of inferior quality had no call.

Mignonette was in small supply, and met with fair demand at from 75c. to $2.50 per doz. sprays. There was a small supply of Wallflowers, which realized from 50c. to $1 per bunch. Stevia was perhaps the only flower really in abundance; the demand for it was moderately large, at from three to five bunches for $1. Bouvardia was in short supply and sold well at from 50c. to $1.50 per bunch. There were only a few yellow Daisies, which met with little call, at $3 to $5 per 100. There were few Callas and they had a fair demand, at from $2 to $3 per doz. Of Paperwhite and Soleil d'Or Narcissi there were also a few in the market; the former sold for 75c. to $1.25 per doz. sprays, the latter at $1.50 to $2. Violets were in medium to short supply. The quality of many was quite inferior. The demand for really good Violets was fair, doubles selling at from $2 to $3 per 100, Gov. Herrick at $1 to $2 and the Princess of Wales and La France at $2.50 to $3. Buyers complained of the prices and at 6 p.m. it looked as if the surplus would be considerable. There were moderate arrivals of Pansies, which met with a small demand at $2 to $3 per 100.

The demand for hardy greens was abnormally large; the general supply however, was medium to short and prices were higher than in previous years at Christmas. Further details as to the supply and prices for these and berried shrubs may be given in our Christmas letter next week. Indoor greens were in moderate supply and moved well at quoted prices.

The rain which began Tuesday just before noon, and continued until Christmas morning, undoubtedly curtailed to a considerable extent the sale of cut flowers.

Secretary Young's Birthday

On Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 17, a little party of gentlemen made their way to Rooms 902 and 903 of the building at 1170 Broadway, bearing an immense cake, which, after they had lighted the 50 candles on it, they presented to Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F. and O. H., and the New York Florists' Club, congratulating him on having lived a half century, for this was Mr. Young's fiftieth birthday anniversary. The genial secretary appreciated this kind remembrance of himself, shown both by the presence of his welcome visitors and the cake; so much so that he gave them a few bars of "Hail, hail, the gang's all here." In this party of visitors were Charles H. Totty, Philip F. Kessler, Frank H. Traendly, J. K. Allen, Frederick R. Newbold, J. H. Pepper and A. F. Faulkner.

The first Freesia blooms of the season arriving in the cut flower market were seen at E. C. Horan's, 55 W. 28th st., on Christmas Day. These were from the growing establishment of Joseph Riede of Middle Village, L. I.

At the coming of the Christmas holidays this year cut flower and plant growers, and wholesale and retail florists were obliged to face unusual conditions. Some remarks on these conditions will appear in our Christmas letter next week.

John H. Pepper has accepted the secretaryship of the American Dahlia Society, to take effect on Jan. 1, 1919, J. R. Lewis having resigned.

Alex. Lurie, horticulturist, Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, was a visitor in New York this week.

Christmas Market

Dec. 24.—Since Dec. 17 there has been a continual rise in prices each day until yesterday, Monday, Dec. 23, when prices dropped somewhat. During the early part of the week there was a marked scarcity of all kinds of flowers, which continued up to Saturday night. On Monday there was a liberal supply, with fewer buyers; consequently there was plenty of flowers left in the ice chests. The day before Christmas brought a decided drop in the market.

At no Christmas to be remembered were such high prices paid for flowers, which caused considerable dissatisfaction among wholesalers and retailers. This may curtail the buying of flowers somewhat but the writer cannot see why there should be so much talk about high prices. Is there any other commodity that one can buy at prices the same as before the war? The grower ought to get something for his work and worry.

The supply of American Beauty Roses is not large but there are some attractive blooms reaching the markets. Special blooms in small lots have sold as high as $2 apiece and the price asked per 100 was $200. This is possibly the highest price for Roses recorded in this market. Other grades of this variety have been selling from 20c. to $1 each. There is a fairly liberal supply of hybrid tea Roses. Prices were higher last week than they are now. Hadley sold, for special blooms, as high as $65 per 100. Other Roses brought from 10c. to 25c. each. Prices were slightly lower on Tuesday, Dec. 24.

Carnations, on Friday and Saturday, sold for from 12c. to 15c., with special fancy blooms at higher prices. On Monday there was a plentiful supply and prices dropped to 10c. to 12c. On Tuesday prices went down to 6c. to 10c.

There is a good supply of Cattleya orchids at 50c. to $1 each; also a fairly good supply of Cypripediums. Lilies are plentiful and are going rather slowly at 16c. to 20c.

The supply of cut Poinsettias is not as large as usual and prices are from $5 to $7 per doz. A moderate supply of Sweet Peas with short stems is bringing $3 per 100. A few 'Mums are offered at $4 per doz. Lily of the Valley is $10 to $12 per 100. Pansies of a good strain are fetching $3 per 100. There is very little Snapdragon. Callas are in medium supply at $3 per doz. Some small lots of Calendulas are also offered. Stevia is abundant.

The demand for plants has been exceptionally large this season and all kinds of Christmas goods sold unusually well.

Club Election

The monthly meeting of the club was held at Horticultural Hall, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 17. The attendance was good, election of officers for 1919 being scheduled. The secretary read most interesting letters from members in the A. E. F. in France. He also reported the death of Andrew Morrison, a member of the club, and W. N. Craig, D. Finlayson and Fred Coles were appointed to prepare suitable resolutions at the next meeting. It was voted to have a ladies night in January and a victory dinner in Horticultural Hall early in February.

The following officers were elected: President, A. K. Rogers; vice-president, C. H. Sweetzer; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, S. J. Goddard. Executive committee: James Methven, James Wheeler, H. H. Bartsch, Wm. H. Judd and Walter H. Colby.

Christmas Plants

Herman H. Bartsch, manager of the William W. Edgar Co., Waverley, gave a highly interesting and instructive talk on Christmas plants. He placed Azaleas at the head of the list, and Mme. Petrich he considered one of the best. He thought the Cyclamen was easily second and one of the best house plants and said that there were never enough of them grown. Begonias came third and more money was made out of these than from any other plant. He considered B. Melior the best variety, followed by B. Cincinnati. Poinsettia was the next in order but was rather difficult to handle. The Ardisia was in his opinion by far the best berried plant. He stated that it took four years to grow a large plant. Oranges, when well done, always found a ready sale. Heaths were excellent as plants and gave satisfaction. For a cheap plant Chinese Primroses, when of good color, filled the bill. Peppers and Jerusalem Cherries were desirable as cheap berried plants. Camelias, he said, would never be popular; they were not satisfactory to the grower nor to the buyer, as they dropped their buds too easily. Crotons, ferns, palms and Dracænas were the most popular foliage plants. He regretted that there was no good yellow flowered plant for Christmas.

Henry Penn spoke on "Plants for the retail stores at Christmas." He urged every florist to practice optimism, saying that the florists had gone through one of the most difficult periods in the history of the business and that they had come out with credit. He emphasized the fact that it was much better to sell a large number of plants at a moderate price than a few plants at a big figure. He emphasized the desirability of catering to all classes of customers. He said that last year in three days they had sold, at their store, at Christmas 2368 plants, requiring 68 boys and 24 automobiles to deliver. The average cost for delivery and handling each plant was 28¾c. The average selling price for all the plants handled was $4. He considered Cyclamen one of the best plants for the retailer. Poinsettias were good but tender and hard to handle. The Begonias now being grown were exceptionally good plants and were giving more satisfaction now than formerly.

The awards for exhibits were as follows: L. D. Towle of Newton, W. H. Colby, H. A. Stevens, Dedham, Janten & Wollrath and the W. W. Edgar Co.

General News

The Mann Co. has at its stall in the Boston Flower Exchange long sprays of Buddleia Asiatica, which is something of a novelty and sells well.

The pot business at A. H. Hews & Co., Inc., North Cambridge, is improving, there having been noticeable increase in the sales of pots in the last two months. The labor question with this firm has been a serious one during the last year, but help is much more plentiful again and the outlook for business is much brighter.

Mr. Manter, at the Boston Flower Exchange, has been handling Norway Spruce branches loaded with long cones. One could hardly wish for a more decorative evergreen than this and it has sold well.

S. J. Goddard of Framingham had a heavy Christmas demand as usual, for Laddie and Seedling No. 119 has proved a favorite pink.

Practically all the seed stores are handling Christmas plants. At R. & J. Farquhar & Co., they have a large display and numerous customers. The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. also has a fine display.

H. W. Vose, Hyde Park, is offering excellent Godfrey 'Mums.

The next meeting of the Horticultural Club of Boston is to be held on Wednesday evening, Jan. 8, instead of Wednesday, Jan. 1.

The Dolansky-McDonald Co., at 256 Devonshire st., are headquarters for orchids; they handle the whole product from the greenhouses of Frank J. Dolansky of Lynn. His orchid houses are said to be the largest in New England.

The wholesale stores have been so busy with shipping business that they had to work all Sunday. The sales for artificial flowers and all kinds of Christmas supplies have been extremely large this season.

Thomas J. Galvin has had attractive ads. in the Sunday newspapers. His store windows have been made especially pleasing with immense pans of Poinsettias and other Christmas plants.

Penn's store never was brighter. Plants by the thousands, of all kinds, are shown.

Christmas Market

Dec. 23.—At this writing the Christmas rush in the wholesale market is well on. The demand is considerably in advance of the supply and prices remain about the same as last report. Some of the wholesalers have not accepted any new business for several days believing that it would be all they could do to fill orders booked in advance.

Orders that have been booked recently were taken on conditions only that they would be handled as best they could under existing conditions. Out of the city buyers have been here in force for the past week personally to inspect conditions and many of them have conformed their requirements to prevailing circumstances by considerably reducing their orders. This has enabled the wholesalers to make a better distribution of all available stock among preferred buyers. Occasional buyers, those who are slow payers and bargain hunters get no consideration whatever.

It was said a week ago that, owing to the high prices that prevailed all through December, Christmas trade this season would be free from stock cut in advance and held by the growers for several days, to be thrown on the market at a time when maximum prices would be in force. This is the so called "pickled stock." It is unfortunate that these predictions failed to come true, although it has been said that the grower who held stock back should be examined for sanity. Prominent growers have held their stock for several days when it was marketable at prices never attained before and consigned it to the commission men as early as Saturday, Dec. 21, in such a condition as to be practically unfit for shipping purposes, when these same commission men were relying on this stock for Saturday's shipment to their long distance trade.

This is inexcusable, more so this season that ever; it is a disappointment to the wholesaler and must eventually be a loss to the grower. The Chicago market is called on daily to furnish stock from as far distant as Winnipeg on the North, to San Antonio on the South, within a lesser radius East and West, where a time limit of 48 hours is frequently involved. Only very tight stock in Roses will reach these points in a salable condition. Local buyers know these conditions well and when open stock is seen on display they will not pay over 50 per cent. of the price of shipping stock. Growers who held their stock this year will be losers for so doing. Conditions have altered since the pickling habit was profitable.

The supply of Roses, while inadequate is the largest item of stock on the market. Short and medium grades are in strong demand. Retailers who can use fancy and special stock can be more easily supplied than buyers of short stock. Prices up to this writing remain high; short stock bringing not less than $10 per 100 and then up to $35 for ordinary commercial varieties. In the case of fancy Russells and Columbia the price ranges as high as $75 per 100. Hoosier Beauty and Milady in fancy stock runs as high as $50 per 100. It is highly probable that there will be a break in prices before the Christmas market is closed, since that much pickled stock will have to be moved at considerably reduced prices.

Carnations so far are not in large supply; shipping orders that went out Saturday and Monday were only partially filled. Splits have been bringing $10 per 100, with about $15 an average price for all medium stock. Some fancy grades in red have sold as high as from $18 to $25 per 100.

Orchids and Lilies are scarce; in fact there is nothing in large supply. Poinsettias next to Carnations and Roses rank third in point of supply and are selling at from $3 to $6 per doz. Paperwhites and yellow Narcissi are bringing the highest prices ever reached on the market. Valley has advanced to $8 and $10 per 100. All green stock has slightly advanced. Fancy ferns are selling at a standard price of $5 per 1000.

All blooming plants for Christmas trade were sold by the growers or reserved for steady customers more than a month ago, so that late buyers found it impossible to secure any of this stock whatever. Holly was never so scarce; houses that bought it in 50 case lots and made it into wreaths are not handling it this year, knowing it would be unprofit-

Every flower shop in town is head over heels (Dec. 20) in work preparing for a better than ever Christmas. Owing to the scarcity of cut flowers the retail men are making up Christmas baskets of evergreens, cones, Boxwood and Ruscus that will retail for $1 to $5 each. For such articles there should be no trouble in finding ready sale. Carnations are $2 and $3 per doz.. Roses $4 to $12, American Beauty Roses $12 to $24. Every store has a grand window display sure to catch the Christmas shoppers. Supply men have done a good business as many of the retail men have run short of one thing or other and have called on the supply houses to get the goods at once. Boxwood was one of the scarce greens. The man who waited until the last minute to order had to pay more for it. Boxwood at first was offered for $18 a 100 lbs, but went up to $20, $25, $30 and $37.50 at the end, f. o. b. Eastern points.

Ben Boldt is supplying the trade with cut Heather from the coast. The McCallum Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., introduced their new Red Magnolia leaf which was a ready seller when made up in wreaths.

Timely Hints on Gardening

At the regular meeting of the Denver Society of Ornamental Horticulture in December, a paper on "Timely Hints on Gardening" included the following items:

Trees: Pruning of soft Maple and Boxelder trees is better postponed until Spring on account of sapflow. Pruning out of dead wood and broken branches can be done at any time, but trees which are subject to Winter damage are better pruned in the Spring than now.

Shrubs: Shearing of shrubs to a globe form usually is not attractive, besides a great many flowerbuds are cut off in the process.

Perennials: In dry weather without frost, perennials may need a light watering during the middle of the day. Do not water late in the afternoon or evening.

Tritomas need a heavy cover.

Hybrid Roses are best covered with four to six inches of soil around the crown of the plant and a light cover of straw or leaves on top of this. Remove part of the long shoots. The plants are easier covered. Spring pruning will take them off anyway. This is a good time to fertilize perennial beds. During the winter manure will act as a protecting mulch for the plants. It may be spaded in early Spring. Evergreens need irrigation in open dry Winters. On account of the character of the leaves, the trees keep up some circulation of sap, even in Winter. A great deal of frost damage on all plants is caused by drouth.

House of late Carnations at Chas. F. Mater's, Denver, Col.

Bulbs: Beds of Dutch bulbs must be well covered now and kept covered until Spring. Keep Dahlia bulbs away from frost as well as from hot furnaces. The sand in which they are placed should be neither moist nor powder dry.

Walnuts: Remember that the Government is urging the planting of Black Walnuts. They are hardy in Denver. Plant some nuts now while the ground is still open and watch them grow next Summer:

Oaks: Denver needs a larger variety of trees; why not plant some trees next Spring that are worth while. Red Oak, Pin Oak, Burr Oak, all do well after they are established. They are hard to transplant, but are not as slow growing as one may think, once the roots are established.

Lindens, Hackberries, Alders, Birches, etc., are hardy in our climate.

Cuttings of many trees and shrubs may be made now. Make them 6in. to 12in. long, according to the distance, the buds are apart. Bury in moist sand, cool but frost free, and plant early in Spring. Cuttings may be taken of Willows, Poplars, Spiræas, Elders, Honeysuckles, Dogwood, Currants, etc.

Nursery stock: Now is the time to study your order for next Spring. Place your order early and you will be protected against late delivery. Stock that has to be shipped in should be ordered in January.

Secretary S. R. DeBoer is eager for suggestions toward the well being of our society. Now that the war is over and the flu disappearing we may do many things to encourage the reconstruction work of the nation, specially the West.

As soon as conditions improve G. Klaiber, city forester, will give a field demonstration in pruning trees. C. F. E.

Cleveland, O.

The chief topic of conversation in trade circles is the unprecedented mildness of the weather. Business is being done with open doors and shipments are being made without wrapping. A year ago at this time there was snow on the ground and the thermometer stood at zero. The warm, murky atmosphere is having a deleterious effect on Christmas stock. Roses, Carnations and Violets will lack that desired crispness which is the product of a much lower temperature.

The writer believes that holiday trade will be heavy. The supply of cut flowers, which is almost up to normal, will be inadequate; indeed some wholesalers are already booked for everything available. Prices are firm and will doubtless continue so for some time. Plantsmen report their stocks completely exhausted. Express service is reasonably good for this time of the year.

Business for the week ending Dec. 21 was unusually heavy, the increased demand for accessories and supplies serving substantially to offset the scarcity of cut stock. Carnations brought 10c., Roses 10c. to 40c.; Poinsettias, $2 to $6 per doz.; Stevia $3 per 100; Violets $2 per 100. Christmas greens were in weaker supply than ever before and fell far below the demand, at advanced prices.

The extreme scarcity of trained help is being noticeably alleviated by the arrival home from the army of occasional trade members. Many florists who discontinued business within the past year are also helping out during the holiday rush and their valuable services are much appreciated.

Club Meeting

The next meeting of the Florists' club will be held at the rooms in the Hollenden Jan. 6, 1919, at 8 p.m.

S. N. Pentecost, retired florist, has departed for Florida, going in his automobile. Mrs. Pentecost accompanied him.

J. Salmon & Son, of Akron, O., have discontinued business after 30 years of signal prosperity.

Robert Greenland, representing the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia and New York, called on the wholesale trade Dec. 20, showing an excellent grade of golden tipped Retinispora.

Adam Graham and wife have taken up their residence at their Winter home in the Isle of Pines.

Practically every florist in this vicinity has his ground Fall plowed, which not only shows how mild the weather is, but will produce better crops next year.

The supply of Roses for Christmas is very short. Those that are coming into the market are bringing stiff prices. Carnations have become more plentiful than for several weeks, but still there is not enough of them to go around. Poinsettias are in good supply and have an excellent market. Easter Lilies and Callas clean up readily. Stevia is fairly plentiful and meets with a demand that takes up all the receipts as fast as they come into the market. Paperwhite Narcissi in limited supply are available. They clean up quickly. Violets, Lily of the Valley and orchids are meeting with a big demand. Snapdragon sells up as fast as it comes. Other offerings include Calendula, Sweet Peas, Forgetmenots and Baby Primrose. Plants of all kinds, both blooming and decorative are meeting with a good demand. Artificial stock and supplies are selling well.

Trade Jottings

J. A. Peterson & Sons have disposed of every plant in Begonia and Cyclamen that they had grown for Christmas. All the stock was of the highest quality.

Will Stein has returned from the Army and is back with the William Murphy Company.

C. E. Critchell had an excellent lot of Carnations for Christmas.

Recent visitors were J. T. Hudegan, Amora, Ind.; Karl Heiser, Dayton, O.; Geo. Moores, Wilmington, O.; Jos. R. Goldman, Middletown, O.; and G. A. Beckman, Middletown, O.

TEDDY.

WAUWATOSA, WIS. — Alex. Klokner has discontinued his seed trade business and the landscape gardening in connection therewith. His two sons, at last account, were still in France.

Save Coal on Greenhouse Boilers

May we send you on a month's trial, prepaid, a Coggeshall Air Tube Cleaner to clean your boiler tubes? It creates its own air pressure with the use of low pressure steam.

Specially Adapted for Greenhouse Boilers

It cleans your boiler perfectly in four minutes, while running. It does away with the hand method. It saves its cost before the trial is ended. It can be returned, express collect, if you do not find it to your interest to purchase the cleaner. It lasts a lifetime. There are thousands in use. The price is $12.00.

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can. You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and, above all, a time saver. Equally adapted for heating private residences. Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.

You can see the heater working successfully any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain it to you.

YOUR EARNINGS DEPEND UPON YOUR EFFICIENCY

Bailey's New Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture

Beautifully Illustrated
Contents
Right Up-To-Date

WILL INCREASE THE EFFICIENCY OF ALL WHO STUDY IT.

BAILEY'S Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture should be close at hand for quick reference by every member of your force, because it presents the combined labor and experience of the foremost North American authorities on horticultural subjects. These six magnificent volumes place at the disposal of the horticulturist, whether practical, amateur or scientific, an ample and readily accessible account of every subject which at any time may be of interest or practical use in his calling. Its range is wide, covering plants, flowers, vegetables, trees, tillage processes, tools and implements, cultural discussions, botanical history, geography, commercial markets, and a myriad items that only constant use will reveal. Every subject in the scope of this great work, in any way incident to the activities of the horticulturist has been fully covered, commercially as well as scientifically.

Six large quarto volumes. More than 3,600 pages. 24 full page exquisite color plates. 96 beautiful full page halftones. More than 4,000 text engravings. 500 Collaborators. Approximately 4,000 genera, 15,000 species, 40,000 plant names. Delivery prepaid, $35.00 the Set, cash.

"The immense wealth of practical horticultural facts and teaching contained in this work, and the ease with which they are found in it, place Bailey's STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE at the top. In other words, it is the Monarch of Horticultural Literature."

able. It has sold at from $8 to $10 per case. Some stock was offered Saturday by the commission men on South Water st. at $6.50 per case, but the quality was poor. There seems to be enough of Mistletoe but this has never been a great factor in this market. At this writing the market has nearly two days of Christmas trading ahead of it and the final details will have to be left for another week.

Willing to Pay the Price.

The writer was into the Briggs Flower Shop on Sheridan rd. Friday when a prosperous looking citizen walked in and asked the price of Holly. The salesman said $1 a lb. The customer asked for three pounds, which was wrapped in a small package that he carried under his arm. This is proof that some purchasers at least do not object to high prices.

A. Lange has a display of Ardisia crenulata among his Christmas plants. In former years this was a favorite plant for holiday sales but has been seen little of late.

The Fleischmann Floral Co. on Jackson blvd. had a full page ad. in the Chicago Daily Tribune advertising Christmas flowers, corsage bouquets and baskets of plants, as well as pot grown blooming plants. As a full page in the Tribune cost $600 their venture would appear to be an unusual stroke of enterprise under present market conditions.

Mrs. F. Ostermann is continuing the plant and seed store at 2833 Milwaukee ave., since the death of her husband last Spring.

T. E. Waters, chairman of the Victory Banquet Committee of the Chicago Florists' Club, is working on arrangements for the banquet to be held on Jan. 9, in the "Bluebird Room" of the Randolph Hotel. The club members are asked to bring their lady friends, as there will be dancing after the banquet. Tickets will be $1.50 per plate.

Geo. Wienhoeber, at his store on Wabash ave. and Monroe st., has a handsome display of Erica melanthera, California grown stock, in his window. It is distinctively a Heather window. The plants are among the largest ever attained by this variety. The plants are all set in handsomely decorated containers and the flowers are a pale pink, almost white, with black anthers. The window is highly admired.

O. F. Larson, who has a flower store on 63d st. near Ashland ave., and who has been in poor health for some time, has recovered completely.

The display of the retail stores this Christmas is far different from their customary holiday displays. The high price of all cut flowers and the scarcity of blooming plants prevented elaborate displays; nevertheless the stores present a bright and attractive appearance. Japanese frieze roping, red frieze wreaths, with decorations of artificial foliage and flowers, large velvet Poinsettias and red Ruscus were principally used in the holiday displays in many of the retailer's windows.

Artificial flowers were never in better demand than at present. Many of the small retailers in localities with foreign population have stocked up with artificial stock, as their trade will not pay the prevailing prices asked for natural flowers. Conditions have brought about a queer change. Florists who tried to put a ban on artificial stock some years ago are now profiting by its use. One wholesale florist firm which recently went into business is advertising "finest lines of artificial flowers" ever shown on the Chicago market. It is not new for supply men to carry artificial stock, but it is for the wholesale florists to do so.

Philadelphia

Dec. 24.—The day before Christmas finds the market practically swept clean of all cut flowers. The demand exceeds the supply by fully 50 per cent. Prices are ruling higher than last week. Am. Beauty Roses have advanced to $15 and $18 per doz. on the specials. Special Hadley and Russells touch 75c. each; top grade of Columbia $7.50 per doz. Richmonds are ranging about 50c. for the finest. Other Roses grade from 10c. up to 25c. Red Carnations are touching top figures at 20c. with some inferior stock at 15c. and 18c, and white and pink at 12c. to 15c. Gardenias are bringing from 50c. to 75c.; Cattleya orchids 60c. to $1. Easter Lilies and Callas are quoted at 25c; Poinsettias in very limited supply at 50c., with some specials at 75c. Sweet Peas bring $2 and $3 per 100. Violets are going strong at $2.50 per 100; Mignonette 6c. to 8c. Snapdragon is in very limited supply at $2 to $3 per doz. Calendulas is from 6c. to 8c. A few Paperwhite Narcissi are 5c. to 6c. Stevia is being sold for 35c. to 50c. per bunch.

The condition of the market is such that it is not merely a question of price but one of getting half of one's requirements.

As previously stated Christmas greens are scarce and high in price; at this writing the situation shows no change. The demand for this kind of material is larger than ever before. The supply houses, except for a few items, are sold out of everything in the line of Christmas goods. Plants as previously reported, were all sold up three weeks ago. There is nothing left now but the final disposal of the stock by the retailer and from all appearances the retailers are getting all the business they are able to handle and in most instances more than they can satisfactorily take care of.

Airplane Mail Service Suspended

Postmaster Patten announces the suspension of the airplane mail service between New York, Cleveland and Chicago, until Jan. 2, so that the motors may be tried out and placed in serviceable condition.

Fragrant Wildflowers

A new angle in the fragrant wildflower situation has been developed in Science by a note from Dr. A. F. Blakeslee, who found two forms of garden Verbena, one of which was fragrant to him and one of which was not. Happening to call the attention of an assistant to the flowers, the latter reported the odorless one fragrant and the fragrant one without odor, so far as he was concerned. This led to further experiment with the result that out of a considerable number of people tested, some found one form fragrant and some the other. The subjects were tested blindfolded so that no color suggestion vitiated the results.

If this condition, says the American Botanist, is found to exist with regard to other flowers, we may have to have new tests to decide which flowers are fragrant and which are not. We have repeatedly suggested that all flowers may be fragrant to the insects that visit them. But here, at least, we have evidence that even fragrant flowers may be odorless to noses that can distinguish fragrance in other forms. It is likely that those who can smell at all would not disagree in the case of such strongly scented flowers as pink Azalea, Wild Crab, Wild Grape and Arbutus, but in flowers reputed to be only faintly fragrant, the question now arises, are they fragrant, or is our own nose at fault? Some such condition as this may account for the reported fragrance in many species commonly regarded as odorless.

An Idea or Two for Florists

You have a dollar,
I have a dollar
And we swap,
You have my dollar and I have yours
We are no better off.
But if you have an idea
And I have an idea and we swap,
We each have two instead of one.

You have a labor-saving idea,
We have a floricultural paper.
You send us your idea and
We publish it.
You're extending a helping hand
To some poor chap
Who may be up against it—
Stuck for want of your idea.

We'll pay you for your idea
And if other florists follow your
Example, you're going to get a lot
Of good ideas yourself.
The whole business of floriculture
Will have fewer thorns
And more Roses
And rises.

You're going through it
Just once
And we have an idea
That if you use your ideas
To help others in this world
You'll be happy in the next,
Which seems to us
Well worth considering

From Power House, with apologies for the substitutions.

NO MORE SOOT TROUBLES

Z-I-N-C-O WHAT IT IS

Soot destroyer is a harmless combination of chemicals. When this powder is spread lightly over a good hot fire the gas fumes resulting turn the soot into a light ash easily carried off by the draft, reaches places never touched by the operation of cleaning. It follows the draft and burns the soot thoroughly, prevents the discharge of large volumes of soot into the atmosphere, to cause complaints and become a criminal nuisance to yourself and your neighbors. It is very inexpensive to buy—simple and easy to use. The average cost per week is but a few cents. It is a fine flue saver as boiler surfaces are always exposed to the heating units. A clean boiler steams very easily and is a great labor saver. It does an A-1 job, without any effort on your part. All concerns by using this modern method. It is used on all required is a good fire. It is now burning soot in the types of boilers—all types of stokers—and all kinds of largest plants in 41 states. Join these up-to-the-minute fuel.

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

Soot Destroyer will put pep into your boilers—make them deliver. It will keep them young and make old boilers heat like new. It will reduce ash and dirt. It will increase your draft.

"Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?"

WHAT IT DOES

Z-I-N-C-O

It destroys the worst cases of soot and soot scale, increases the efficiency of your boilers with less fuel, does this work quickly—easily and cheaply. Does all this for a few cents per week—with no extras.

Note The makers of Z-I-N-C-O have agreed to supply us with a number of small packages of this unusual article. The quantity is limited. The price is $3.00. If you have soot troubles, order one at once.

Four of the 61'x 500' houses which we erected for the Duckham-Pierson Company, at Madison, N. J.

Some Forthcoming Facts About the Duckham-Pierson Venture

WE say "venture," because most of you so considered it.

With the war abroad, and the possibility of this country being drawn into it, most of you thought it was taking a long chance to build five big Iron Frame houses, each 61x500 feet.

Suppose they had waited. Two years' profits would have been lost; besides the greatly increased investment necessary because of high cost of materials and labor. These were the things these men carefully considered, and acted accordingly.

They had an abiding faith in our country and the war's outcome.

In some early ads. we are going to tell you some further facts about this venture, especially concerning the heating system, which for simplicity and economy has caused so much favorable comment.
